Simple but very effective direction finding setup is to use any spectrum analyzer and a special designed antenna. Place identical equiptment in three vehicles and move accordingly as the offender transmitts. The process is called triangulation. Has worked for years and is independant of modulation techniques. It even works with just a dead carrier.

Now the spectrum analyzer works well for spread spectrum frequency hoping methods as the display can be calibrated in 10s of MHz per division and can show up to about 500Mhz of spectrum at a given instance. So go ahead and feel that you can not be trracked or listened to. Just when the NSA taps your phone, and trust me it does not matter what you have, your located. Use any modern technology for long enough they will find you.

Actually the extra license test is simple enough that a 6th or even a 7th grade education could pass it. It is not all that detailed in the technical aspects. The math is quite simple. Anyone with good reading and comprehension skills and some reasonably adequate math skills whould have no problem passing the exam.

Actually Buzzy the CB band is not technically license free. What the FCC has done is by using equiptment you agree to the rules and regualtions that govern the service. In other words there is a blanket license. You physically do not have to send in an application and receive a piece of paper conveying an agreement. You are free to do one the CB band that which is within the rules and regualtions as perscribe in title 47 of the Code of Federal Regualtions part 95.

well well Buzzy. Do I detect a sense of hostility?

Sometimes I get a little lazy and let some typing errors get through.
Since I usually type as I am thinking of replies to this group, I often in haste do not use my spell checker or sometime just glancingly re-read my messages for gramatical and spelling errors. Sometimes late at night this escapes me. Will endeavor to be more carefull in the future Buzzy.

Hello Dear Buzzy:

I hope that you find this more readable. Still I have one question that you have yet to respond to. I still think you are quite misled in your beliefs and have a lacking of what a government can and can not do. See below for embedded comments.

I was wondering how the FCC knows of you equiptment that you may have in your possesion by a mere possesion of a license? For a gun I can understand that but not for radio equiptment.

Furthermore, how can the FCC take it away if you are using the equiptment within the rules and regulations? To me the only way is for to happen is for the Constitution to be overthrown. In that case we are no longer a Republic.

Radios would be a poor choice for dissemination of information. In an oppresive government the first thing to be supressed is public gathering and a control on the free flow of information. Transmitting over the air with a radio is liken to beacon to come and get me! Guns maybe a tol of anarchy,but I highly believe that CB radios are a tool. Maybe you have been watching to much tv?

From your posts, I would most likely be led to consider that you may own at least one if not more of each. Totally unregistered. It would not surprise me that the serial numbers on the guns are in a nonreadable state. The problem is that once in use it, the gun or the radio, is no longer out of sight. Use them often enough the government will find you.

To use the term DF equiptment in it general sense would be a poor choice of words. If mean some radio receiver with a semi-directional antenna on top, yes. Government agencies would not use such primative equiptment. There are better techniques and methods.

Actually the frequency spectrum between 27.500 to 28.000 is assign to the US military. Mostly used for MARS stations. Military Amatuer Radio Service. Might have heard a few talking on those frequencies. There had been a deployment of troops over the last month.

Hey the Libs tried, but it is awful hard to sell their line of bullshit. People want to hear conservative opinions and they had no way to hear them except obscure A.M. talk programs and recently Fox news on cable..... It seems you have forgotten about PMSNBC and CLinton News network on cable. It is not the conservatives fault that commies have no message that the people want to hear.

Just a wild post.

I have for sale a Connex 4800 DXL 10 meter mobile radio. It is in almost new condition with original box, manuals, accessories, etc.. I say "almost" becasue I used it as a base station for a few days just to see what it would do. Essentially, it's still brand new. The rest of the time I've had it, it's sat in the box on the shelf in my office. What it can do, is completely cover 12 meters through 10 meters, AM/FM/SSB, 25W on AM and 40+ on SSB. With both the course and fine clarifier controls, there's not a frequency between 10 and 12 it cannot reach. I bought it new 3 years ago from Left Coast Radio who also did the extended frequency mod, unlocked the clarifier, and peaked and tuned it. Other than Left Coast, no one has been inside this radio. I'm also throwing in the Galaxy service manual which covers all radios using the EPT-6900-10Z board, including the Connex 4800 DXL. $240 including shipping within the US. If you're interested, please email me at: dream@alumni.utexas.net.

Please remember that this radio can be operated only by hams on the ham bands. If you're not a ham, you can still use it to monitor until you get that amateur radio license!

Around 1992 I heard a classic spy numbers broadcast on the 11 meter "freeband". As I recall the freq was 27.430 USB. It consisted of a mechanical-sounding woman reading either 4 or 5 figure number groups in English, with very echoey and metallic-sounding audio.

The first classes of religious doctrine between Islam and Christian thinking came in about the 9th century. As Islam spread westward through Egypt. Prior to that, one of the the major religions in Egypt was the Coptic Christian Church. After Islamic converstionthe Coptic Church hardly existed.

Hey
The military can use what ever freq. it wants. When I was stationed in Kansas in 1980 while on maneuvers our VHF calling freq. fell right on the Junction city police department main freq. We didn't move. As far as MARS is concered they have designated freq. for what ever area they are in but most MARS operations i.e... nets are at the top of the 11 meter band 27.995.

Hey Keith,

While RCI (et al) has destroyed the CB market with poor quality radios, you can still find Cobra 2000s out there. While there were many great radios, the Cobra 2000 was probably the best quality CB ever produced.

You can also buy an "Interceptor 10K" antenna that blows away any CB omni antenna ever produced. You can find it here...

http://www.a1antennas.com/

While I agree with your radio statement, it certainly does not apply to antennas!

There are a lot of guys in the area here who have RCI 2980, 2990, 2995DX, Galaxy Melaka, Washington's, 2000's, etc...

I just bought a 2000 off of e-bay for $285.00. It was a VIRGIN 2000 with the wax still in the pots. It even has the better power supply than the later model 2000s. I bought it because i wanted to actually see the meters. To date I've been running a Uniden PC-76XL with Bill Good's high performance mod. The mobile worked great, but I wanted a base and you can't beat a 2000!

BTW, it is still just a 40 channel radio although I did get Bill Good's high performance mod for the 2000 and the "voice lock" tied together. All the switches and knobs do what they did out of the factory.

Also, I have no problem with Dave promoting business out here. It would be good to get some more good operators in the hobby.

MURS is getting REAL popular in Southern CA too!

I hate to admit it Dave, as screwy as your views are at times, you have a point above. It doesn't get mentioned much by the press, and at times by some of the pundits. The main thrust behind Islam is convert the non-believers or kill them, thus the violence directed throughout the past few centuries against Christians, Jews etc. Looks like the Crusades of the middle ages is about to repeat itself with much the same results.

There IS recourse. The credit card company doesn't care WHAT the product is, Only that the owner of the card never got the product. If the owner of the card contests the charges, they can get the money refunded. The seller would have to have some sort of proof that the item was in fact shipped, like shipping records, etc. If nothing was shipped, then there are no records, thus the charges can be reversed...

Transmitter and receiver alignment and unlocking the clarifier are simple procedures that can be done easily and quickly by any knowledgeable tech. Left Coast Radio, the dealer I bought the radio from did both. According to my testing, both bench and on the air, it was done properly. Ask around, and you'll find that these are simple and common procedures that won't "junque" the radio. Also, without the unlocked clarifier, you'd be stuck transmitting on just the .x50 frequencies such as 28.435, .445, .455, etc. with no way to reach anything in between. With the clarifier unlocked, you can transmit (and receive) continuously across the whole band.

Thanks for your interest.

The "deaths" in the name of "christ" were NOT Jesus Christ of Nazarath (the Carpenter), but a a false Jesus headed by the Harlot "church" of Rev. 17 ! Few years ago, some of us around here would run FM on .145. That lasted about a summer or two. Actually made a few FM contacts like that. I yakked with a guy in LA for a few minutes from my mobile. Another time from the 2510 I had in my apartment, I was able to hook up with a guy on Cape Cod. He came in so clear, I though he might have been local. I lost the QSL card I got from him for that contact...

I come back after a long holiday, and this subject is still being beaten to death? What does it take to make the point?

A ham can make or modify ANY amplifier to be used on legal H.F. ham bands, to the tune of one unit per year. The fact that the amplifier in question is illegal to manufacture and sell to the public at large, does not take away from the fact that once I get it, I can legally use it provided I modify it in accordance with FCC spectral specs, which for H.F. frequencies is -40 dbc.

The only radio I remember from Palomar was the "Skipper 73", which was a

My 2950 has a Sadelta ME-3 on it. So I ask again:
What does it offer over my 2950?

This Sadelta has a 100K pot for speed adjustment accessible from the outside. The original pot was a 50K. Range of adjustment BABY!!

I guess it depends on where you are. In my area, 2 meters today, is what CB was like 30 years ago. A little less formal then what the "stuffed shirts" would have it, but it's good clean fun, without the things that would make you turn off the radio while the kids were within earshot.

CB was fun too, but lately, there are just too many insecure knuckleheads on there, spoiling the fun for the rest of us, which is why most of the "old time" CBers moved up to 2 meters (And other bands).

This seems to be a common issue among some CBers, the loss of (relative) anonymity. Like the old saying: "If you have nothing to hide, you have nothing to fear", so with that in mind, I have to ask, what are you hiding?

Besides, you're not so anonymous as you would like to think. In my many years of CB'ing, I have been involved with many transmitter hunts, and in tracking down offensive people. It's not hard, even with simple tools. The FCC has direction finding equipment that could find you in minutes, should they desire to.

> Once you get a ham license, the FCC knows everything > about you. Bullcrap!

Really? The only thing the FCC knows is your name, address, date of birth, and class of license. That hardly qualifies as "everything about you".

You should stop being so paranoid. Unless of course, you have a good reason to be....

I agree. Besides, there comes a point where you exceed the capability of the people involved, and it's no longer any fun. Tracking a fast moving target is difficult to do with simple directional antennas, and "S" meters.

If the group of foxhunters is sufficiently skilled enough to tackle moving targets, then go for it.

Clever, but not very fair. Not everyone has the ability to travel over water, to "catch" the "fox", unless the boat docks periodically.

Really nothing. It'll do what a 2950'll do. The two radios represent two totally different philosophies, though. Your 2950 is like a 300Z and the Connex is like a 5.0 Mustang. The Connex is good old fashioned, analog meter, big shiny silver knob, bright red LED, skip shootin' fun! And they both get you down the road about the same. For those 10 meters operators who have a twinge of nostalgia for the good ol' days of radio, the Connex is it.

Welcome back Mister Kotter!!!!!
http://www.qsl.net/w5net/images/mypic.jpg

I was born in North Carolina in 1953. However, other than two years spent on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea near Istanbul Turkey, I lived in Sacramento California for much of my childhood. I enlisted into the Army in 1970 and spent a little over two years in Germany.

I returned to Europe in 1977 and found work as a sales representative with a consumer electronics marketing firm based in Basel, Switzerland. I later managed a German-owned computer store in Heidelberg.

During those ten years in Germany, I took a course in journalism and public affairs. I also took an electrician course, along with several sub-courses in communications fundamentals, logical troubleshooting, and electrical physics. I also developed an interest in photography.

In 1998, I returned to Europe to live in Vicenza Italy for a year. When I came back to the United States, I spent several months in Washington State near Seattle and then moved to my present home in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

I have almost twenty years experience with both Mac and PC computers. During that time, I have owned more than a dozen computers and a wide range of software and peripherals.

eBay will pull auctions for export radios if the auction is in CB category or if the text contains language which implies the radio "could" be used illegally. List them in Ham Transceivers or Other...No problem
"Got RF?"

Agreed. There are several auctions taking place right now...and like another poster said, one can always play with Yahoo as they have no intent on limiting their auctions as they rightfully claim they are in no position to interpret ill-written laws. I still like the "advertising idea".....many gadgets get sold even after they are pulled....it's no accident the entire page isn't pulled when Ebay removes an item...the sellers email is readily accessible.

I emailed him. I offered to email you as well concerning your dilemma but you refused and proceeded to air your laundry in front of the group.
Besides Dave, asking questions of anothers business is paramount to sheer hypocrisy when you refuse/are unable to answer questions posed concerning comments you uttered and are unable to 'confirm" any of them...this is why they are called "lies"..we can refer to them as "untruths" if you so prefer. If you are feeling particularly adept at communicating today, I am not the only one to have expressed an interest in your claim of how you tamed the Davemade and TS into legality mode for your use on the freeband. The "majority" of the posts seem to disagree with your statement referring to them as legal amps for hammies. Then there is my favorite, the comment about the Phelps, just for starters.

Ok, so far so good. Be very careful where you tread here Davey....what year did you "modify" the Davemade, what did you do to it, and what year did you modify the TS?
Moving on, when did you stop talking on the freeband, Hall? Why are none of those amps capable of doing more than 80 watts (YOUR words that you apparently forgot)?

Certainly would do the job of a CB and a ham radio, and worth the price -if- it is working properly. Radio is rather complex, and so should be owned by a master technician, or someone who has plenty of $ in case of a malfunction.
Screwdriver monkeys must be kept out of it.

Same goes for this rig, the GRC-106A, which is my own favorite:

This and others are monted in the ultimate mobile, an M-35 military 6x6 with a commo shelter on the back. The whole thing is at:

Not that I would ever use this radio for CB or anything...

It has 1 KHz resolution for TX and a +/- 500 Hz slider for RX if I am not mistaken. Or do you prefer the VFO to be continuous throughout a band so you can find stations? Many people do prefer that. I use a receiver for that, and then set up the decade tuning on the tranceiver.

And is Evangelical Christianity much different?
Believe as they do or suffer eternal damnation. Constantly preaching to repent. Constantly trying to convert?

Like Christianity, many religions have extreme factions that the ungodly must be eliminated. Those that commit grevious sins that no redemtionis posible. I believe it is often called purification of the land. No infidels. I even remeber reading that Joshua was instructed to kill all in some of the conquest of Cannon. By all, that included all living things.

Wrong Dave, it isn't againt "God's Law" to for a white to marry a black, just against Dave's church's law.

The only "Law" that God put forth concerning this is that you are not to marry outside your faith. Remember, "back then" everyone in that area were of the same "race." They all had dark skin and dark hair but they worshiped different gods. All of the Jews, Caananites, Uzites, Hittites, etc. were all from the same "race"....Noah.

Why did I know you would say that? He says jump, and you say "how high?". Such is the relationship of symbiotic sycophants.

Ok, then feel free to repost those times where you or twisty has requested said SPAM, so that the rest of us, with poor memories, can verify it.

Not specific to the amplifier model you mention... but a pair 6JE6 tubes should output anywhere from 40 to 250 watts... depending on the mode, duty cycle and how you want to care (abuse) them.

I don't know about Dave. While I would count him as one of my friends we don't see eye-to-eye on many things concerning the Bible. For some reason his church teaches to hate and repel those who are not "like them." This would seem to be totally unproductive but would fit into "God's Plan." It prevents most others from becoming like them and bringing more shame to Christianity.

Have a great New Year

Nope, wrong Dave. The Talmud came after Christ, several centuries after Christ.

Have you read the Talmud for yourself? I doubt it, it's actually pretty enlightning. It is obviously not God Inspired and its writings are, in many places, contradictory and confused. The writers do not believe that Jesus was the Son of God but the writings also are not really "anti-Christian" either. Nowhere does the Talmud call us cattle or dogs but it does use that term for the other groups at that time such as the worshipers of Baal and the other false gods of that time.

Yes, many terrible things have been done "in the name of God" and "in the name of Jesus." For that I am truly ashamed but there is nothing that I can do to go back and change it. It's churches like Dave's that use the Bible to justify their hate. There's a great saying that fits Dave's church perfectly:

In the beginning God made man in His image, now man has returned the favor.

strange concept, but....

I have no dilemma, except what you fabricate in your own sociopathic mind.

> but you refused and proceeded to air your laundry in front of the group.

You attempted to "air" what you thought you could make an issue of. The fact that you fail at every attempt hasn't stopped you from continuing.
I can't wait to see the next pitiful attempt.

> Besides Dave, asking questions of anothers business is paramount to > sheer hypocrisy when you refuse/are unable to answer questions posed

#1 I don't owe you an explanation for anything. What I choose to provide is for me to decide. If a serious, legitimate person requests information, I will be more than happy to oblige. But I see no point in providing information for no other reason than to satisfy another of your psychoses.

#2 the fact that something I said isn't verifyable by your own feeble means does not mean that it's a lie. Rather it speaks of your own inabilities, or your clouded, obsessed judgement.

> If you are feeling particularly adept at > communicating today, I am not the only one to have expressed an interest > for your use on the freeband.

Only you and your sycophantic counterpart, Nebo has made any comments. I don't consider either of you to be worthy of an answer. And I have never used either amp on the freeband. I use them legally on 10 and 15 meters, where I am licensed to do so.

> The "majority" of the posts seem to > disagree with your statement referring to them as legal amps for > hammies.

That "majority" of posts that you refer to, have been by yourself, so that's hardly an objective poll. George may be a bit confused on certain aspects of the ruling, but he's essentially correct, and no amount of slander, on your part, can change that.

You can read. So read part 97, especially the section where a ham is allowed to build and/or modify one H.F. amplifier for personal use, every year. Technical specs call for a spurious output that is no greater than -40 dbc for H.F.

Now, you might want to make an issue over the fact that since a "Dave Made" (or Texas Star) amp was "commercially" (If that's what you want to call it) made without an FCC ID number, it was never legally allowed to be sold to anyone. But that violation belongs to the manufacturer. The fact that I now have it, and have modified it for legal ham use according to part 97, I can now use it legally on the ham bands. A private party, making a one-off amp for personal use, is not required to submit the amp for FCC certification. To require that drives a stake through one of the founding purposes of ham radio, and that's technical experimentation.

The only reason the rules were written as they are, pertaining to H.F. amplifiers, was to make it difficult, for scofflaws like you, to obtain amplifiers for illegal use on CB and freeband frequencies. It was not meant to hinder legally operating hams, from having the flexibility of homebrewing. But note that they addressed the potential loophole, of a ham making H.F. amps as "homebrew" and then selling them to "non-hams", by limiting a ham to one amp per year.

> Then there is my favorite, the comment about the Phelps, just > for starters.

You ask me about an antenna that I had over 9 years ago, and you think because I didn't know what you were talking about initially, that it automatically makes it a lie? You are truly a piece of work.

I guess this also means that you won't be posting the confirmation of requests for the Lou-SPAM? Thought so, I guess this makes you a liar by your own logic.

Or with enough equipment. In my foxhunt days, I swear they used to put as much into building their rigs as running them every Friday. We had hunts every Saturday night. Starting point was a local plaza back parking lot.

Keep in mind, this story was in the middle 70's... We actually had one guy show up with four (4) TRC30's he'd bought used. He tied all four units, one each, to it's own 102" antenna on one corner of the car.
The AGC's were all calibrated to track together to the same given signal level with an RF generator, which was mounted on top of the roof for the purpose. Since the manufacture dates were pretty close and teh models were exactly the same, it was easy to get them to react the same to a given signal, by tweaking the rec AGC. Once so calibrated, he was able to run the S-meter lines from each unit, each to a DC channel on a 4 channel scope he had mounted under the dash.
All he had to do was keep the 'bulge' in the resuling scope circle, to the top of the scope, which, of course, represented the front of the car.

At the leading edge of the hunt, he was the only one who wasn't 'pulling circles', trying to get a "fox fix". really weird.

It worked really great when standing still, but he never DID get it working well on the road. The supposition was that his problem came from the 102's moving around. We had thought to make use of some lip-mounted loads in that config, but we never did... sadly, he died of cancer a few years later.

LOL. Yeah. We told that to one guy while we were fishing his car out of the canal one summer night. Pissed the farmer whose feild we cut through to get to the canal off no end. We changed his handle to 'water walker' for the rest of that week. (chuckle!)

The BIBLE does not teach that "the ungodly" must be eliminated. Just those sinners whos LIFESTYLE or should I say DEATHSTYLE harms others, like the Sodomites. Pursuant to Romans 1 and 13, the government should remove them from the land, rather than promoting the "good buddies." Since the government promotes "good buddies," then God's judgment IS on this nation! Sodom & Gomorrah Gen. 19 IS GOOD "case law." The TRUE GOD (Jesus Christ) did NOT design us to live like FAGS!

I am trying to tell them to REPENT, but it is hard. They are some of the most EVIL people I have ever met through time. GOD destroyed the records in 70 AD because he wanted to show you STIFF NECKED Texans that it is only through HIS bloodline, because they REJECTED HIM, and said Cruicify him! LOOK in their Encyclopedia and you'll see that these jews of today have NO connection to ancient Isreal! NONE ! Does you escatology demand that they do? You believe a false escatology then!

I see you as a SINNER that needs a Savior--Jesus Christ. WHY am I "pathetic?" Is it because I am no longer "brainwashed" like you are, pursuant to Colossians 2:8 ? !

You have somehow manage to wrap > ethnocentric nationalism and deep orthodox religion together and > strike out at all that differs from you.

This is what Christians in the past did. Go read about the life of WG Brownlow of Tenn. and see what he did and said as a Judge, Governor, treasury agent, rebel fighter, newspaper owner. We are wimps compared to what people did and said in the past!

As you walk down your path > toward what end you meet, you will grow more and more ethnocentric.

What is the opposite of this "etho" word? Could it be a tower somewhere in soddom-who-is-sane Babylon?

> Combine that with your deep orthodoxy, this will justify any and all > actions you take.

No, the WORD of GOD (Bible) restrains me from becomming what you are, or what you want me to do)!

For the unclean that do not heed your perversion of > the Word should be eliminated as they are doomed to the eternal flames

YOU are sure doomed to the Lake of FIRE for this EVIL speaking of me!
We are ALL "unclean" since we were born in Adam. Life and TRUTH only comes with Jesus Christ!

What action are you talking about?

This is what you are doing to me. Sure we "tolerate" others that are not like us. BUT this false WORSHIP of "tolerance" the way you sicko

LIBERALS worship tolerance makes us SICK ! We will NOT "tolerate" your good buddy SODOMITES !

> If one looks in history the road of ethnocentric nationalism led to

I believe that Hitler's rise was due to what the jewish bankers had done to the world through their control of worrld economies. Hitler got Germany out of the depression FIRST ! But he became a satan worshipper later. HIS DAD was Jewish!

Add in a deep orthodoxy in religion and you get the > talliban and the teachings Ayahtollah Khomeni.

Where does the Jesus of Matthew through John come on your scale? Was he extreme or mainstream? !

To add further the deep > orthodoxy of religion and ethnocentric nationalism one looks to 17th > and 18th century England. In fact the history of England. The bitter > fight among Saxons and Angles. then the split of the Church of England > from Rome by Henry VIII.

Why did that upset you? Wasn't England blessed by GOD for becoming a "daughter of the Harlot" pursuant to Rev. 17, instead of part of the Harlot herself? !

That led to a conflict between Catholic and > Anglican churches.

A conflict from those who wanted to be TRUE to those who wanted to be THE Harlot Church; the Amomination of the earth, as the Bible calles her!

Not only conflict but persecution. I caution you to > look down the road you head.

I'm looking and I SEE JESUS ! Don't you want to see him too? My eyes are ON HIM ! Not your Harlots and daughters of harlots you speak of!

You is on the wrong path for sure James. Better READ the King James Translation Matthew through John and see what you are missing ! Dave!!!!!!!!!

"MY" Church is from the book of Acts, which does NOT teach what YOU call HATE; but what the Bible calls HATE ! Do you want to TALK to my "Pastor" on the phone? Are you allowed to or can afford to call Pennsylvania? That's where I am a "member" of. I have been telling them of your VICIOUS attacks and I'm sure you will lose your one world mentality if you want to talk to someone purely Biblical!

The ENTIRE King James translation IS the Bible or the Geneva Bible is the whole thing, from Genesis to Revelation. If you think just the Torah is it, I cahallenge you to read Mather through John.

Kevin: The Talmud IS the written down of the "traditions of the elders" that Jesus went against, because they were against HIS FATHER's LAWS ! More below each point!

WHY would I want to read such a WICKED satanic Humanistic Anti-Christ set of anti- Col. 2:8 garbage as this? I have read portions of it. They call us DOGS and Cattle. ANd MORE wickedness and UNBiblical TRASH ! Jessy Jackson was RIGHAT--it IS a "gutter" religion!

It is obviously not God Inspired and its writings are, in many

OH really! I'm glad you believe LIES that it is PRO-JESUS instead of saying he was a bastard and other bad terms!

Nowhere does the Talmud call us cattle or dogs but it does use that

Are you on drugs? YES they call non-Jews that! Which drug are you on ? Or which pair of jewish glasses did you have on when you read it?!

ANYBODY but them. Christians too! Jesus HATES them because HE LOVES US instead ! Rev. 2:9 & 3:9 ! 2 Chron.7:14 was written for YOU ! REPENT !

Oh wow Kevin!! You better stop those vicious attacks, you've got davie, darby and the congregation all upset. Bet they have been falling on the floor praying for you and shouting and singing with their hands all raised toward the ceiling calling for mercy on your sole. Now don't take this all wrong davie, I was raised going to church and my family and I still go to church, but you bible thumping religious zealots are really funny and a pain as well.

Dave,

I just wanted to tell you I was sorry. I did not say something quite right in this post. What I really needed to say here is that there is no "Righteous Man" walking on this earth today.

You can only strive, by the Word, to live a righteous life. Something that none of us will do perfectly because we are not Gods. That is why by the blood you will be washed and if you are a true believer you will live a good life. But I dare say it will not be perfect all the time as you try to lead people to believe you are doing. (PSST that is proven every time you say hurtful, and hateful things about others. You are not doing your cause, if you have one, any good)

I do believe that is where you are borderline. You see there is only one "Righteous Man" and based on current events, I'm pretty sure it isn't you. The Bible warns to beware of false profits. Might some of your rants and proclamations be construed as such? Now, if you don't believe that then, I don't know what to tell you. Our job, if we choose to do so, is to win souls to the Lord. Not chase them away. Regardless of what their beliefs are. You should just leave the judging to "The Righteous Man".

Prove her wrong by your actions. As long as you call people "faggots" and "commies" you are not acting like a Christian. You should read Galatians 5 about the fruit of the Spirit, Dave. Christ needs those filled with the fruit of the Spirit, love, patience, gentleness, faith, meekness, temperance, and goodness, and not religious nuts.

Hey folks...thought I'd open a new thread. I really haven't operated much on CB in about 20 years. The last few nights several of us have created what we call as "boat anchor nights". I brought out the old Hallicrafters CB-3A(Over 40 years old), and Johnson Messenger I. Lots of fun, with the nice audio quality. A lot of enjoyment can be had, while remaining legal. Any other input on the topic is more than welcomed! Any other old-timers, or old radio enthusiasts out there with similar experiences?

Oh really? Does this also account for those "through time" who have tried to extinguish them and failed? God said that He will always leave a remnant but there are always those who try to "thward" God...and fail.

> GOD destroyed the records in

Yes the Jews did select to have Christ crucified but if He hadn't been crucified where would you be? Why do you hold it against those who did God's Will? Read the profits, Christ came for one purpose, to be crucified and pay the great price for YOUR sins (and mine.)

> LOOK in their Encyclopedia and you'll see that these jews of today have NO

So do you have one of "their" encyclopedias? I ask you again...did the destruction of 70AD break the blood line? By this standard if your birth records were destroyed then you would suddenly stop existing or would somehow become a bastard child because you couldn't prove who your parents are. Don't you think that God knows their bloodlines? My "escatology" doesn't demand that they prove their bloodline just as it doesn't demand that I prove mine. "Those who call themselves Jew and are not" has nothing to do with bloodlines but with cerimonial practices and heart issues. There were those who were allowed to "convert to Jedism" and "became Jews." Were they "real Jews?" Certainly they were.

Your words. Check 'em out and file 'em appropriately. It;s not spam when it's requested.

My email is shut off except for those on my private email list.
Why can't you give us a name of the cber that you claim was busted for disorderly?

>I know, that's a strange concept, but....

No stranger than your pathological lying for no reason other than to lie.

I offered to email you as well concerning your dilemma

>I have no dilemma, except what you fabricate >in your own sociopathic mind.

LOL....uh......I didn't fabricate anything..YOU did..the cber getting busted..the Phelps.....probably everything else you ever said here.
I asked you about YOUR posts... Everything I asked about was in response to a post of yours.
Let us start again so you are able to comprehend it isn't in my mind but very much something in your mind you wish to forget, only I won't permit it.
Can you explain how your email came by way via the University when you claimed that you only "borrowed" the account for a short time long ago?
Can you explain why it defaults to "Mark Salzyn" who appears to have been the other half of so many of your conversations?
How about the Phlelps comment? I asked if you still had the Phelps and you asked, and I quote "What Phelps? I wish I HAD a Phelps"..when it was shown you indeed lied ina post long ago by claiming you had one. A few days later you popo the lid on the cesspooole and say: "Oh, THAT Phelps..well, see...um...it.....itwashitbylightningyeathatsit"...
LMAO.....tell me Davey boy, does that shit work on the people you surround yourself with?

but you refused and proceeded to air your laundry in front of the group.

>You attempted to "air" what you thought you >could make an issue of.

Not true, davey..I was the one that asked you many times to take your cries to email to AVOID making an issue in the group, to "avoid" airing your shortcomings and personal problems..everyone knows that Davey, I asked you many many times to go to email with your personal problems you bring to the group and you trying to lie about it now and say otherwise serves only to solidify your pathological status.

The fact that you fail >at every attempt hasn't stopped you from >continuing.

Your posts. I merely questioned them...I can't help it if you went to pieces and came gunning for me with flames and personal offtopic attacks....that's in your upbringing..you weren't taught any better or you simply don't know any better..either way,,you suffer a deficit.

>I can't wait to see the next pitiful attempt.

Again, "your" posts, Davey boy. To agree with me at this time that they were failures is redundant. The "pitiful attempts" have been limited to you attempting but failing to explain away your lies.
Besides Dave, asking questions of anothers business is paramount to sheer hypocrisy when you refuse/are unable to answer questions posed concerning comments you uttered and are unable to 'confirm" any of them...this is why they are called "lies".

>#1 I don't owe you an explanation for anything.

Nope, you certainly don't.
Merely carry on your little hit parade for yourself and I'll continue to point out the bullshit as I see fit. You are most correct, Mr. Hall, that in all instances, attacking me on a personal level and fancying yourself educated in the matter of all you can not comprehend, is certainly more constructive and conducive than offering analysis or basis for all which you claim.

>What I choose to provide is for me to decide.

But of course, although I'm having none of it and for some reason that just galls you to the point where you are single-handedly reduced to reckless off-topic insults and self-professed slightly comical images....that of an educated man, no less. You have proven yourself a pathological liar. You have nothing to prove to me or provide, Davey boy..but when you pathetically, habitually and pathologically continue to throw bullshit lies on the group to futher your own bullshit agenda, such as your claim of the cber near you getting busted for disorderly conduct, be prepared to answer questions on it. A claim like that is incredibly easy to disprove by anyone with internet access who knows what they are doing or to the super sleuth......even an idiot can pick up the phone and make the call to the precinct to disprove your lying, lid, trolling hammie azz which is why your lying self got real quiet on this issue..you were busted...instead of acting like a man and moving on, you figure you're gonna get personal with me for calling attention to it..you're a child, Hall..and as always, you never let us down with your shining example of the worst of amateur radio...the perfect lid.

>If a serious, legitimate person requests >information, I will be more than happy to >oblige. But I see no point in providing >information for no other reason than to satisfy >another of your psychoses.

A (ahem) "psychosis" has nothing to do with your pathological lying, Dave, except that it is but one of many problems that ail you. Again, you have to provide for nothing,,as there is nothing to provide for. Your claims are just like you..bunk. At least folks are considering the source when you post now.

>#2 the fact that something I said isn't >verifyable by your own feeble means does not >mean that it's a lie.

My resources are anything but.
But you go on ahead and believe that I;m the only one that disproved your lie concerning that claim..as I said..a few clicks. a mere phone call, and you, my angry little lid, are as you have always been.....full of shit.

>Rather it speaks of your own inabilities, or >your clouded, obsessed judgement.

What part of my judgement was "clouded" concerning asking you to provide a city, name, or year concerning your claim that a local cber was convicted of disorderly conduct? The part where I half-heartedly thought for once in your pathetic, pathological lying life you may return an honest answer? Hmmm...so I see..... I know exactly just what you mean.

If you are feeling particularly adept at communicating today, I am not the only one to have expressed an interest in your claim of how you tamed the Davemade and TS into legality mode for your use on the freeband.

>Only you and your sycophantic counterpart, >Nebo has made any comments. I don't >consider either of you to be worthy of an >answer.

You don;t have to answer, Davey boy,,your angry malicious hate filled post and attacks speak quite clearly, as do your claims you refuse to answer for even after you claimed you would..but that was before I drove a stake through your black heart.. We wouldn't expect anything less..it is how your type operate.

>And I have never used either amp on the >freeband. I use them legally on 10 and 15 >meters, where I am licensed to do so.

Ok, when did you mod the Dvaemade and ditto for the TS? Was it your equipment?
Surely out of all your claims you can choose and select better which to respond than those of which you have managed to already mangle yourself, eh? But thats ok,, a liar is a liar regardles of how many lies one tells.

The "majority" of the posts seem to disagree with your statement referring to them as legal amps for hammies.

>That "majority" of posts that you refer to, have >been by yourself, so that's hardly an objective >poll.

That's not true at all....but I wouldn't expect any correct information to escape from your bruised and damaged psyche. The posts I refer to were the conensus that the amps are illegal for hammies or cbers.

>George may be a bit confused on certain >aspects of the ruling, but he's essentially >correct, and no amount of slander, on your >part, can change that.

I offered to educate you further but you merely wind up shooting yourself in the foot and dining on the crow I precariously prepare for you.
Slander is spoken, libel is written, my precocious angry, little lid. You may continue to set forth the notion you have a bit of education, but your uncouthness quickly dispells with any such notion. Continue to make blunder upon blunder or you can learn from your mistakes and move on from them. Drawing purely upon your past behavior, it isn't too tough to hazard a guess as to which littered alley you will choose to call home.

>You can read. So read part 97, especially the >section where a ham is allowed to build and/or >modify one H.F. amplifier for personal use, >every year.

Great. Now what year did you modify the thing and whose equipment did you use?
While you're at it, what year was your local cber busted?

>Technical specs call for a spurious output that >is no greater than -40 dbc for H.F.

And you achieved this in what year and with whose equipment? I'm going to go out on a limb here and say you will fail to give a year. Go ahead, Davey boy, prove me wrong.

>Now, you might want to make an issue over >the fact that since a "Dave Made" (or Texas >Star) amp was "commercially" (If that's what >you want to call it) made without an FCC ID >number, it was never legally allowed to be >sold to anyone. To >require that drives a stake through one of the >founding purposes of ham radio, and that's >technical experimentation.

Not at all. I want to make an issue out of your claim that a local cber was convicted of disorderly conduct...if you don't choke on that we can move on to the question of how long has it been since you have been obeying the law? 1 year? 2? 3? 5? 10? I mean, you could certainly remember that Phelps when I refreshed your memory..butI'm not going to refresh your memory on this one...you can answer all by your lonesome..or not. <g>

>The only reason the rules were written as they >are, pertaining to H.F. amplifiers, was to make >it difficult, for scofflaws like you, to obtain >amplifiers for illegal use on CB and freeband >frequencies.

Wrong. Nowhere will you ever in any of my posts find anything to back what you say...thing is..you're the power monster, Davey boy,,,not I.....I stepped on your neck just fine on the freeband using mother nature..you, Lelnad, George...you're all ducks, lame ducks, but ducks nonetheless....you're even a hypocritical duck, Davey boy....calling others names for the same behavior exhibited by yourself.
I never was a power fan, Davey boy..pay attention when church is in session lest I bellow the call for the high priestess KC8LDO who shall spam ye with her kingdom collection of porndom.

>It was not meant to hinder legally operating >hams, from having the flexibility of >homebrewing. But note that they addressed >the potential

Then there is my favorite, the comment about the Phelps, just for starters.

>You ask me about an antenna that I had over >9 years ago, and you think because I didn't >know what you were talking about initially, that >it automatically makes it a lie?

Yes, I do and I would tend to even venture most people would see it the same way...it comes back to me being in touch with reality and the majority in a manner you apparently were never able to manage, despite a lifetime of trying and searching for acceptance. I also feel "most" avid cb AND hammie enthusiasts would remember if they EVER owned a certain piece of equipment, especially an antenna. Ever have a Lafayette? One would remember. See, you screwed up and said "What Phelps" and THEN proceeded to CLARIFY your lie for yourself with "I wished I had one"....you clarified it for yourself Dave,...if you had one, you would have remembered it..funny how you couldn't remember it until you were faced with your old post lie..then suddenl..."Oh yes..THAT Phelps..Puh-leeze!
One would remember it. Ever have a moonraker? One would remember it. Even if the radio or gizmo was only owned a short while, it would most likely ring a bell unless one suffers from a serious malady. 9 years is nothing, but if you can not remember it, it's merely another of your great many and self-professed personal problems. But look, you are coming across as pathetic trying to sell this line over and over, Dave. No one believes you anymore, not even your own crew of misfits. You lied, move on from it and it won't be held against you. You screwed up..get over yourself...or you can continue to attempt to sell this sorry azzed week-late diatribe of an excuse to any who will have any of it...but it doesn't fly this way, dude. Get over yourself.

Not really. I just have a talent for noticing things and separating bullshit. Media is all bullshit..but the ones who can manipulate the bullshit so as to extract a single, golden grain of truth, can make great money at it. It may help explain the ease with which I was manipulating you when I didn't even realize it was taking place...honest. I was as astonished as you were to find that you suck at communication skills. Tell me again, just when did you begin to feel off-topic insults and ad hominem attacks to those that question your claims was an effective tool of communication employed by elmers of amateur radio? One MAYBE would expect this type bullshit behavior from a semi-new nocode, but to see an upperclassman present representation of amateur radio in such a light as you have is gut wrenching, heartbreaking, and an insult to all those that strive to undo the damage your type does to hammie radio.

The last request for spam that was mentioned was by Lelnad when he threatened to have N8wwm porn-spam the group if I didn't go away.

Dave,
With every word you prove my point. You lack all Fruit of the Spririt and display nothing but anger and hate which are of the devil. It is you who should be repenting. You say you have read "some" of the Talmud? Read ALL of it before you make a judgement about it. You seem to have read the writings of Marx more than the Bible and the Talmud.

So tell me where does the Bible say that we are not to marry between RACES? In fact where is the word "race" used anywhere in the Bible where it doesn't mean running a race? In fact it's only in the KJV Bible four times and every time it is in the context of running a race. What is the "UN brown man" anyway? The UN is an organization that I do not support and I think it is unnecessary except so that small countries can tell other countries what to do inside their own borders. Remember we are ALL descended of Noah. Please tell me where the Bible mentions where God made the different races. He confused the speech at the Tower of Babel which did create NATIONS or clans but did not create races (black, white, brown, yellow, green...) At that time the ALL looked alike.

Kaar D-Phone lights up occasionally, as does the HE-20c, w/D104 through a Vibratrol.

SBE Console II is still the bench radio.

I am looking for a old tube radio. I know of several around here in E. Tx. that have old tube radios, I am going to try to get a group to hook up the old tube rigs on Friday or Saturday nights and talk on them. I thought it would be kinda fun. I just have to find a tube rig first. I want one with SSB. I saw a couple on Ebay I probably should have bought.

Chinks???? Dave, it's racists such as yourself that make me proud not to be a Christian, and make me want to avoid anyone who is out there attempting to convert me. There might be some good Christians out there, well meaning and honest, who respect the will of the Lord, God. You aren't one of them.

I don't know. I've corresponded with Debby a few times. She seems very kind and thoughtful and the type of person woman who will not oppose her husband publicly. I believe that she is truly the "Proverbs 31 woman" by her words. She has always been civil in her words to me. Now Dave, on the other hand, seems to be lots of show and blow but little go. When you pin him down on something that is blatantly un-Biblical he will not answer or will respond with one of his canned answers. But, as I stated before, I do truly count him as one of my friends and a "brother in Christ" even though many of his beliefs and doctrines are WAY out there and many are un-biblical.

We agree on the primary Christian doctrine that states that Jesus is the Way the Truth and the Life and NO ONE comes to the Father but through Him. Those are Christ's words and not mine and not Dave's. He is the Son of God, He came in the flesh to die for our sins and did so on the cross. On the third day He rose from the dead defeating death as only God could do.

Wow! My kind of CBing! I sure wish there were a group of people, in my area, who would start a "retro-revival". I have several oldies but goodies. I have a Lafayette Comstat 25 (My original base), a Comstat 25A, as well as several other solid state (and one hybrid) radios that are over 25 years old (Antique in car terms).

It makes sense though. Many of us, who grew up with CB as teenagers, are going through that mid-life "crisis" where we wax reminiscent about the things we did, and miss about our youth. This puts us in the 40-50 year old range, which falls into the time of greatest growth of CB, from 1968-1978.

Break out the lava lamps, black lights, Peter Max posters, pop in an 8-track tape, and enjoy the sounds of an old tube type CB!

Attack? If setting you straight on the rules, which you don't care to follow, much less understand, constitutes an "attack", then so be it.

> >What does it take to make the point?

How does one "answer" for a "lie" that only exists in your immagination? You're convinced that I lie, so nothing I can say will change that. So why should I try?

> Where would you like to start? The headers?

Already explained. It's not my fault, that you don't understand TCP/IP and internet routing protocols, and prefer to think that some node in the forwarding path is significant, because it is geographically close to where my ISP is located, and coincides with the place that I used to use several years back. I've told you before, the only adress that is relevant is the originating one. The others in the path are picked by the routing protocols so as to provided the fastest (least hops) path to its eventual destination. No one, posting a message, has any control over that.

> The Phelps?

Already explained. How do you expect me to know what you refer to, when I haven't had it for 8 or more years now?

> Your acocunt defaulting to the University?

That is simply untrue. My ISP is Worldlynx networks, and has been for the last several years. That's where I send my check to each year.

> Who is Mark Salzyn and why did your email originate there when you claimed you only > "borrowed" an account there years ago ffor a short while?

What? I don't even want to touch that one. I'm not sure what you are trying to claim here. Yes, I posted from Villanova, 8 or 9 years ago, so what? As for Mark, he's another newsgroup poster, much like you. I know nothing more about him, other than we didn't see eye to eye, on many issues at that time. But what is the relevance?

I don't specifically remember what year, it was either 98 or 99. What I did to it, was to add bias to the output transistors, such that it chnaged the class from "C" to "AB", so that it could be used on SSB. I also eliminated the drive stage so that I could drive it with the output of an Icom 706. I also added a 5 pole Chebyshev low pass filter, to attenuate the harmonics.
The Dave Made was a "toy", a project for me to play with. I got it in exchange for some radio work that I performed for a local customer. Many of my clients were people of frugal means, and often I accepted radio gear trades instead of cash. In reality, the Dave Made was a poor performer on 10 meters, as it lacked sufficient power to make much of a difference. An M-200 is only good for about 400 watts peak, and that's only about 6db greater than the radio alone. Once I upgraded from tech plus to Extra, and I no longer had to limit my power to 250 watts, I stopped using it. In fact, from all this hashing about this amp, I have received an E-Mail asking if I would consider selling it. I just may.

The Texas Star was easier, it was already Class AB, so all I had to do was add a low pass filter. Since the DX-600 was packed in fairly tight, I opted for an external filter. I also, like the dave made, eliminated the driver section, and the attenuation network, except for a 50 ohm "L" pad, that I left to force a resistive 50 ohm input load. I didn't mind the extra loss of the matching pad, as I had plenty of drive power available. In fact, I was able to drive the amp to its full 750 (or so) watt peak, with about 30 or 40 watts drive from the Icom. This setup is currently still in my truck, which I don't use all that much any more.
Oh, I modified this amp probably earlier, since I've owned it since the early 80's.

> Moving on, when did you stop talking on the freeband, Hall?

I've never "freebanded", by your definition. I used to occasionally use those channels, back in the old days, to escape from idiots and skip noise. I have not transmitted on an illegal 11 meter frequency for a number of years now. As I have stated before, I am not all that interested in shooting skip, and what DX might interest me, is more than satisfied on LEGAL ham bands. But once you've done it once, what's the point? And why would anyone with a general class or higher, ham license, who can have all the DX they want on the ham bands, deal with 11 meter DX, which is full of hash and trash, music playing, fart noises, roger beeps and echo boxes, and some seriously socially challenged individuals, not to mention that they put their license in jeopardy, by operating illegally?

> Why are none > of those amps capable of doing more than 80 watts (YOUR words that you > apparently forgot)?

Which, of course you misinterpreted. By the way, it was "180 watts", not 80 watts, so get your misinterpretations straight. Second of all, that number was quoted for VHF and above, which on 2 meters, I have a nice RF Concepts amp that runs about 180 watts (200 if you push it a little), which I normally run at 100 watts, usually on SSB.

Now, I'm feeling generous today, as I've told you more than you truly deserve. And this is the last time I will address these claims. If you forget, you can look them up again on google, as your are prone to do, and refresh your memory.

I'm still waiting to see your archived post, where you requested Lou Franklin SPAM.

Uh huh! A good part of any competitive sport, is the preparation. The better prepared you are, the better your chances of winning. Besides, it's always fun to mentally psyche out the other guys by coming up with something totally off the wall.

Wow! A lot of effort, to do basically what modern doplar DF units do today. A clever approach, but I personally don't like his choice of radios. IIRC, the TRC 30's had a very non-linear AGC curve, and it took a ton of signal to push the meter past +10db over S9. A guy running, what was then a "whopping" 150 watts, sitting in front of the house, couldn't push that meter to +30db. Of course a good atttnuator (or 4 in his case) calibrated properly, would allow you to keep the signal low enough to be in the "usable" range.

> At the leading edge of the hunt, he was the only one who wasn't
> 'pulling circles', trying to get a "fox fix". really weird.

Yea, I never had anything fancy. Just a loop, and a mag-mount antenna, mounted on the far center edge of the trunk, a radio with good dynamic range and a fairly linear "S" meter, and a variable attentuator. In fact, one club I used to belong to, outlawed most of my equipment, since it gave me an "unfair" advantage over the common guy with basically nothing but a radio and an "S" meter. While these hunts were fun, the rules that they set up, basically took the skill out of it, and the guy who headed in the right direction first, usually ended up winning. Later on, another group of guys ran things a bit better. But the "fox" was also allowed a little more creativity. Once, a 1 watt walkie talkie was attached to a tall tree in the middle of the woods, surrounded by a housing development. It was frustrating as the signal level stayed basically the same as you drove around the neighborhood circling the woods. I'm sure more than a few of the neighbors became concerned with a bunch of cars driving around, and then walking on foot, into the woods. Today, I'm sure we would have been arrested. Only one guy thought to bring a handheld unit, and it didn't have an "S" meter, so he put the antenna fully down and used the squelch to home in on the "fox". Needless to say, all of us had handhelds the next time, just in case.

Much of his problem may have been caused by multi-path cancellation. The same sort of phenomenon that causes "picket fencing" on VHF frequencies. Shame he didn't live to play a while longer. Sounds like my kind of CBer.

He actually drove into the canal? What, was he watching his meter, and not the road (Or you did say field right)?. That's not the way to end a good game though. Good thing it was the 70's, or he might have been hit with some sort of "environmental damage" fine, like they give to owners of boats that sink.

No offence, but you could do that BEFORE the clarifier was unlocked... The FINE knob that was strictly receive. In any case, this one doesn't need to be unlocked to be able to do what you claim it does now....

It's still SPAM when you request something not on the public forum, and the response comes on the public forum. And E-mail request is 2 way, and forum flood is one way. You want Lou to update you periodically, by E-mail, that's your choice. It's awfully presuptuous of you to once again attempt to speak for the whole group if you think WE want this crap.

Really? Other people have had no problem E-mailing you. As have I. Don't tell me, I'm on your "private" list? Gee I'm honored. And your eyes are brown.

Because I know it bothers you. And for the record, it was NOT a "disorderly", it was for "disturbing the peace", a slight difference.

It's true no matter what you might think, and the fact that you can't prove it otherwise, is not proof of a lie. Absence of positive proof, is not necessarily negative proof.

It was an exercise is seeing how obsessive you would become. And like you always do, you never fail to perform to expectations. Like I've said many times, you're nothing, if not predictable. Like right now, the minute I mention your APD, you flip out and go off on a verbose diatribe attempting, once again, to speak for the majority (Of whom to date, no one except your sycophant, nebo has backed you on), and launch vitriolic attacks against every post that I've ever wrote that you can dig out of Google. No normal person spends that inordinate amount of time "researching" other people. By doing so, you only re-enforce your APD diagnosis, for all to see.

Actually it started because I corrected several of your techincal faux-pas, (like that real gooder about legal power skip stations a thousand miles away, having the power to walk on a legal local station a half-mile away, as if path loss didn't exist, and your faulty information about the magnitude of cycle 23 compared to previous cycles) which you didn't take to very well. Since then you have launched a campaign to malign and discredit me at every turn

Once again, for you to accuse another of "lying", the burden of proof is on you to prove it. You have nothing to prove that I lied anout anything. You have nothing but speculation, supposition, and a surprisingly poor grasp of technology.

Like I said, It's not my fault if you refuse to wear the shoe that fits you so well. The fact that you so vehemently protest it, and attempt to continually shift the focus of the topic from your sociopathic tendancies (Starting with your unwillingness to follow the laws of the land), to your lame attempt at discrediting me.

What was it you were saying about ad-hominem attacks and namecalling? Maybe you should look in the mirror while you type on your keyboard.

> such as your claim of the cber near you getting busted for disorderly

Why? You are not a person that is owed anything, and by thinking of yourself as such, you further re-enforce that nacissism diagnosis. You can choose to believe it or not. If you don't believe it, that's fine, but it doesn't give you the right to attack someone and call them a liar, unless you can supply the proof that backs you up.

Yes, you could, but you won't, just like you refused to call the number of the CB shop I used to deal with. What was your lame excuse that time? Oh yea, something about not wanting to talk to a pervert? Like you might catch something, over the phone. You're all talk, and little more.

Of course, as that is the truth. Otherwise other, more credible, people

More vitriol?

I've never claimed anything. You only suppose. But something must be sinking in, if you consider me "educated". But that's clearly evidenced by the way you lose control when I bring up your APD, and related psychoses.

What difference would the year make? It is irrelevant. Each amp was done in a different year, if that's the angle your after. And yes, all the equipment is mine. I have a whole array of test equipment, mostly H/P and Tektronics, with some B&K stuff thrown in, and a Fluke frequency counter, and Bird wattmeter.

That is a lie. You have, on occasion, made reference to "occasional" amp use. Should I be of the same mindset as you, I could look for it, but I'm not that interested, but others may be. So which is the lie, that you run an amp "occasionally" or where you brag about it?

The thing is, I don't talk on the freeband, so you've never had the opportunity to "step" on anything of mine. I suppose you're going to tell me that you've heard me there? An interesting feat, since you've never heard my voice.

Hey, if you're going to talk the talk, be prepared to walk the walk. You want to run illegally? Fine, but be honest about what it is you're doing. It is a violation of federal law, and that makes you liable to criminal charges. Yes, I once did the same thing, so what? It doesn't change what you do now. Anyone can reform their ways, once they mature.
Maybe one day, you will too.

Another projection of female characteristics onto a male? You do seem to fixate on that quite a lot. Part of the symptoms of APD does specify certain deviate sexual preferences. Hmmmm.....

You still can't grasp a simple concept? I DO wish I had a Phelps (Actually they're made by Solarcon now), they're just too rich for my blood right now.

> One would remember it. Ever have a moonraker? One would remember it.

You have absolutely NO idea of the sheer amount of radio equipment that I've bought, sold, traded, repaired, used, borrowed etc, over the last 30+ years. I have long forgotten much of it. The radios and equipment that I remember most were the ones back in the heyday of the 70's. Stuff in the last 10 years went in and out in a big blur. Actually, I did make a slight faux-pas. The Phelps wasn't my personal antenna, it was on the 220 repeater, and belonged to the group. But hey, hang me for using the term "mine" to decribe something that was only partially mine 9 years ago.

Wait until you get into your 40's and see how your short term memory slips away.

You are the only one who has stated such. Once again, you are presumptuous in speaking for the group.

You mean like asking Lou Franklin to SPAM the group?

How much money have you made from it? Better be truthful, I mean we all want to make those phone calls and search the internet. But wait! I forgot, you HIDE your identity. I wonder what you're hiding from? Could it be, the TRUTH? Nah!

> >I guess this also means that you won't be >posting the confirmation of Blind advertisements are SPAM. Making up that fictitious claim that you asked for it is even more pathetic.

> >Thought so, I guess this makes you a liar by >your own logic.

> Try again, Davey boy. Twist don't lie...ever.

That, in itself is a lie. No one, is able to claim that they never made an untrue statement in their entire lifetime. Whether to the color of your wife's dress, to the officer that pulls you over for speeding, or to yourself, when you claim to speak for the majority of hams, CBers, or this newsgroup. Be careful when using absolutes. It only takes one contrary statement, to disprove the whole thing.

Mopar,
Since I'm not suspicious by nature, I assumed he's another newby. If you know otherwise, (like Mr. Spock never said, but should have) "I'm all ears".

hello group
first off I am living in sunny London in the uk .. LOL...sunny my big toe
I have just got back in to cb radio after being away for 12 or so years.
I have just got a very nice SuperStar 3900 six bands of 40 am / fm / lsb / usb...its totally standard and in as new condition.... as these particular rigs are illegal hear in the uk we have to keep a low profile.....my problem is were I am living I have Heathrow airport just one mile to the south of me and I also have a hospital a mile to the north of me.....
and another problem is were I am living I am not allowed to put an antenna up....well one nobody can see will not hurt.
what I want is recommendations for a good antenna that's quite small works well for DXing ..so I can mount it on the back wall of my home well out of sight. cost is no problem as long as the antenna works and does its job I don't mind paying good money for the right antenna....
I don't intend to use any kind of amp I just intend to use the standard 10w am/fm and the standard 20w usb/lsb.... as I found years ago when I was an active DXer you don't really need the big power output as long as conditions are right.
I used to chat all over on standard power......... please email your antenna recommendations and if you have them a link to were I can buy the antenna... please email to shogun1965@lycos.co.uk many thanks and a happy new year to you all.......

the best antenna you can have for your situation is a half wave inverted v mounted to your wall assuming the wall isnt metal and neither are the beams inside it. you can easily make one yourself for only a few pounds and with the radio and no amp you will not have any problems as long as you dont remove the modulation limiter inside the radio

This may break some antikeyclowns' hearts, so they're advised to skip it...

Not too long ago, when the '435ers were up to their usual antics, some FCC monitor had been listening in on the bizarre QSOs. He then announced his presence in a very official way: "this is agent Johnson of the FCC, you guys are operating in violation of Part---" He was interrupted by booing, Bronx cheers, name calling, etc. which lasted a good ten minutes. If '435 was a stage, he'd have been pelted with tomatoes.

Just goes to show ya how some Los Angeles ops don't care about blaspheming against our Most Holy Laws. sob

No thank you Brian. You see, I do not see the posts you are refering to. Perhaps it is because I have added the sender to my kill file. Who knows? As far as "Newsgroup Rules".... Well... there arent any. You see, when the proposal for the newsgroup is made, votes are taken based on the premise of the proposed newsgroup. Alas, the group is created with NO RULES. You see, there is no one with authority to create newsgroup rules. You could propose a moderated newsgroup where you, as moderator, could regulate all the postings. You could then have total satisfaction with the content. Problem with moderated newsgroups is that for the most part, they are vacant wastelands... few posts.

The great blessing and the great curse of the internet (and newsgroups) is that it was created as an unregulated frontier. That is what led to it's rapid growth. It also has led to the unsavory element of spam, cyber crime, porn peddlers, etc. etc etc.

You can not substitute another's judgement with your own. You will have to decide on what YOU want to see and read accordinly. Dont worry about what I may (or may not) see.. I will take care of that myself with judicious kill files and a quick visual scan of the subject thes. Yes GASP! it is true.... I do not read every post!

Yeah right. I is go wit da show!

When you pin

I don't advocate or practice UN-Biblical positions. Just because some positions are against your State "church" you go to, doesn't make them UnBiblical. Your state church is the one who is teaching you unBiblical nonsence and distorting your mind with the non-facts and non-truth it believes and the LIES it tells based on your old buddy Mr.
Scofield!

But, as I stated before, I do tells you THE TRUTH !

Yep, I am angry with you, but won't sin because of it.

and hate which are of the devil.

Anger of the devil? Scriptures say BE ANGRY and sin not. Are you a mormon? They believe Jesus & satan are "brothers."

It is you who > should be repenting. You say you have read "some" of the Talmud? Read ALL

I am not going to waste any more time reading that wicked bunch of "traditions of the elders" set of anti-christ trash. You DON'T KNOW who you are talking with. I HAVE SEEN WITH MY OWN EYES (I hae DIRECT personal knowledge of) the teachings manifest from the talmud in little jewish children, ages 3 and 6, calling non-jews DOGS ! Out of the mouths of babes! The word they use is GOY. Now in Texas that's NOT BOY ! Would you like me to get a college professor e mail you direct and give you MORE of what they say & believe, so you can stop "loving those who HATE the Lord? !
Or do you still want to love anti-christs and UnBiblical Rev. 2:9 & 3: 9 people ? !

I have actually read The Bible more. You Hambos seem to like MARX and his plank 6 so much, that he is probably more loved by you than the Bible!

that make you a bit irregular? !

This message describes the rec.radio.amateur.*, rec.radio.cb, rec.radio.info, and rec.radio.swap newsgroups, as well as their Internet mailing list counterparts and complements. It is intended to serve as a guide for the new reader on what to find where. Questions and comments may be directed to Jeffrey Herman, KH6O, jeffreyh@hawaii.edu, or Paul Schleck, K3FU, pschleck@novia.net.

This message was last changed on 14 March, 1998.

History

Way back when, before there was a Usenet, the Internet hosted a mailing list for hams, called (appropriately enough) INFO-HAMS. Ham radio discussions were held on the mailing list, and sent to the mailboxes of those who had signed up for it. When the Usenet software was created, and net news as we now know it was developed, a newsgroup was created for hams: net.ham-radio. The mailing list and the newsgroup were gatewayed together, eventually.

Over the years, as the net grew, the volume of discussion became progressively higher. First one by one, and then as part of two reorganizations, what was once one group became many. In the process, developments elsewhere on the net were reflected in the groups as they were created, most notably the change to place all of the ham radio groups in one hierarchy.

The collection of newsgroups continues to grow as more people join the net, and as more topics of discussion gain volume, I expect to see more groups be created as well. This follows what is happening on the rest of the net.

Nearly all of the radio newsgroups have corresponding mailing lists, the notable exception being rec.radio.swap. There are also a few mailing lists that don't have newsgroups.

The Current Groups

It's important to post messages to the group that's appropriate for them, and not to the groups that aren't. The whole idea of having different newsgroups is so that folks who aren't interested in, say, homebrewing, don't have to wade through messages about homebrewing on the way to read about Field Day. Posting appropriately is just good etiquette.

The rec.radio.amateur.misc group is the catchall. It is what rec.ham-radio was renamed to during the first major reorganization. Any amateur radio-related message that's not more appropriate in one of the other groups belongs here, from contesting to DX to ragchewing on VHF to information on becoming a ham.

The group rec.radio.amateur.digital.misc is for discussions related to (surprise!) digital amateur radio. This doesn't have to be the common two-meter AX.25 variety of packet radio, either; some of the most knowledgeable folks in radio digital communications can be found here, and anything in the general area is welcome. The name was changed to emphasize this, and to encourage discussion not only of other text-based digital modes, such as AMTOR, RTTY, and Clover, but things like digital voice and video as well. The former group, rec.radio.amateur.packet, was removed on September 21st, 1993. It is obsolete, and you should use .digital.misc instead (or the appropriate new mailing list, mentioned below). The group has .misc as part of the name to allow further specialization if the users wish it, such as .digital.tcp-ip.

The swap group is rec.radio.swap. This recognizes a fact that became evident shortly after the original group was formed: Hams don't just swap ham radio gear, and other folks besides hams swap ham equipment. If you have radio equipment, or test gear, or computer stuff that hams would be interested in, here's the place. Equipment wanted postings belong here too. Discussions about the equipment generally don't; if you wish to discuss a particular posting with the buyer, email is a much better way to do it, and the other groups, especially .equipment and .homebrew, are the place for public discussions. There is now a regular posting with information on how to go about buying and selling items in rec.radio.swap; please refer to it before you post there. To answer a frequently asked question: No, there is no mailing list that goes along with this group. If you can't read Usenet news directly, you're out of luck.

The group rec.radio.amateur.policy was created as a place for all the discussions that seem to drag on interminably about the many rules, regulations, legalities, and policies that surround amateur radio, both existing and proposed. Recent changes to the Amateur Radio Rules (FCC Part 97) have finally laid to rest the Great Usenet Pizza Autopatch Debate - it's now legal to order a pizza on the autopatch, if you're not in the pizza business - as well as complaints about now-preempted local scanner laws hostile to amateurs, but plenty of discussion about what a bunch of rotten no-goodniks the local frequency coordinating body is, as well as the neverending no-code debate, may still be found here.

The group rec.radio.cb is the place for all discussion about the Citizens' Band radio service. Such discussions have been very inflammatory in rec.ham-radio in the past; please do not cross-post to both rec.radio.cb and rec.radio.amateur.* unless the topic is genuinely of interest to both hams and CBers - and very few topics are.

The rec.radio.info group is just what its name implies: it's the place where informational messages from across rec.radio.* may be found, regardless of where else they're posted. As of this writing, information posted to the group includes Cary Oler's daily solar progagation bulletins, ARRL bulletins, the Frequently Asked Questions files for the various groups, and radio modification instructions. This group is moderated, so you cannot post to it directly; if you try, even if your message is crossposted to one of the other groups, your message will be mailed to the moderator, who is currently David Dodell, WB7TPY. The email address for submissions to the group is rec.radio.info-moderator@primenet.com. Inquires and other adminis- trivia should be directed to rec.radio.info-request@primenet.com. For more information about rec.radio.info, consult the introduction and posting guidelines that are regularly posted to that newsgroup.

The groups r.r.amateur.antenna, .boatanchors, .dx, .equipment, .homebrew, and .space are for more specialized areas of ham radio: discussions about antennas, the older tube based amateur, military, and commercial gear, commercially-made equipment, homebrewing, and amateur radio space operations. The .equipment group is NOT the place for buying or selling equipment; that's what rec.radio.swap is for. Similarly, the .space group is specifically about amateur radio in space, such as the OSCAR program and SAREX, the Shuttle Amateur Radio EXperiment; other groups cover other aspects of satellites and space. Homebrewing isn't about making your own alcoholic beverages at home (that's rec.crafts.brewing), but rather construction of radio and electronic equipment by the amateur experimenter. The .dx group is devoted to long distance amateur communications. Each of these subgroups has its own charter and FAQ; please refer to the archives to find these documents.

Except for rec.radio.swap and rec.radio.cb, all of these newsgroups are available by Internet electronic mail in digest format; send a mail message containing "help" on a line by itself to listserv@ucsd.edu for instructions on how to use the mail server.

All of the groups can be posted to by electronic mail, though, by using a gateway at the University of Texas at Austin. To post a message this way, change the name of the group you wish to post to by replacing all of the '.'s with '-'s - for example, rec.radio.swap becomes rec-radio-swap - and send to that name@cs.utexas.edu (rec-radio-swap@cs.utexas.edu, for example). You may crosspost by including multiple addresses as Cc: entries (but see below). This gateway's continued availability is at the pleasure of the admins at UT-Austin, and is subject to going away at any time - and especially if forgeries and other net.abuses become a problem. You have been warned.

Mailing Lists

In addition to the mailing lists that mirror the Usenet newsgroups, there also are a few that stand alone. These cover specific areas of ham radio, and discussion is focused on just those areas. PLEASE BE SURE TO SAVE THE WELCOME MESSAGE YOU RECEIVE AFTER SUBSCRIBING -- IT WILL CONTAIN IMPORTANT INFO REGARDING UNSUBSCRIBING!

The cq-contest mailing list is for discussions of contesting in ham radio. To join, send an email to cq-contesting-request@contesting.com.

The DX mailing list covers the finer points of DXing. This one is also joined by mailing "subscribe" on a line by itself, this time to dx-request@unbc.edu.

There's also a VHF mailing list, for VHF operators of the weak signal persuasion. You can join this one be sending "subscribe vhf" on a line by itself to vhf-request@w6yx.stanford.edu.

The QRP-L list is devoted to building and operating gear at low-power outputs. To subscribe, send an email to listproc@lehigh.edu and only write: subscribe qrp-l Your Name.

The TopBand e-list is devoted to all areas of operation on 160m. To subscribe, send an email to majordomo@contesting.com and only write: subscribe topband and follow the instructions you'll be sent. This site, contesting.com, also hosts a couple dozen other ham-related e-lists. Use the above address, and only write: lists to get the entire index.

The Boatanchors e-list is devoted to the older tube-based ham, military, and commercial communications gear. To subscribe, send an email to:
listserv@listserv.tempe.gov and only write: subscribe boatanchors

For homebuilding transmitters and receivers using tube technology, there is the Glowbugs e-list; send an email to:
majordomo@piobaire.mines.uidaho.edu and only write:
subscribe glowbugs <your@address.here>

The VHF DX discussion list can be accessed by sending an email to: majordomo@blacksheep.org and only writing: subscribe VHF-DX-discuss.

We now have a list devoted to amateur radio history. To subscribe, send an email to: ham-radio-history-subscribe@egroups.com - leave the body of the message blank.

Qth.net hosts over 100 ham-related e-lists, including lists devoted to each state, manufacturer, mode, band - too many to state here. Send an email to majordomo@qth.net and only write: lists to get the complete index.

For one of the most complete indexes of email lists, see the excellent web site http://pw2.netcom.com/~ac6v/pageae.html

Please do NOT send subscription requests to the mailing lists themselves; that doesn't work very often, and is very annoying to those on the list.
Also, please keep your electronic mail address current with any mailing lists you subscribe to, as dealing with returned email is a nuisance for the person maintaining the mailing list.

A Few Words on Crossposting
==========

Please do not crosspost messages to two or more groups unless there is genuine interest in both groups in the topic being discussed, and when you do, please include a header line of the form "Followup-To: group.name" in your article's headers (before the first blank line). This will cause followups to your article to go to the group listed in the Followup-To: line. If you wish to have replies to go to you by email, rather than be posted, use the word "poster" instead of the name of a group. Such a line appears in the headers of this article.

One of the few examples of productive cross-posting is with the rec.radio.info newsgroup. To provide a filtered presentation of information articles, while still maintaining visibility in their home newsgroups, the moderator strongly encourages cross-posting. All information articles should be submitted to
rec.radio.info moderator so that he may simultaneously cross-post your information to the appropriate newsgroups. Most newsreaders will only present

the article once, and network bandwidth is conserved since only one article is propagated. If you make regular informational postings, and have made arrangements with the moderator to post directly to the group, please cross-post as appropriate.

No Dave it wasnt a redirect it was a claim you made and then snaked away

Your words. Check 'em out and file 'em appropriately. It;s not spam when it's requested.

I asked him to post it. You may not agree, but too bad.

The only floods in 4 years have all come from your little clique.

And it's your choice to take off or not read it.

Im part of the cb group,,you're not, neither is Lelnad. Everyone knows Im way down to earth and in touch way more with cbers views than you..hell Dave,, you call anyone that does what you did and LESS, a federal criminal and say they are of moral decay......(ROAR)...hehhe! Consensus shows the group approves of Lou (or did you miss those posts?) and disapproves of you and Dogies and Nads and N8s ways.

Your guessing skills equal your lying skills, communication skills, spelling skills, and self-professed (grandiose, no less) psychiatric skills.

Why can't you give us a name of the cber that you claim was busted for disorderly?

>Because I know it bothers you.

You go on thinking that...(chuckle) I love your inability to see yourself as others do..,it only illustrates your lies, Dave. It has never bothered me when you can not backa lie I point out..backing it up would make me eat crow and you wouldn't have the pathological label...I do express concern for the welfare of your child, however. Watching you admit you get your jollies by attempts at "bothering" (snicker) me speaks of a much deeper rooted problem of which the lies are but merely a symptom of.

Clarify it but don't you dare qualify it..cause..you know.......it would hurt me or something......(AHHAHAA)

>It's true no matter what you might think,

No, it's not.

> and the fact that you can't prove it otherwise, >is not proof of a lie. Absence of positive proof, >is not necessarily negative proof.

Your intellect shines here...ask one to prove a negative.. It was always a federal matter until the recent legislation. The burden of proof is always on the claimant going by US law.
You made the claim Davey boy, rant about some more ism's or itis's or something I suffer from, cause you're sure starting to come unglued over this matter. Not onlyhave you carved a rep as a lid for yourself with offtopic and unprovoked attacks, you are now working on heretic, obsessive-twist disorder and the rep of a little Ceasar, which I will bring into focus shortly.

>You attempted to "air" what you thought you >could make an issue of.

Not true, davey..I was the one that asked you many times to take your cries to email to AVOID making an issue in the group, to "avoid" airing your shortcomings and personal problems..everyone knows that Davey, I asked you many many times to go to email with your personal problems you bring to the group and you trying to lie about it now and say otherwise serves only to solidify your pathological status.

>Actually it started because I corrected several >of your techincal faux-pas, (like that real >gooder about legal power skip stations a >thousand miles away, having the power to >walk on a legal local station a half-mile away, >as if path loss didn't exist, and your faulty >information about the magnitude of cycle 23 >compared to previous with your leader Dogie and Lelnad and Sparky and N8.

Concerning cycle 23, your hammie self should have been educated by now but you just seem adamant and content on remaining ignorant and telling big lies. For your information, the Royal Observatory of Belgium is the WORLDS OFFICIAL SUNSPOT RECORD KEEPER. Please proceed with your ignorant and arrogant attempts at telling the world that the observatory is wrong but you are right.

>The fact that you fail at every attempt hasn't >stopped you from >continuing.

Your posts. I merely questioned them...I can't help it if you went to pieces and came gunning for me with flames and personal offtopic attacks.

>I have done nothing but point out your mental >deficiencies, as evidenced by you exhibiting >the symptoms that are documented in >DSM-IV.It's not my fault if the truth hurts.

Hey, I can be crazier than a loon..I can be cured...but you're a liar..once a liar always a liar..and there aint' nothing you can do about it.....deal with it Dave.

>.yoI can't wait to see the next pitiful attempt.

Besides Dave, asking questions of anothers business is paramount to sheer hypocrisy when you refuse/are unable to answer questions posed concerning comments you uttered and are unable to 'confirm" any of them...this is why they are called "lies".

>Once again, for you to accuse another of >"lying", the burden of proof is on you to prove >it.

i'M A CBER AND HAVE WEBTV..YOURE NOT VERY BRIGHT. <g>

But of course, although I'm having none of it and for some reason that just galls you to the point where you are single-handedly reduced to reckless off-topic insults and self-professed slightly comical images.

>Like I said, It's not my fault if you refuse to >wear the shoe that fits you so well. The fact >that you so vehemently protest it, and attempt >to continually shift the focus of the topic from >your sociopathic tendancies

Hahha.....the topic was never me, Dave,,just your pathetic attempts at making it about me when I inquired about your lies.
You have no self0control or self-respect.

> such in the group(Starting with your >unwillingness to follow the laws of the land),

You were down that road long before I, and I don't need an amp, Davey boy...but you sure do.

>to your lame attempt at discrediting me.

You discredit yourself just fine, N3CVJ,,, keep telling the group you cant back your claims becaus it bothers (hyuk) me.

.You have proven yourself a pathological liar.

>I'm still waiting for the "proof"

So ami..you made the first claim..I asked you to show it...you refuse,,I call you a liar....you bring the table a circular argument and ask one to prove a negative, once again magnificently illustrating your level of communicative skill.

You have nothing to prove to me or provide, Davey boy..but when you pathetically, habitually and pathologically continue to throw bullshit lies on the group to futher your own bullshit agenda,

>What was it you were saying about >ad-hominem attacks and namecalling?

I said you geit back tenfold. I didn't stutter,,check your ears..HYUK!

>Maybe you should look in the mirror while you >type on your keyboard.

I broke no law you didnt..matter of fact..I only freeband..you freebanded AND ran power.

such as your claim of the cber near you getting busted for disorderly conduct, be prepared to answer questions on it.

>Why? You are not a person that is owed >anything, and by thinking of yourself as such, >you further re-enforce that nacissism >diagnosis. You can choose to believe it or not. >If you don't believe it, that's fine, but it doesn't >give you the right to attack someone and call >them a liar, unless you can supply the proof >that backs you up.

A claim like that is incredibly easy to disprove by anyone with internet access who knows what they are doing or to the super sleuth.

>You and your webTV <snicker>

Exactly.
Or telephone.

>Here's a clue, if it was so easy to find this info, >why would someone be attempting to charge >you for something you could do yourself for >free?

Gee, Dave, you're really rockin the gray matter today huh? No one has tried to charge me anything..I gather information, Dave, for a living. I am the person your mother warned you about...no..er..thats not right...I am one of the the persons who charges for such info.......there we go. Wouldyou like to order a dossier on someone? You better take out a loan.

>Not all court cases are accesable by the >internet, especially in smaller towns that are >technology challenged

Preaching to the choir.....

....even an idiot can pick up the phone and make the call to the precinct to disprove your lying

>Yes, you could, but you won't, just like you >refused to call the number of the CB shop I >used to deal with.

What is it with you hammies and this power thing? Always trying to get me to do stuff..Lelnad want me to come in to a hammia room and then he forged me wen I refused...you're all upset 'cause I wont call a number.....I mean..wtf??Hahah!

>What was your lame excuse that time? Oh >yea, something about not wanting to talk to a >pervert? Like you might catch something, over >the phone. You're all talk, and little more.

And your excuse of not backing your lies because it bothers "me" is so much more palatable.

lid, trolling hammie azz which is why your lying self got real quiet on this issue.

>Tisk, tisk, more of those ad-hominem attacks >again?

Should have never went down that avenue and started it if it is so offensive to you. It goes with what I have been teaching you...treat others as you would want to be treated.
I would have indulged the rest of your fantasy, but your comment concerning nothing to hide sickened me. Coupled with your begging one to prove a negative along with your ill-honed communicative skills makes the lid title custom made to your specifications.
You made a comment concerning when I "get in my forties"..Dave, you are a child compared to me..why do you think I refer to you as youngster and junior? Nevertheless, this is where I leave you, as your true self is ringing forth and, well,,,,particularly, you are but one of many that sing the song.

It is the desperate individual or when fear abounds, when these scurvy few will find an opportunity to play on our fears....what follows is an attempt to instill ideas, notions, policies, false promises and practices that threaten our freedoms. People like N3CVJ see this as an opportunity to rationalize their actions as protective and morally correct. The weak swallow the bait. N3CVJ is of the mindset that our country will become as the middle east with bombs in the street..he has on several occasion manifested his paranoid irrational growing fear of anarchy. Power trippers attempt to take such a fear and use it to offer or implement techniques that could be used to monitor everyone or assume that if one chooses to exercise their right to be free from intrusion and the right to be left alone, they must have something to hide. The John Birch Society sang the same song,as well as a few other extremist organizations that seek to erode our constitution.

Dave has argued that if one has nothing to hide, one shouldn't care if someone knows everything about you. Dave misses all points. His method is not about guilt or innocence. It's about control that he lacks and sorely wants. It's about relinquishing that control to those like him who wish to control you. It's a scientific proven fact, and many folks throughout history have employed it: When one knows everything about you, one can learn to control you. Lastly, Daveys argument assumes those who have your information will protect you and your freedom and never cause you any harm and that government will protect you and your freedom without question or hesitance and any person who would sacrifice that protection must be guilty of some act. Such assumptions are ludicrous, grandiose, illogical, and downright dangerous. to hear them from an amateur radio operator is truly frightening.

Anyone should know the Chrysler story. They got eloped to Mitsubishi in the late 70's or early 80's, (forget the going Jap thing right there), then just like a hillbilly weddin',and married Daimler in the 90's (theres a German to go in yer eclectic stew too)
As for Ford (Ford Premier Auto Group), they also own big names like Jaguar and Land Rover. Even more kooky is the fact that Ford is buying engines from BMW for use in the new Range Rover. (head spinning yet ?).
Parts for every car mentioned so far come from places like Canada, Brazil, Mexico, China, Japan, and many other places.
And just who built that "japanese" car you love to hate. Coulda been Canada, or the good ol' USA, or other locations, possibly including Japan. (quite dizzying) Want a good, solid American car ? Buy a 72' Coupe DeVille or something.

Even if the FCC did have a lot of information on amateurs, what are they going to do with it? Unless they get complaints on you, it's just another few kB of data in their database.

Nope, it means that churches like yours have made God/Jesus into a hateful and angry "person" like yourself just so that you can justify it. God needs/wants the fruit of the spirit and not a religeous nut.

I hate to burst your bubble, but if it's a 10 meter amp, it is designed for use in frequencies from 24-35 MHz. Not all of them, but inside that range. Of course I doubt the policy police at ebay would know that 10 meters is on 28 & 29 MHz.

What "Palestinian land?" God gave ALL of that land to Israel when they crossed the Jordan River. Trouble is that they didn't drive out all of the Palestinians when God told them to. They have been a thorn in Israel's side since.

OK, how about an Icom R75? I monitor digital signals all the time with it.
ALE, RTTY, SITOR, NAVTEX, etc. How about a Kenwood TS-140? I send and receive digital signals all the time with it, such as PSK31. I've never DFed with them, but if I had the right antenna I could.

Too often, individuals like N3CVJ and private companies and government officials either see themselves as some type watchdog or are merely seeking to expand their power over others or financial gain. These scurvy folk are willing to sacrifice anyone's or everyone's freedom in order to do so, yours, mine, all of ours. Such Power-trippers are not new to this world or to our country but the patriots and people with common sense who share a dedication to preserving our individual freedoms see the reality of the actions of the power trippers and in effect are not swayed by them.

It is the desperate individual or when fear abounds, when these scurvy few will find an opportunity to play on our fears....what follows is an attempt to instill ideas, notions, policies, false promises and practices that threaten our freedoms. People like N3CVJ see this as an opportunity to rationalize their actions as protective and morally correct. The weak swallow the bait. N3CVJ is of the mindset that our country will become as the middle east with bombs in the street..he has on several occasion manifested his paranoid irrational growing fear of anarchy. Power trippers attempt to take such a fear and use it to offer or implement techniques that could be used to monitor everyone or assume that if one chooses to exercise their right to be free from intrusion and the right to be left alone, they must have something to hide. The John Birch Society sang the same song,as well as a few other extremist organizations that seek to erode our constitution.

Dave has argued that if one has nothing to hide, one shouldn't care if someone knows everything about you. Dave misses all points. His method is not about guilt or innocence. It's about control that he lacks and sorely wants. It's about relinquishing that control to those like him who wish to control you. It's a scientific proven fact, and many folks throughout history have employed it: When one knows everything about you, one can learn to control you. Lastly, Daveys argument assumes those who have your information will protect you and your freedom and never cause you any harm and that government will protect you and your freedom without question or hesitance and any person who would sacrifice that protection must be guilty of some act. Such assumptions are ludicrous, grandiose, illogical, and downright dangerous. to hear them from an amateur radio operator is truly frightening.

Get a life you are enamoured with Dave so much to the point of you making up stories, talk about ludacrious, and grandeous, and downright idiotic.

Anger is not a fruit of the spirit -- not on the list. Anger usually results when someone is pricked your pride.

Nope, not a mormon...one wife. Trouble is that you are angry AND you are sinning when you call someone a name. Scripture forbids this. Jesus says that if you call someone a fool you are in danger of Hell Fire (Matt 5:22). He also states that if you are angry with someone without cause you are in danger of the Judgement. What cause have I given you to be angry? I have opposed you on what your "church" teaches and told you that it is unbiblical. If I'm wrong show me, in scripture, that I am wrong. No, you just get angry. That's warning sign that pride is at work and He resists the proud.

Waste your time? It seems that you have all but memorized the Communist Manifesto. Which would you say is "more evil?" Goy? Is this from the same teaching that says that the word "Jew" came from the word for thief? You've been talking with June too much. Yes I know the word "Goy" and it just means someone who is not a Jew. It isn't an insult and is used interchangably with Gentile throughout the Hebrew scripture. Although Gentile more refers to the Greeks.

This doesn't sound like MARS (actually Military Affiliate Radio Service), since MARS members aren't likely to be transporting weapons or munitions. I doubt it would be a regular military station, since these are more professional and wouldn't be talking about someone under surveillance from the feds.

Well, that was the basic idea, or so he told me. As you say, the damn things were nigh on deaf, which meant that he could still get a fix if the guy was running some heat close by.

Of course I doubt he had much chocie in the radios, not often you found4 of anything that you could afford....

Personally, I used to use a meter i got from an old engine tune-up kit... thing hadda be 6 inches across...

LOL. I actually won one like that with my handheld. We took at the car in to the edge of the park and I rode the bike in with the portable.
Sheer chance that I had the bike that night at all, much lass that the guy I was riding with had a van...

Bingo.

(sigh)

yeah. Well, he didn't do TOO much of a number on the car... we hauled it out with a 4*4 pickup, and a chain, and he did manage to drive it home that night after we put about three cans of wire drier in it.

Power House, you are 100% correct. Indeed, the course control comes unlocked from the factory. So yes, it had continuous transmit and receive throughout the whole frequency coverage. What an awesome radio this is. Really can't be beat for the money.

By the way, the radio has SOLD. Thanks to everyone who replied.

See ya on the bands.....

You must be another fyne produkt of publik edjukashun, just like

She don't listen to NAFTA promoters. IF you like Rush (he don't go FAR enough), there are programs 1000 times better than his on SW radio. If you want the best SW radio for the least amount of $$$ (around $200), e mail me and I'll give you an 800 # to order it from. There are about 5 different channels to listen to, including 5070. On these freqs. you will hear the REAL news and people that are NOT on a string that can only go so far, before the people in power yank their string!

Oh Man, I can't believe their that old. :) I thought they were 18 year olds. :)

I feel young at 40 Yeah!
I myself enlisted at 16 but was not allowed to leave until my 17th birthday.
My parents signed the consent form right after I graduated. 2 months and 1 day after I turned 17, I was sitting my happy butt in San Antonio wonder what I did. 20 years later I never regretted a day, well after the fact.

You know how that goes. Sigh the memories. Sigh the steady pay check Sigh. Fond memories. Not so fond memories but memories all the same. Glad I still have some. Memory that is ;) Its a terrible thing to waste so enjoy it while you can. That is a serious comment.

I think there is a lot of wisdom here on this ole er newsgroup. Oops. Didn't mean to call it old.

Have a wonderful night.
Can you say 10-4
I knew you could :)
Good night.

Here's one O.T. who often thought of starting up a "boat anchor night" in my area. What fun! Although I haven't participated (yet) in anything like that, I have begun to start collecting old CB gear. I picked up a pair of Brownings, an R-27/S-23, a Tram Titan II, an old Pace 2300C, and an old Johnson 2 channel SSB rig, and various other old rigs. None of them have been modified in any way, and although they need some work, I sure am looking forward to firing 'em up and getting some of that good ol' audio out on the channels again. Now if I could find (in fairly good condition) my first CB rig, and old International Crystal Executive, 3 channel XMIT (I think) with the tunable RX... man that thing got HOT!

Good observation I.T. The "hotter" my old Hallicrafters gets, the better the audio is! Trying an Electro-Voice 619 on it now. What audio. Thanks for the super contribution.

How soon you forget Twirted about recent, and current history.
Remember the student organizations in the 60's that were responsible, in whole or in part, for bombings, such as the "Weathermen", "SDS - A.K.A Students for a Democractic Society", etc? Also don't forget about those groups that committed bank robberies, murders, and other forms of violence to further their revolutionary ambitions too, like the "Black Panthers", and the "Simbonese Liberation Army" - remember Patty Herst? I could go on about the KKK, hanging African-Americans, cross-burning, church bombings, and the 3 civil rights workers killed in Alabama in the 1960's etc.

And I suppose you also conveniently forgot about Tim McVeigh, paramilitary organizations, and the Oklahoma Federal Building bombing too.

Irrational? I don't think so. Remember ---->

"Americans were shocked to learn that the criminals in the Oklahoma City bombing were not foreign terrorists but men from the nation's heartland. The plot was not hatched in Beirut or Baghdad but in the backwoods of northeast Michigan by a paramilitary cell that, a now convicted, McVeigh formed with fellow, now convicted, conspirator Terry Nichols."

For GODS sake we are talking about CB RADIO NOT world or cultural fanatics. That's the problem with these POWER TRIPPING HAM RADIO GEEKS on this NG. Why cant you do something productive with your lives?? Go visit the hospital and cheer up some terminally ill children. Try volunteering at the local Salvation Army at lunch. Try your hand at something closer to home. Fix that crooked picture on the wall or do some honey does on. Say something kind to your spouse or kids. YOU FREAKS THINK THAT SOME POOR SMUCK TALKING ON 27.555 IS A DAM THREAT TO NATIONAL SECURITY. GROW UP. GET A LIFE and be a real part of the world. Make a positive contribution to society. GO OUT AND GET A SPECIAL STATION LICENSE ,GET SOME SCOUT GROUP OR SCIENCE CLASS ON THE AIR. Ham radio is in a dire strait for FRESH BLOOD!! After the flood of 5wpm geeks dies off along with their holier than thou attitudes.. HAM RADIO WILL FADE INTO THE INTERNET BACK GROUND ONCE AGAIN!!. Then the FCC (your buddies) can divvy up your frequencies to the highest bidder. Then the only thing you will hear on 3.875 or 144.125 will be the faint sound of a teletype spouting figures to a supercomputer half way around the world. DO SOMETHING TO PRESERVE your way of life and leave us CBers alone.

CAN YOU HEAR ME NOW!!!!!

Power House, you are 100% correct. Indeed, the course control comes unlocked from the factory. So yes, it had continuous transmit and receive throughout the whole frequency coverage. What an awesome radio this is. Really can't be beat for the money.

By the way, the radio has SOLD. Thanks to everyone who replied.

To see what will work, the cheapest way out is to get some lamp cord/zip wire, split it in half, trim to resonant length and connect using coax. Suspend from the roof of the building against the side so as to have a vertical dipole. Little invested and it will tell you if that sort of arrangement is going to work at a low elevation.

Please provide proof that the bible is more then a collection of stories that was inaccurately passed from mouth to mouth for generations before being written down, and then inaccurately translated from language to language before it became the so called "KJV" that is so widely believed word for word as "TRUTH"?

Dave, as frequencies in this range have been used by the US military, I suggest that you refrain from transmitting there, as "YOUR part for the war effort". (Or at least turn off the Roger Beep & Echo Mic as to not disturb the US military covert operations specialist who may be on the opposite sideband. ;-)

I would have to go back and try to find it, but I remember in a recent past issue of either "Monitoring Times" or "Scanning USA" a reader report hearing what sounded like "tactical communications" on the freeband, and wanted to know if it could be some domestic paramilitary group.

So now the United Nations = god? Israel (as we know it today) was created by the UN in 1948, and they've been trying to exile all the Palestinian people ever since so as to steal their homes and land.

That entire subthread ignores the major point; That since Israel allows Palastinians in it's country without the threat of being blwon up, it's the PLO and it's folloers that are being 'intollerant'.

What the (beep) this has to do with CB seems at issue, also.

Back in the good old days of scot-free 49mhz phone-jamming (about 6 years ago), I'd occasionally be driving around the 'hood and I'd make an instant 3-way call with someone I'd nailed before. Typically it was the bored, fat homemakers who'd hear my wisecracking intrusions and drone, "iiiit's that guyyyyy agaiiiiin". So, as it turned out, they gave me my handle. A bit generic perhaps, but I didn't pick it out for myself.

I could legally change my name to That Guy Again... this is no weirder than the costume maker who changed her name to Animal X or the play-money mfr who changed his name to Love 22. And some guy named Jesus H. Christ keeps getting traffic tickets in Santa Monica.

316. Interface your PC to a Cobra 2000GTL

Hello,

Believe it or not, back in 1983 I interfaced a Uniden Grant CB to a Commodore 64 computer. The purpose was to use a computer to control the PLL on the CB so I could switch frequencies on the CB instead of using external switches. I expanded the program to use a joystick to move channels up/down, and the fire button started and stopped a scanner, so I could scan between 2 frequencies.

In 1986 I rewrote the program to run on a Tandy 1000 PC and a joystick, using the parallel port on the PC to interface to the radio, a Cobra 2000GTL. The interface consisted of 8 NPN switching transistors (2N2222 I think) and a diode on each line that protected the circuit.

What the program does is turn on a pin (+5v) on the parallel port, and in turn would switch ground on the transistors emitter, and this line would then ground a pin on the PLL of the CB, just like a switch (rotary knob on the CB) would do.

Below is the program. I don't remember the wiring on the PC parallel port, nor do I remember how the wiring was on the CB. But I'm sure someone out there can test the pinout on the parallel port of the PC and figure out how each pin turns on and off exactly how the Cobra 2000GLT expected it's PLL to be programmed.

It's written to run under DOS with GW-BASIC. See http://www.geocities.com/KindlyRat/GWBASIC.html

Do as you wish with it, since I no longer use CB (I have a ham radio license now) and I have no use for the program. I'm sure someone will find it useful and help as a learning experience with TTL circuits. Enjoy!

Don't touch it! You really won't "gain" anything by doing this. I too own a Grant XL and trust me, it'll do a fine job as long as you don't try to wring every last watt out of it. If you MUST increase your power, there are other ways that, while I cannot endorse, ARE simply better and cleaner.

Improve your antenna first, you'll reap true "gain" on both transmit AND receive. Also, adding a SP-1a speech processor is a better option. (Loud and CLEAR audio!) I hope this helps and is taken in the spirit in which it is truly meant...to help. Take care. :-)

I actually own one of these beasts, and I followed the advice of The Professor (flame away) regarding antenna installation on what I perceived as a no ground plane vehicle.
There is plenty of metal in the superstructure (these have a space frame) to form the ground plane.
Mount the antenna where ever you see fit, (mine is a hood mount) then run the ground (braided) to a structural member (clean it bare first).
Works like a charm!

I hate auctions.

It's just a way of trying to get more for something then it's worth.

Look a little closer. This isn't an auction, it's one of those Simple solution for you... don't go to auctions, or eBay to buy things that you need.

My friend something is worth what someone is willing to pay for it. It's just that simple.

I really believe that if you really thought for yourself that you might learn that what you have been fed is a line of bull.

Then again, there must always be sheep for the shepherd.

NEXTEL is even worse.

If you check the sale ads, you can get FRS radios for 5 or 10 bucks after rebate. I got a set of Cobra FRS 105's for 5 or 10 bucks each after rebate. Of course features like 38 subcodes cost extra.

They are fun as hell at public gatherings! I like the ones who think it's their private channel. If I was an FCC nazi, I could cite Part 95 to them about no exclusive channels...

One thing very important!

Check the value and condition of the filter cap on the screen supply.
If it leaks or value changes significantly thenthe swing choke and the filter cap can resonate at 120 Hz and by by trransformer. It is then a phone call to Peter W Dahl.

ps:

I would implement the screen voltage regulator as described in QEX several years ago.

30 miles away and all of sudden the Steelers

How about those Giants, gave away

A young ventriloquist was touring the clubs; and one night he was doing a show in a small town in Arkansas. With his dummy on his knee, he started going through his usual dumb blonde jokes, when a blonde woman in the 4th row stood on her chair and started shouting: "I've heard enough of your stupid blonde jokes! What makes you think you can stereotype women in that way? What does the color of a person's hair have to do with her worth as a human being? It's guys like you who keep women like me from being respected at work and in the community; and from reaching our full potential as a person.
Because you and your kind continue to perpetuate discrimination against not only blondes, but women in general... and all in the name of humor.

"The embarrassed ventriloquist began to apologize, when the blonde yelled: "You stay out of this, mister! I'm talking to that little shit sitting on your knee!"

Just a suggestion, there are some MURS discussion groups on yahoo groups you might get some good information there. I know Dave will jump on me for saying this but Radio Shack carries the radios for MURS and I believe they are rechargeable, and possibly have the capability for an external antenna but don't quote me on that aspect of them.
Hope this is of some help.

Channel 27 - Call in USB - Europe

Now exists a call channel in USB, into the authorized 40 channels of the Citizen's Band, to not be need to use unauthorized frequencies. We will motivate the CB operators to use USB, where the QRM is much less that in the other modulations.

I have an "Extra Channels" board here. It was pulled "I believe" from a Cobra 142GTL. It "was" working when pulled.. The set was being converted to stock. It has 2 crystals on it as well as about 10 other components. The PC board is about the size of a bigger postage stamp. The switch is set up for on-off-on. Any idea what it may be worth? Are they still being used or in demand? Please reply direct, my news server doesn't work sometimes. Thanks

Which is the same radio as the Connex, just the "cooler" Cobra name.
Makes the radio more of a collector's piece. I sold mine becasue I had just too many radios and something had to go. The Connex could do 40 watts on either AM or SSB, although I turned mine down to about 30 on AM (15w dead key & up to 30w during modulation) and that was just loafing for this radio. 40w PEP on SSB all day long no problem. I never even bothered to run an amplifier with it.

Where are you located, by the way? I'm in Dallas and go by 418. We might be able to meet up on the air.

That depends. Some models utilized tubes that had a much higher plate dissipation than the circuits they were used in called for, and with some playing around with plate voltages you could net quite a few more watts. But then you had to boost the modulator stage, to keep up with the increase in carrier power, and once you were done, it was usually less reliable then it originally was. I have vivid memories of some of those "hopped up" tube rigs running cherry red plates. Luckily, back then, Radio Shack had lifetime free replacement tube guarantees.

Tube circuitry had similar limitations as transistors. They just worked a little differently. Sometimes you could just "swap" out one tube for another and gain a little, but there was no real "magic" involved. It's just easier to pull out a tube from a socket, then it was to unsolder a transistor.

So true. Back then I was living on income from a part time job in a bank, and money from radio repairs. A teenager usually doesn't have much in the way of funds. I think that was part of the magic. Scraping together a bunch of junk, and making something work, had more of a rewarding effect than just paying cash for something.

Great idea! Sure beats those little 3/4 inch wide meters they used on some smaller mobile rigs back then, and a heck of a lot better than those stupid 4 or 5 bar LED types you see today.

Sometimes you bite the bear, sometimes the bear bites you. Luck was always a big part of the game. Sometimes the choice between making a
between coming in 1st or 2nd. A choice you usually make by flipping a coin or similar.

That's why we usually ran in pairs. A driver and a navigator. I much prefered navigating, but I get motion sickness, if I look away from the road for too long, to read a map or watch a meeter while we're moving.
So Sometimes I drove. But I couldn't help watching the meter once in a while (It's addictive).

Hopefully not much water got into the engine. You're lucky it didn't hydrolock, or get water into the oil.

Reminds me of an old saying that I used to tell a few buddies that had a penchant for running their boats aground: "If you se a seagull walking on water, you're not having a religious experience".

The thing to be aware of is that the Turbo's transmitter is "dirty" (Spurious and harmonics are way out of spec), as is the Ranger 2970, which has the same amplifier design. In a mobile application (the 2970) this is not much of a problem, but the Turbo is a base, and as such you will probably make your neighbors very angry in a short period of time.
I would opt for the "plain" Saturn, as the lower power radio is much cleaner."

read the fine print scott, those radios are FCC approved for MURS. It can be set for business band or MURS frequencies.

"Important Note: The FCC has made five of the nine VHF "color dot" frequencies LICENSE FREE.

The Multi-Use Radio Service (MURS), as it is called, is an ideal way for anyone, including a small business-type user, to legally use VHF business radios such as our #19-1217, without the necessity of an FCC Business Radio License. FCC license required (except for MURS operation). You must have a valid FCC Business Radio Service License before you can enjoy the benefits of a business 2-way radio. The license is easy to get, and virtually any business, school, hospital, clinic, church or organization can qualify.
There is no test, but the FCC requires a nominal fee. As licensee, you are responsible for proper operation of all radios operating under your license.

No, the topic was you somehow justifying, defending, condoning, trivializing or otherwise attempting to sweep under the rug, how freebanding and ignoring the FCC rules that govern the CB service, should not be a criminal offense. Since you cannot attack the facts, you attack the messenger, and you have since been attempting to shift that focus away from this onto how I somehow lie, and why. But the reality of this is true or not, it makes not the slightest bit of difference toward the criminality of what you are doing right now on the freeband.

Really? By who's standards? Like it or not, all you need to have to belong to the CB group is a CB. I have a few DOZEN CBs so I guess I qualify. I doubt if your lawbreaking, sociopathic attitude, would be one that CBers should be emulating. So I don't think you represent the best that CB has to offer.

> neither is Lelnad. Everyone knows
> Im way down to earth and in touch way more with cbers views than

There you go again presuming to speak for, and representing "everyone". But there's still that lack of support. NO ONE has come forth supporting you. You're just speaking a bunch of guff, and somehow believe we agree with it. You're so off the rails, you don't even realize it. And that's one of the main symptoms of NPD; the belief that you're right and the world's crazy. When a bunch of people speak out and say that you're right, then maybe, I'll give it some thought, but until then, you pissing in the wind fella.

Where? Post it. No one except you and nebo, approve of Lou's actions. Most people would prefer to be emailed of any changes in Lou's products (Which BTW, have been the same crap that he's been peddling since the late 70's, with some minor updates), rather than see SPAM in the newsgroup.

> (or did you miss those posts?) and disapproves of you and Dogies

There's a difference between how I conduct myself, and how others do. I have never SPAM'ed this group, nor flooded the group with non-sensical juvenille name calling attacks. I'm just nailing you to the wall for just how phoney, hypocritical, and sociopathic your really are. Every post you make, cements this diagnosis. The more you claim to speak for the world, the more outlandish and bizzarre your claims are, the clearer this is to see.

A colloquialism that seems to be lost on you. Your eyes are brown because you are full of something brown, and it isn't chocolate. This is one of the reasons why I know you're not older than I am. So many old cliche's, sayings, and hyperbole are lost on you. And older person would be able to puck up on these. You obviously cannot.

The counter, of course, is for you to state that your eyes are blue (or green or whatever), to which the rebutte is "Then you're a quart low". Try it out on your "friends" the next time you get together. You might be the hit of the party.

Another sign of a compulsive mental disorder. The overwhelming desire to win at all costs. The fact that I'm not interested in making you eat crow (I hear it tastes just like chicken!), in the same vein that you stalk me, is a concept that you cannot understand.

I educate her, that there are some people in this world that are "just not right" upstairs. You are a prime example of such a person. Teaching her to recognize these types of people, the power trips that they live on, the manipulating, and controlling desires that they have, will better serve her when she starts having relationships down the road.

I'll tell you what. I'll tell you the name, town, and the appoximate year (I don't remember exactly), if you reveal to the rest of us, your full name (Verifiable of course). Whadda you say?

After all, it's hypocritical of someone like you, who hides behind an anonymous screen name, to be giving me guff over revealing personal information.

So, what are you saying here? That you're not really the person, whom you are projecting onto this newsgroup? Ok, I'll buy that, but you do realize that if that is true, it makes you a liar of a full order of magnitude beyond anything you've accused me of.

So which are you, a sociopath, or a liar?

No, it wasn't. This case was handled through a local court, and involved a neighbor pressing charges over offensive language that he intercepted over his stereo, eminating from a neighboring CBer. The Cber (Who I knew personally), didn't have the money to fight the charges, and ended up paying a $300 fine for "disturbing the peace". The judge decided that this type of intrusion was no different than someone playing a loud stereo in front of your house. The FCC was not involved. Radio law was not brought into the picture. It was a simple matter of noise pollution into a neighbor's house.

That's a lie, as you were never interested in rational discussion. Your sole effort was designed to malign my character in front of the newsgroup, in order to somehow justify your illegal activities. But no matter how "bad" I may look, you're still in violation of federal law.

Really? Were does WebTV allow you to "store" anything? And why would anyone be so obsessed as to have a "dossier" on another person on a public newsgroup? See what I mean about your psychoses? You let them out each time you make statements like that.

Another deviate sexual reference. You're one step from the psyche ward, and don't even know it.

Delusions of a conspiracy, and the resultant paranoia. Another classic sign.

If it were a matter of me vs. this supposed observatory, you'd have a case. The fact is that every site that I accessed, agreed with my claim (Which is why I made it. I'd be silly to claim something that was easily proven wrong). So tell me, why do all the sites that deal with hard core DXing, have differing information from what you claim? Someone is wrong here, and I doubt it's the people who do this regularly.

Maybe you're confused about the correlation beteen sunspot activity and ionospheric effects. It's possible to have more sunspot activity, per-se, without having a higher magnitude of propagation. I was never dealing with the magnitude of sunspots, but the effects on radio wave propagation (Usually expressed in MUF). In those terms this cycle was WEAKER than the previous 2.

Eu contraire, the topic WAS about you. You and your illegal radio activities. You attempted to shift that topic to me, and my supposed "lies", in a failed attempt to kill my credibility. Your overwhelming fear is that someone might agree with me, and start your house-of-cards-like fairyland falling into reality.

You have never spent as much time on anyone else before. Not Aaron, not Frank, not even Doug. You've become obssesed with discrediting me. That fact alone tells me that you somehow feel threatened with what I say.
I'm sorry if you don't like the person who looks back at you in the mirror. But, that's not my problem.

Now this one I like. Can you imagine the sheer irony of this claim?
Twisty, the "information detective", who has nothing more than a WebTV and a phone? Glen Roberts would laugh at you as much as I am. The even funnier irony is that you, who proports to be this "Info geek" doesn't even have the cajones to post his own name. Talk about a credibility gap.

So, how many people have you scammed?

I know people who play in this arena. All of them have the latest horsepower PC's with all the trimmings, and have office resources that would rival a large corporation.

You make the claim, you have to follow through. If you can easily verify a claim by picking up the phone, then you need to do it. Don't make up a list of excuses why you can't or won't. You have the number of the CB shop, so call it

>.Lelnad want me to come in to a hammia room and then he

I'm hardly "upset" But I find it curious that you demand proof to back up claims, and then when it's provided for you, you make up a lame excuse why you don't follow through with it.

Nothing offends me on a newsgroup. I'm merely pointing out your hypocricy

You would do well to follow your own advice.

Why? People who do nothing wrong, have nothing to fear, so there is no reason to hide. No matter how many claims of squelching "freedom", you might make, the simple truth is that when people go to lengths to conceil something about themselves, it is most often something that they are afraid to let others find out. Either for legal reasons or for potentially embarrassing ones.

> You made a comment concerning when I "get in my forties"..Dave, you are > a child compared to me..why do you think I refer to you as youngster and

You SAY that, but your ACTIONS betray you. Your attitude is of a spoiled, disenfranchised, 20-something who is freshly reeling from a poor social experience in high school. Couple that with your lack of common colloquialisms that are well known among older people, as well as a strong abhoration toward the established rule of society, leads me to believe that you're not being honest about your age. You see, I was much like you are, when I was in my 20's. That's why I can see it so plainly now.

Maybe, but I see current-production items on Ebay going for higher than list price, for beat-up used ones.

I won't go to auctions that are populated by bidders who don't know the value of what they are bidding on, because the end result is usually very inflated prices. And Ebay has an awful lot of ignorant bidders.

You see what may be worth something in one region may be worth something else in another region. Travelers will know that.

So don't bid on auctions. Some people just like the sport and really aren't in it to save money. Its sort of like hunting. More often than not hunters aren't out to kill the animal because they are hungry.

Can you say, to each his own?
Sure, I knew you could.

I'm as law and order as they come, assuming there is some small justfication for the law. Thing is, nobody has EVER explained properly why such things are problems; nobody ever managed to justify such laws. And don't give me 'rfi complaints', I'm not buying, since there were far more complinats from suppsoedly 'legal' emissions.

NO!

In France, ch.27 (27.275) is an AM calling channel.
In Germany SSB (and AM) is only allowed from ch.4 to ch.15, so for them ch.27 in SSB is an unothorised SSB channel!

So why not take ch.4 (27.005) as a calling channel, like the ch.4 up (27.455) for the illegal pals?

Correct me if I'm wrong; wasn't that what Ham radio was supposed to be about? Too bad they got so caught up in arbitrary laws in that service. They killed off HAM radio, I think, or at least kept out a lot of people who would be good HAMs today.

AS would you with the cber that you say was busted.

>A failed attempt at redirecting.

No Dave it wasnt a redirect it was a claim you made and then snaked away from when I asked about it...it WAS the topic, along with your other lies.

>No, the topic was you somehow justifying, >defending, condoning, trivializing or otherwise >attempting to sweep under the rug, how >freebanding and ignoring the FCC rules that >govern the CB service, should not be a >criminal offense.

Now I see why I was given a rod and staff to rule and lord over you andN8 and Nad..post this statement I made....I will continue to post your lies since you cannot attack the facts, you attack the messenger, and you have since been attempting to shift that focus away from this into a quest for personal information on me.,. but the reality of this is, it makes not the slightest bit of difference toward your liesyou attempt to peddle.

>Quick, fabricate some piece of E-mail, so that >you can save yourself >from another of your lies.

The lies are yours..everyone knows it..EVERYone.

>Who is everyone?

Those who have the intellect to think for themselves and not allow you the control you seek ofimposing your false morality onto others.
Those who are intenet geeks and have proved you wrong for their own satisfaction and nothing else....do not delude yourself (whoops...too late!)..there are many.

> You mean the tons of newsgroup participants >who have echoed their support for you?

Those too.

>Wait!, that hasn't happened has it? More >evidence of your delusions.

You flip-flop rather quickly whenever the situation is to your advantage.You claimed absence of positive proof is not necessarily negative proof...oh, but I am the only one to notice these things.and view you as you are...a hypocriticalt lid and pizz poor example to hammie radio. so you have little more to cry over.

I asked him to post it. You may not agree, but too bad.

>And E-mail request is 2 way, and forum flood >is one way.

The only floods in 4 years have all come from your little clique.

>You want Lou to update you periodically,

No....the group...I requested he post it to the group.

>And I'll take a page from your book and state >that "the group" does not want it.

You have alreay been informed you are not representative of the group based on your claims that most are federal criminals for something as mundane as DXing.
Choosing to accept reailty of the way you are viewed has no bearing on me. Keep that in mind.

>There are more people who are botherd by >this crap, then support it (Which to date >consists on only you and your sycophant).

Again, using your words.."no posting history equals no credibilty"..those who are "bothered" by it consist of you and Grif...your stated disdains toward cb disqualifies your opinion in the context of this group.

>by E-mail, that's your choice.

And it's your choice to take off or not read it.

It's awfully presuptuous of you to once again >attempt to speak for the >whole group if you think WE want this crap.

Im part of the cb group,,you're not,

>Really? By who's standards? Like it or not, all >you need to have to belong to the CB group is >a CB.

Hahaha....you want I should have Tim wield the staff over you for awhile?...one needs no cb to be here....anyone can visit and be a part.......but compared to me, I really must say you are not part of the cb group...you like to preach and impose and control and you attack those who rebuff your rants. .

>So I don't think you represent the best that CB >has to offer.

Wasn't about ME , Davey boy...I never claimed to be a role model for anyone,,,matter of fact,,I have many times in the past stated I am no ones mother..sort of like where you lied and said that you don't preach morality then do exactly that. Whether you like it or not, by signing your call you represent ALL of hammie radio.

neither is Lelnad. Everyone knows
Im way down to earth and in touch way more with cbers views than you..hell Dave,

>There you go again presuming to speak for, >and representing "everyone". But there's still >that lack of support. NO ONE has come forth >supporting you. You're just speaking a bunch >of guff, and somehow believe we agree with it.

Listen carefully,,you are not "we".
The Sporadic article Lelnad wet himself with earned me email and friends around the world...many I still DX with on a regular basis......I'm not talking a few pizzed upon hammies like yourself that claim they represent the best interests of cbers..I'm talking HUNDREDS of folks..but a self-describedhammie non-fan of DX would have no clue the cohesion of worldwide strangers that can be achieved via a DX club or 2...or maybe you do and you can't get past the envy that you're so eat up with. Whatever the deal, it is painfully and acutely obvious you have serious anger issues needing attention. Who upset you so bad that you are reduced to venting and attacking internet strangers?

>You're so off the rails, you don't even realize it. >And that's one of the main symptoms of NPD; >the belief that you're right and the world's >crazy. When a bunch of people speak out and >say that you're right, then maybe, I'll give it >some thought, but until then, you pissing in the >wind fella.

Actually, if you had any sense of feeling, you would have realized long ago that is your leg, not the wind.

--
you call anyone that does what you did and LESS, a federal criminal and say they are of moral decay......(ROAR)...hehhe!

>It's not my fault if the truth hurts, and you have >trouble dealing with it.

Denial ain't the river in Egypt.
You were the one that said you aren't better merely because you got away with it. This is how your hypocrisy began.

Consensus shows the group approves of Lou

>Where? Post it. No one except you and nebo, >approve of Lou's actions. Most people would >prefer to be emailed of any changes in Lou's >products

You don't know what MOST would want, as you aren't even aware MOST don't incorrectly consider DXing and freebanding a federal offense as you ignorantly do.

(or did you miss those posts?) and disapproves of you and Dogies and Nads and N8s ways.

>There's a difference between how I conduct >myself, and how others do.

Correct. MOST haven't defended "Aaron" and N8 as you have. MOST weren't named as a member of a posse of trolling hate that included N8, as you were.

>Why couldn't he just E-mail you back?

My email is shut off except for those on my private email list.

>Really?
>Other people have had no problem E-mailing >you.

Other people are on my list.

>As have I. Don't tell me, I'm on your "private" >list?

No, you're not. My spamblock wasn't activated then.....I have a personal assistant.

>On WebTV?

Actually, its MSN.

>Surely you jest.

Not at all. It's how I was so effective in having those who would harass me through terms of service violations...tossed.

> That's a TOY.

Pretty close.

>But heck, since you think so highly of Lou F., >put him on your "buddy" list, it can't be that >hard for you to do. Or do you have to ask your >personal assistant?

Actually, I WOULD have to email her to have it implemented.

>And your eyes are brown.

Your guessing skills equal your lying skills, communication skills, spelling skills, and self-professed (grandiose, no less) psychiatric skills.

>A colloquialism that seems to be lost on you.
>Your eyes are brown because you are full of >something brown, and it isn't chocolate.

Oh, no,,I understood the implied insult,,I merely tossed it as it didn't apply. No need for me to go on as how I feel yourkid is gonna reject you some day, as it isn't on topic..I merely toss it aside and refocus on your cartoon world.

>This is one of the reasons why I know you're >not older than I am.

Oh, I'm not? (sigh)...
OK then, next argument.....

>So many old cliche's, sayings, and hyperbole >are lost on you.

Dave, it's the "view" thing...as in your inability to view yourself as other do..as many are busting a gut as they read that last line you attempted.

>And older person would be able to puck up on >these. You obviously cannot.

Whatever you say, Cap'n.

>The counter, of course, is for you to state that >your eyes are blue (or green or whatever), to >which the rebutte is "Then you're a quart low".
>Try it out on your "friends" the next time you >get together. You might be the hit of the party.

I am anyway......everywhere I go. I need not reduce myself to insulting another to make myself any "hit of the party". My popularity needs not be at the expense of others.

Why can't you give us a name of the cber that you claim was busted for disorderly?

>Because I know it bothers you.

You go on thinking that.

>Because it's true. Why else would you keep >asking for it?

.(chuckle) I love your inability to see yourself as others do.

>Those same "others" that readily post their >support for you? Ooops, I forgot, they don't >exist in reality, only in your mind.

"Absence of positve proof....."
Besides, the truth needs no support from anyone nor anything.

,it only illustrates your lies, Dave. It has never bothered me when you can not backa lie I point out..backing it up would make me eat crow and you wouldn't have the pathological label.

>Another sign of a compulsive mental disorder. >The overwhelming desire to win at all costs.

It was never a "win" or "lose" siytuation with me Dave,,,I even stated it before.....the desire to "win" anything became painfully apparent when you began fancying yourself skilled in cartoon diagnoses to accompany your offtopic insults. The only thing you "win" is the title of the pathological liar of the ng.

>The fact that I'm not interested in making you >eat crow (I hear it tastes just like chicken!), Merely something else you are repeating that of whcich you were told.....someone, take this staff, I need to get the shears..

>in the same vein that you stalk me, is a >concept that you cannot understand.

Stalking, is illegal. Like so many others, your interpretations of such is highly incorrect.

I do express concern for the welfare of your child, however. Watching you admit you get your jollies by attempts at "bothering" (snicker) me speaks of a much deeper rooted problem of which the lies are but merely a symptom of.

>I educate her, that there are some people in >this world that are "just not right" upstairs. You >are a prime example of such a person.

Do you explain to her how you arrived at the Warner Brothers Acme school of preponderance?

>Teaching her to recognize these types of >people, the power trips that they live on, the >manipulating, and controlling desires that they >have, will better serve her when she starts >having relationships down the road.

You're gonnad damage that little girls psyche b4 she even gets started, aincha?

Repeat after me "The Roadrunner didn't really push Wil E off the Cliff".

>And for the record, it was NOT a "disorderly", >it was for "disturbing >the peace", a slight difference.

No, it wasn't..and now that everyone else knows it was Philly as well, they are free to laugh at you along with myself.

Clarify it but don't you dare qualify it..cause..you know.....it would hurt me or something.....(AHHAHAA)

>I'll tell you what. I'll tell you the name, town, >and the appoximate year (I don't remember >exactly), if you reveal to the rest of us, your full >name (Verifiable of course). Whadda you say?

AHAHHAHHAhAHAAHAHAHAAHHAHAHAHAHAHHAAHAHHAHAHHAHAHAHAHAHHAHAHAHAHAHAHAH.what do I say?.......What do I SAY?.............WHAT DO I SAY? AHAHAHAHHAHA I SAY YOU NEED A VACATION DAVEY BOY!!!

>After all, it's hypocritical of someone like you, >who hides behind an anonymous screen

That is how protocol suggests you be when in chats and discuss forums. I remind you cb is anonymous by use of handles. Look, you CHOSE to put your name to your junk, even though you were warned that you were really f yourself up. You have no right to be indignant and demand private information from another simply because you chose to divulge such info that was responsible for destroying your rep.

>name, to be giving me guff over revealing >personal information.

It's only personal if it was you that was busted, which it wasn't cause it never happened.
>I know, that's a strange concept, but....

No stranger than your pathological lying for no reason other than to lie.

>And you would know, a person with obvious >signs of personality

Signs? Are you referring to the cartoon quotes I allow you or my ability to have you trail me as the Pied Piper?

>disorders, including Antisocial, and a touch of >Narcissism and OCD.

Have you actually ever stopped to question your words...have you ever given thought to the idea that your daughter may very well read your mental anguishes?

>Not for a few years yet, but when she does, >hopefully she'll have a better idea of the crazy >world she's now living in.

Oh, don't you worry, Dave, I am certain, that if she ever stumbles upon your rants here, she will have no doubt. I hope suicide doesn't run in your family.

__Do you really believe that fancying yourself an armchair psychiatrist qualifies you to know another based on what he allows you in your dream cartoon world?

>So, what are you saying here? That you're not >really the person, whom you are projecting >onto this newsgroup?

You're interpretations are failing you again.

>Ok, I'll buy that,

Why wouldn't you? It's your sell.

> but you do realize that if that is true, it makes >you a liar of a full order of magnitude beyond >anything you've accused me of.
>So which are you, a sociopath, or a liar?

A barefoot cracker country bumpkin.

I offered to email you as well concerning your dilemma

>I have no dilemma, except what you fabricate >in your own sociopathic mind.

LOL....uh......I didn't fabricate anything..YOU did..the cber getting busted.

>It's true no matter what you might think,

No, it's not.

>and the fact that you can't prove it otherwise, >is not proof of a >lie. Absence of positive proof, is not >necessarily negative proof.

Your intellect shines here...ask one to prove a negative.. It was always a federal matter until the recent legislation.

>No, it wasn't. This case was handled through a >local court, and involved a neighbor pressing >charges over offensive language that he >intercepted over his stereo, eminating from a >neighboring CBer. The Cber (Who I knew >personally), didn't have the money to fight the >charges, and ended up paying a $300 fine for >"disturbing the peace". The judge decided that >this type of intrusion was no different than >someone playing a loud stereo in front of your >house. The FCC was not involved. Radio law >was not brought into the picture. It was a >simple matter of noise pollution into a >neighbor's house.

And lemme guess,,,it was SEALED? LMAO!

but you refused and proceeded to air your laundry in front of the group.

>You attempted to "air" what you thought you >could make an issue of.

Not true, davey..I was the one that asked you many times to take your cries to email to AVOID making an issue in the group, to "avoid" airing your shortcomings and personal problems.

>That's a lie,

Davey, you are over the brink, son. MANy many times I have asked you to take it to email and you refused.The posts are there showing as much and not everyone has the short attention span you wish they did.

>you were never interested in rational >discussion. Your sole effort was designed to >malign my character in front of the newsgroup, >in order to somehow justify your illegal >activities.

I never justified my activities to anyone despite your again-contradictory claim (lie).
You have redundantly claimed this over and over but I don't justify anything as I am doing nothing wrong, certainly nothing of the magnitude to which you were involved in.

>But no matter how "bad" I may look, you're still >in violation of federal law.

You look worse every day, Davey. You need to take your football and go home and come back when you have your game face on and a smile.
Work on the interpretations, too. It does not make one a "federal criminal".

everyone knows that Davey,

>The ever evasive and aloof "everyone" again.

How different is it from your poor selection and usage of "we"?

>I'd call you a broken record, but that was >probably before your time too, and you >wouldn't get it.

Right...my vinyl collection began in the summer of 61' but you were only a suckling then.

>Actually it started because I corrected several >of your techincal >faux-pas, (like that real gooder about legal >power skip stations a >thousand miles away, having the power to >walk on a legal local station >a half-mile away, as if path loss didn't exist, >and your faulty >information about the magnitude of cycle 23 >compared to previous >cycles) which you didn't take to very well. >Since then you have >launched a campaign to malign and discredit >me at every turn

Oh Davey,,your lies are getiting careless.....that is total bullshit and you know it....your hate goes way before that......I have tons and tons of your bullshit b4 that.

>Really? Were does WebTV allow you to >"store" anything?

Davey,,,you really have fallen. Webtv has plenty of storage..just not anything like a pc.
You rebuffed my offers education in the matters to which you are ignorant, but you continue to learn from me (shrug) Oh well. Glad to be of assistance.

>And why would anyone be so obsessed as to >have a "dossier" on another person on a >public newsgroup?

I wondered the same thing myself, yet here you are begging for personal information on me.

>See what I mean about your psychoses? You >let them out each time you make statements >like that.

It was another of your failed interpretations.
I wasn't referring to one on the newsgroup. The gist, which was lost only on yourself, was that if you wish a dossier on one, I can assist.

you started humping my leg as soon as I arrived

>Another deviate sexual reference.

Well, it's what you're doing. If the truth hurts change your devaint behavior, although being close friends and in business with a sex perv, the irony is more than likely lost on you...yet again.

>You're one step from the psyche ward, and >don't even know it.

And this would bother you because.....of your irrational and paranoid beliefs of stalkers and anarchy and insolence and moral decay?
Ahahhahaahha! No doubt, Davey, my boy, no doubt about it!!

and I penned you up with your leader Dogie and Lelnad and Sparky and N8.

>Delusions of a conspiracy,

Not at all,,merely reflecting on Aarons call to duty mentioning yourself, N8, Gilliland, and Lelnad as the ones who this group will always "have to deal with".

>and the resultant paranoia. Another classic >sign.

I pointed that out with your fears of anarchy, moral decay and chaos in the streets beginning with disregarding simple rules of society such as dxing and skip chasing..

Concerning cycle 23, your hammie self should have been educated by now but you just seem adamant and content on remaining ignorant and telling big lies. For your information, the Royal Observatory of Belgium is the WORLDS OFFICIAL SUNSPOT RECORD KEEPER. Please proceed with your ignorant and arrogant attempts at telling the world that the observatory is wrong but you are right.

>If it were a matter of me vs. this supposed >observatory, you'd have a case. The fact is >that every site that I accessed, agreed with my >claim (Which is why I made it. I'd be silly to >claim something that was easily proven >wrong). So tell me, why do all the sites that >deal with hard core DXing, have differing >information from what you claim?

It's not what I claim, although you would like nothing better than to infer such. Your sites are wrong. They are all wrong if they give different information than that of which the observatory records.

>Someone is wrong here, and I doubt it's the >people who do this regularly.

Exactly. It's you, as usual.

>Maybe you're confused about the correlation >beteen sunspot activity and ionospheric >effects. It's possible to have more sunspot >activity, per-se, without having a higher >magnitude of propagation. I was never dealing >with the magnitude of sunspots, but the effects >on radio wave propagation (Usually expressed >in MUF). In those terms this cycle was >WEAKER than the previous 2.

"Maybe" nothing. This cycle had more activity in terms of higher raw mean sunspot scores. Once again, it appears your interpretations are again responsible for your gaffe.

>I have done nothing but point out your mental >deficiencies, as >evidenced by you exhibiting the symptoms >that are documented in >DSM-IV.It's not my fault if the truth hurts.

Hey, I can be crazier than a loon.

>Good! Recognition and acceptance of the >condition, is the first step toward recovery.

But I don't want to recover..I'm ecstatic in my place..I don't need nor want someone like you telling me I am living incorrectly or "wrong" when I am bothering no one.
But this denail thing you have concerning your lies, well, you can't even recognize your ailments..this was illustrated in your interpretation skills, memory and recall skills, communication skills...gee, Dave..the list goes on..and on..

>Once again, for you to accuse another of >"lying", the burden of proof >is on you to prove it.

And once again you dont understand the system you are always preaching about.

>You have nothing to prove that I lied anout >anything. You have >nothing but speculation, supposition, and a >surprisingly poor grasp of >technology.

i'M A CBER AND HAVE WEBTV..YOURE NOT VERY BRIGHT. <g>

>I rest my case.

Rest is the only thing you CAN do davey..it's not like you had a plausible explanation for any of your many lies .Lord knows you need the rest.
>What I choose to provide is for me to decide.
But of course, although I'm having none of it and for some reason that just galls you to the point where you are single-handedly reduced to reckless off-topic insults and self-professed slightly comical images.

>Like I said, It's not my fault if you refuse to >wear the shoe that >fits you so well. The fact that you so >vehemently protest it, and attempt to >continually shift the focus of the topic from >your sociopathic tendancies

Hahha.....the topic was never me, Dave,

>Eu contraire, the topic WAS about you. You >and your illegal radio activities. You attempted >to shift that topic to me, and my supposed >"lies", in a failed attempt to kill my credibility.

No, the topci was never about my radio activity, Dave, it was about your preaching and your lies concerning you doing the exact same thing you cry about and embarrass yourself over. Again, nowhere will you find me "justifying" my behavior, unlike yourself.

>Your overwhelming fear is that someone might >agree with me, and start your >house-of-cards-like fairyland falling into reality.

Oh, not at all, Davey. everyone knows who agrees with you, and they are looked at with slightly less/more disdain than yourself

>You have never spent as much time on >anyone else before.

have never seen anyone lie like you.

>Not Aaron, not Frank, not even Doug.

>You've become obssesed with discrediting >me.

It's not about you, Dave,,and you don't have the good sense to see that. You post bullshit and outright lies...you are a pathological liar and are a discredit to hammie radio. Get over yourself.

>That fact alone tells me that you somehow feel >threatened with what I say. I'm sorry if you >don't like the person who looks back at you in >the mirror. But, that's not my problem.

Of course my world is not your problem....no matter how much you try to insert yourself into it or learn about it. YOUR problem is the inability to see yourself as others do... that and you're a pathological liar.

>.I'm still waiting for the "proof"

So ami..you made the first claim..I asked you to show it...you refuse,,I call you a liar....you bring the table a circular argument and ask one to prove a negative, once again magnificently illustrating your level of communicative skill.

>I'm still waiting for you to prove that you asked >Lou Franklin to SPAM the group, so I guess >we're even.

Not at all..there are many many claims you have failed to answer..but your posts illustrate your intent perfectly.

I broke no law you didnt..matter of fact..I only freeband..you freebanded AND ran power.

>Past tense. You're doing it NOW.

YOUR WORDS: "The fact that one did it and got away with it doesn't make you any less a federal ciminal".
One would think you would have long tired of passing feathers.

A claim like that is incredibly easy to disprove by anyone with internet access who knows what they are doing or to the super sleuth.

>You and your webTV <snicker>

Exactly.
Or telephone.

>Here's a clue, if it was so easy to find this info, >why would someone >be attempting to charge you for something >you could do yourself for >free?

Gee, Dave, you're really rockin the gray matter today huh? No one has tried to charge me anything..I gather information, Dave, for a living. I am the person your mother warned you about...no..er..thats not right...I am one of the the persons who charges for such info.......there we go. Would you like to order a dossier on someone? You better take out a loan.

>Now this one I like. Can you imagine the sheer >irony of this claim? Twisty, the "information >detective", who has nothing more than a >WebTV and a phone? Glen Roberts would >laugh at you as much as I am.

The laughter you hear is coming from those around you Davey, and your incorrect interpretation skills is resonsible for your mistake of where it originates. That statemment of yours is so full of assumptions that you need to go meditate the Libertarian philosophy for awhile,,maybe make a donation to Jerry Brown.

>The even funnier irony is that you, who >proports to be this "Info geek" doesn't even >have the cajones to post his own name.

Has related topic always been this problematic in your life?

> Talk about a credibility gap.
>So, how many people have you scammed?
>I know people who play in this arena.

..but of course you do. You've done it all, Davey. You've "been there and done that" and have done it so much better than anyone ever will afetr you and al those who come to the party after you are scum...ahahhahahh!

>All of them have the latest horsepower PC's >with all the trimmings, and have office >resources that would rival a large corporation.

..even an idiot can pick up the phone and make the call to the precinct to disprove your lying

>Yes, you could, but you won't, just like you >refused to call the >number of the CB shop I used to deal with.
What is it with you hammies and this power thing? Always trying to get me to do stuff.

>You make the claim, you have to follow >through.

More rules you don't play by, eh? Ok,,follow through on your claim of the cber getting popped :)

> If you can easily verify a claim by picking up >the phone, then you need to do it. Don't make >up a list of excuses why you can't or won't.

Done..long ago...long before this conversation..see, I did an article for Sporadic of the busts and cbers legalities LONG ago. Your claim is bunk, as the compilations of stats and cb busts in the USA was the gist of my article and I took it back to 1990...according to your post, it occurred in 1995....total fabricate bullshit. Next time, think before you go shooting off your mouth on something you can't back up.

>You have the number of the CB shop, so call it

For what reason do you feel compelled to wish me to call?

Lelnad want me to come in to a hammia room and then he forged me wen I refused...you're all upset 'cause I wont call a number.....I mean..wtf??Hahah!

>I'm hardly "upset" But I find it curious that you >demand proof to back up claims,

Not "claims" Davey jr,,,LIES. There is a huge distinctinction bewtween the 2. When you present bullshit concerning a bust you said took place concerning a cber as fact, it's a lie, not a claim. When you continue to maintainn it as true after your tail has been clipped and you have been caught and stuffed, its a malicious lie. When you continue to attempt to propagate it as true redundantly over and over to members of this ng, it's an arrogant malicious lie. Beginning to understand, Davey?

> and then when it's provided for you, you make >up a lame excuse why you don't follow >through with it.

You provide nothing concerning your claims but off topic personal attacks.

>Tisk, tisk, more of those ad-hominem attacks >again?

Should have never went down that avenue and started it if it is so offensive to you.

>Nothing offends me on a newsgroup. I'm >merely pointing out your hypocricy

Oh, it;s not hypcorisy. I stated long time ago it may muddy the waters a bit, but I will return tenfold what I receive. You attempts at any other obfuscations, as shown, have been failingly futile.

It goes with what I have been teaching you...treat others as you would want to be treated.

>You would do well to follow your own advice.

Oh, but I do...it's why I get along with the majority of cbers and hammies alike.It's only the few nocodes and yourself who have been slapped by a lowly cber that have problems.

wI would have indulged the rest of your fantasy, but your comment concerning nothing to hide sickened me.

>Why?

Becasue it's not about guilt or innocence, it's about your lack of power that you sorely lust for.

There is ahuge difference between volunteering ones information and going to great lengths to conceal such info..your waving of the white flag on this issue duly noted.

You made a comment concerning when I "get in my forties"..Dave, you are a child compared to me..why do you think I refer to you as youngster and junior?

>You SAY that, but your ACTIONS betray you.

You know nothing of my actions. The running joke is your supposition that you somehow are informed.

Oh well, I care not what you believe, only what you set forth here concerning your lies.
I know you are so enamoured with obtaining info on me based on your pathetci begging of my name,,so delve on into the archives and you not only will find the decade I graduated, but my exact age and name.

Really? Such as? Some personal issues (your psychoses for example) are intertwined with how you stand on other issues. I have not addresssed anything else beyond that.

My call is in my address header, where it's always been. I've never used my ham call as a sig on this board, unless someone has asked for it. This is, afterall, a CB forum. The fact that I'm also a ham is irrelevant. Yet you seem to make quite an issue out of it.

On what grounds? The previous paragraph was accurate. I'd be willing to bet you didn't call anyone, as you don't know who handles what. And it was NOT in Philly. It was in a suburb of philly. BIG difference.

You can't read for content can you? Or is that toy WebTV mucking up your vision? I never said that the Galaxy Saturn was particularly dirty, but that the Saturn TURBO was. Different radio, different animal. Keep trying, you're getting desperate now.

I seriously doubt that anyone is sending you anything. I have many friends on both the ham bands and on CB. I'm not the type to cause trouble, so there should be no reason for any of them to stab me in the back. Of course, you can make me a believer if you would just give me names. But you won't do that will you? No, what you've done, is what you've always done, painstakenly cut and paste from google into your "neato" WebTV browser. Pure obsession, pure sociopath.

And what is wrong with that? The FCC often tries to intimidate. If you're in the right, and have the resources to fight, then in many cases you may win. That doesn't mean that you can thumb your nose at them forever and get away with it however.

I never said that I didn't own the repeater. I CO-OWN it with other people. I am the primary trustee, and it is located at another location, that is not owned by me. You really can't read for content can you?

No, it's licensed to me as primary trustee, and it's located at my True. Ham gear (transceivers) do not need to be type accepted (But they do need to pass part 15)

Also true. Amplifiers are a special case. Thanks to bootleg CBers, H.F. amplifiers must be made under special regulations, which govern their frequency range, and their ease of being modified for useage on bands other than ham bands.

What have I said, that is incorrect? If you have trouble understanding, that's not my fault. Are you visually impared? Maybe that would explain some of your blatent misunderstandings of what it is you are taking out

Suddenly ? it seems to be some kind of problem...
It is modified for 26-32Mhz and pushing "Lock" gives access to CB-channels + "A"-channels...
BUT, pushing MAN ONLY enables me to use 26.030 to 26.755.5 !!!

Is there some kind of "resetting" on power-up to fix this, or is thins something i must expect using it "mod'ed" for the last 6+ years ???

Thanks.

26.755.5 follows 26.030.0...

I will try to change the back-up battery !

Read the fine print closer: <;

*Can be set by user to any two of these UHF ï¿½color dotï¿½ business frequencies:
464.500, 464.550, 467.7625, 467.8125,
467.850, 467.875, 467.900, 467.925MHz.

Important Note: The FCC has made five of the nine VHF ï¿½color dotï¿½ frequencies LICENSE FREE.

It might have a different definition in NY, but down here 464 & 467 MHZ are UHF.

VHF-HI is in the range 136-174 MHZ.

I think Tandy threw you a curve in their description.

I have one of these radios.....

It looks like your upper and lower Scan limits are set to those frequency ranges...

Try this to fix it...

1. Pres Manual to enter Manual mode

2. Then press "PRG" to enter Program Mode
3. Next press "SCAN" to enter Scan limits

The display will now show " PRG SCAN + "

4. Change the displayed frequency to the upper limit of the radio

5. Now pres "SCAN" again

The display should now show " PRG SCAN - "

6. Change the displayed frequency to the lower limit of the radio

7. Now Press "MAN" to return to Manual mode.

Now check your available frequency range......

Hopefully, This should fix your problem...

Cheers :)

My mother-in-law had that on her computer and it sucked down the computer's

Radio Shack did sell one model of a VHF business band radio that could be programmed for MURS and perfectly legal to operate. Last I heard they have been discontinued, but some stores still have a few and are dumping them for about $30 each I think.

antenna's?)

Check with your local Radio Shack. They sell, or at least did sell, some models of a VHF business band radio that is perfectly legal to use on MURS.

Another option is check at your local Hamfest(s) and find those piles of old Motorola VHF business band HT's radios. You may find one that operates on MURS and can get a charger for it as well.

For the antenna you can use a cut down version of a Ham 2m antenna for mobile operation. You don't have to trim much since the frequencies are so close.

Another option is to go for the combo FRS/GMRS radios. On the GMRS channels these radios will do anywhere from 2 to 5 watts. The catch is you do need to get a GMRS license to operate them. Last I heard the license was $85, good for 5 years and covers your family. Also if people outside of your family needs to use GMRS they have to get their own license. For batteries use rechargeable NiMH cells. I've seen the new 2000 mah cells for about $3 each. The down side is you can't use any external antennas with these radios.

IMHO as a Ham you'll do much better range wise using a VHF radio, as opposed to a UHF radio out in the open. A 1 to 2 watt VHF radio with external antenna should easily do a couple of miles. I've done 10 miles from a hand held VHF HT on 5 watts using a 17 inch whip antenna to a base with a 2m quad, which was crossed polarized with respect to my HT's antenna!

Oh, MURS is "CB Radio" look it up Mopar. Its covered under Part 95 just like 11m CB is covered. MURS is the "VHF" CB band.

The link(s) below is for some MURS equipment. They are the same radio from several different vendors. As you can see they aren't exactly cheap, but there is a full range of accessories to out fit the radios any way you want.

http://www.scoden.com/murs25.htm

Good luck.

Thats a common lament. If you have such items like you are referring to and are willing to offer them here for 'current production prices', or even a link to where one can find said items at such prices, that would be welcome.
I've often paid more on ebay than "current production prices" because the "current production" company may have a $50 minimum order and paying $5 for a $3 part gets me around that. And if I can buy it now rather than waiting for Springtime and hoping to find one at a Swapmeet for $2.50+gas+motel, 5 bucks is a bargain.
Instead of simply dissing everybody as ignorant, post your items. If you don't have them, well....

There are no liberal shows on AM. FM has NPR and Pacifica Radio, but that's about it for all of US media.

There are few if any conservative shows on shortwave. You must be

3 bands of CB: 27, 151/154 and 462/467

All covered under Part 95.

Now tell us what's new in the world of CB. We don't care about HAM unless we have a HAM ticket. (I don't)

I think what Ross was stating was nationally syndicated programming.
Not just local yocals behind a microphone. The only names on your entire list that I have ever heard of (other than NPR) are the ones above. Mitch was on the radio around here for less than a year before he got jerked. If the Alan Colmes is the same guy on the Fox show Hannity and Colmes,, thats the only way I recognize that name. I search the A.M. bands quite a bit and have never heard any of the others on your list, so they must be local programming.

KC8LDO is pathetically amusing. He indeed falls alongside the other bottomfeeding "AKCers". Funny thing is, Lelnad continues to post his forges but can't manage to get rid of the PS (Pacific Time) that accompanies them. Note how they reduce themselves to off-topic attacking behavior they erroneously feel reflects another. They can't help themselves.

No, most "devout" Catholics are not Christians although they will say that they are, mostly because they don't really know what the term "Christian" actually means. Some people believe that just because the live in a "Christian" country that they are Christians. Catholics were not the first Christians. The Jews, Greeks and some Roman subjects were the first Christians. The "Catholic Church" didn't come along until the third century when Emperor Constantine of Rome decided that he was going to make the official religion of Rome to be Christianity. He did it in a rather interesting way. He knew that the Romans of his day wouldn't just abandon their gods and statues and that the Christians of that day wouldn't tollerate idols and temples to pagan gods. So what did he do? He merged Christianity and Roman paganism. He re-dedicated the Temple of Venus to be the Temple of Mary. He re-dedicated all of the Roman god statues to be various Christian saints. Status of Venus became statues of Mary. So the Romans could still have their statues and gods to worship. It's still that way. Even though one of the 10-Commandments is not to make any carved image and not to bow to them Catholics still bow to statues of Mary, Paul, Peter and the like. They pray to Mary for help even though Jesus said Himself to pray directly to the Father and not even to Him. Catholics believe that when you die you go to a place called Pergatory, which is nowhere in the Bible. They believe that loved ones left behind can somehow pray that person into Heaven or give enough cash to the church to buy/bribe that person's way into Heaven. The Bible doesn't teach this at all. It teaches that once you die you are on your way to your destination with no stops on the way. Catholics also teach what is called "salvation by works" which means that if you do enough good deeds and are a good enough person then you go to Heaven. The Bible teaches the exact opposite of this. The Bible says that no one is good enough to go Heaven on their own. Eph 2:8-9 and Romans 3:10-11

No this is not "Catholic bashing" but only showing that the Catholic religion, much of it, is not Christian and goes directly against what the Bible teaches. Of course they have their "out." A priest will tell you that your interpretation of the Bible is flawed and only the "church" can correctly interpret the Bible, again nowhere in Scripture. I guess this is why the church kept the Bible in Latin for all those centuries...so that the common people couldn't even read their Bible and depended on the church to read it for them and tell them what it says.

The absolute best stuff to sell is low end pro audio gear, or car audio gear. I have a couple friends who buy gear wholesale, then sell it as used on ebay because they can get a more substantial markup than they can selling conventionally.

That's true. I don't normally see this but it's a good point.

>Instead of simply dissing everybody as ignorant, post your items. If >you don't have them, well....

Take a look at past auctions for the Alesis compressors, for instance. That's a really fascinating one to watch. The Alesis 3630 regularly will sell for retail cost, used on Ebay, if the description is written properly.

Personally, the most hilarious auction I have seen has been the Shure Level-Loc box selling for $450, but that was soon after an article in Mix Magazine in which it was mentioned in passing as having been used on guitar tracks on some Steve Miller album, and that almost certainly inflated the price. I still see 'em for $20 at hamfests, though. After that $450 high, the Ebay prices seem to have dropped considerably, though.

It's really fascinating to watch price trends on Ebay and try to figure out what causes the individual spikes and dips.

There are lots of people, Cathoics included, that SAY that they follow Christ and His teachings.

No, true, devout Catholics DON'T believe in the "same" Jesus Christ as evangelical Christians do. Catholics believe in a Christ that is, apparently, under the authority and/or influence of his mother Mary.
Otherwise why would they pray to Mary to influence Jesus? They pray to the saints which is directly against what Jesus teaches (yep, I know that's my "interpretation.") They do not teach that Jesus Christ, son of Mary and brother of James, had any brothers since Mary died a virgin. Jesus had a half-brother but that Catholic church says that Jesus was the only child of Mary, since she died a virgin. Catholics teach that Jesus' death on the cross was not sufficient for salvation, which is against scripture. There are many things that the Catholic church teaches about Jesus that are against what is written in scripture so they must have a different one, eh?

As far as Dave being narrow minded I think that he would take that as a complement. I don't agree with most of what Dave believes about the Bible but the essentials we agree on 100%. A Christian SHOULD be narrow minded when it comes to what is the truth and to the standards set forth in the Bible. The Bible says that "Broad is the path that leads to destruction, many are those who find it but, narrow is the path that leads to salvation and few find it." That's a paraphrase. Ignorance of the Bible is the most powerful weapon of Satan and he uses it well.

Please tell me what's "inaccurate" about the Bible. Sure there are scrible errors through the translations but the meaning remains the same. I DO NOT think that the KJV is the "only true translation." It isn't.

Nope, God created the nation of Israel centures ago. It was because of the sins of Israel and their failure to follow God's laws that caused them to be scattered. It was written in the Bible thousands of years ago that this would happen and it did, read it yourself. Now Israel is being put back into the land that was theirs long before the UN RECOGNIZED Israel as a nation. Israel had already been a nation for thousands of years. Again, ignorance of the scriptures is the greatest weapon of Satan.

It's the Palestinians who are making all of the trouble. Israel is only defending itself, with great restraint. If Israel would only take up a stance of something like "for every civilian killed 10 Palestinian civilians will die" the Palestinians would stop quickly or run out of civilians. The Palestinians are always complaining about civilian casualties but it is they who are sending human bombs into crowded market places, theaters and cafes. If they were attacking military facilities it would be different, but they aren't.

I guess everyone has an opinion, and I respect all, but I see only one "prerequisite" to being a Christian. Totally believing Christ was/is the son of God, and died for our sins......AND rose from the dead, to be with the Lord....to come again! Off topic here, BUT just one opinion.

The list is that of liberal talkers, ie., "talent" that is available if anybody wanted to syndicate and develop a market. Personally, from my humble observations, rational economic beings would not be a market for these people.

No market => no ad revenue => losing proposition.

Hence, liberals need contributions and the involuntary contributions from tax dollars to fund NPR to get their "voices" heard. Actually, available for hearing.
I believe it is more for the quirks of broadcast timelines as to why the majority of NPR is FM.

BTW, they also get to decide who else can voice their opinion, or not.

"Real" liberals think NPR is too controlled by the corporate underwriters.

IMO, liberals can't successfully penetrate the commercial national radio market because its the same-old same-old. "We're going to tax your @sses off!"

Sure gets my vote. And a memory location on my radio. NOT!

When you read the bible as the fiction that it is you will understand that the stories that are written were only to explain the things that humans could not understand before modern science. Humans have a need to know. The bible, and the collection of stories that comprise that novel, helped to quench the thirst for knowledge. When people learned more about the world around them in the dark ages, the church tried to control what people knew. Astronomers kept their discoveries secret.
Bucking the Church (government) was blasphemy!

Religion is great for one reason, it gives the sheople something to do.

Oh, one more thing Mopar. If you get any one or two channel radios programmed for MURS avoid the 154 MHz frequencies. Those seem to be heavily used by fast food joints, stores etc. If you don't you'll end up ordering your burger and fries 20 minutes before you get to the local burger joint's drive through.

heh that could be an interesting practical joke.

4 years ago on april 1st, a new radio station went on the air, and they called the Mcdonalds in Wauseon Oh and said they were a army unit passing through on manuvers, they ordered a whole mess of food "ahead of time" so it would be ready when they got there. Something like 300 big macs 150 double cheeseburgers ect. Then about 20 minutes later they called back and told them "April Fools", the radio station owner wasn't too thrilled with his DJ's and their joke when the McDolalds store sent them a bill for the food that was wasted.

Hey, it's not that I want to be a mean old ogre... what he's doing is against the rules. We have asked him nicely to stop and have explained why.
He is defiant and continues...
I certainly welcome a link or two in a signature that I could investigate...
but a full page ad... no.

Well, finally took delivery of my new 93-t radio. Really love it. Good loud audio, and love all the new features. Only one bit of advice if you purchase one of these. Throw away the stock mike and get a good power mike like the d-104 m6 or some thing similar. The stock mike supplied sounds "pinched" or "muffled". This problem was experienced by more than one person here who bought one of these radios. A good power mike, properly set, will remedy this problem. Also great reports about ssb audio quality. 73-s elpasogunslinger

I'm not a Baptist and I don't play one on Usenet. But yes, MOST Baptists are Christians. Baptists come in many flavors but generally they all agree on the essentials of Christian doctrine and they are what are called Evangelicals or those who wish to spread the Gospel of Christ.

Mormons are also evangelical. In fact they spend several years of their young adult life "spreading the word." Trouble is that they are spreading the wrong word. They DO NOT believe in the same essential Christian doctrines and have added MUCH, an entire book, to the Bible. They are extremely works based, they believe that you work your way to Heaven. They don't believe in the same Jesus as the Baptists and Catholics. They believe that God is a created being that was once a "man" who obtained the status of a god and was somehow given his own universe. They also believe that all "good Mormons" who believe in the Mormon doctrine will also obtain this godhood status some day. They also believe that Jesus is the "spirit brother" of Lucifer, the devil. They also believe that Jesus was a separately created being which is directly contradictory to John 1. They change the wording of John 1 a bit by adding the word "a" to "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was A god..." The original Greek says "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God...." Where "The Word" or Logos refers to Christ. Later on it states "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us.." speaking about Jesus.

There are many flavors of Christianity, many don't believe or teach what the Bible teaches but teach their own doctrine based on some founder. BTW, America is NOT a Christian nation, it is a "Christianized nation." It began on good, solid Christian philosophies and principles but many of those principles have been watered down and eliminated so that we have more of an atheist government now that doesn't want to have anything to do with God out of fear. The Constitution was written to keep the government out of the church and not meant to keep the church out of the government. It was written to prevent an official "Church of America" that was run by the president. A government that could throw you in jail for not belonging to the "official church." It was not mean to prevent individuals employed by the government from professing their faith, placing a Bible on their desk or the Ten Commandments on the wall of their office.

There is an excellent book by Gregory Koukl and Francis J. Beckwith called "Relativism: Feet Firmly Planted in Mid-Air" that sums up our society perfectly.

So have you read this "collection of stories?" Apparently not or you would not believe this lie. The Bible is FULL of prophecies that came true hundreds of years after they were made. Archeologists are, almost daily, making discoveries that confirm what is written in the Bible. As is written in the Bible, "A fool says in his heart 'there is no God.'"

481. Baxter vs. Sherin: Clash Of The Egos?

After reading posts from Glenn Baxter and Bob Sherin I find it rather odd that these two megahertz megalomaniacs, while so much alike, are so diametrically opposed. These two Hams, while at odds with one another insofar as how operating procedures are to be conducted, are more alike than opposite.
Both are clearly unashamed to laud themselves in the "I, Me" categories and both seem to take great pleasure in broadcasting their narrow philosophy to any and all within earshot.
Sherin, like Baxter, has gone to great lengths to post missives that are nothing more than braggadocio. One gets the distinct feeling that both Hams are lacking in self-confidence and must therefore, "toot their own horns".
Both operators have a commonality that is unappealing to the Every Day Joe in that they both apparently feel that the "wordier" their posts, the more impressed we will be with their alleged intellect and worldly advice.
Both operators have been known to interfere with ongoing conversations whether intentional or not, and neither one is the kind of Ham Operator that neophytes should emulate. Their claims to fame, however inflated, should be looked upon with healthy skepticism. Consider the source.....or sources, for what they are.

Tnom has a point. Why should they be different, just because they happen to cover more amateur bands that the "import" radios? They can readily be modified to cover the CB band (often continuous coverage from the top end of the broadcast band all the way to 30+ MHz). On my 757GX, that can be done by simply flipping a slide switch.

Most of the Ham radios these days have some sort of computer chip. It would be rather trivial to put non-changeable code into the chip that would block usage in the vicinity of 11 meters (and some other frequencies as well). Since that isn't done, I can only conclude that part of the selling point for these Ham radios is the ready conversion to frequencies that are illegal for Amateur use.

I wont waste too much time on this hogwash. First, the writer has no sense of history, especially church history. If he had, he would not have made the ludicrous statement that Catholicism came about with Constantine. This much repeated canard has long since been dismissed. If he would read the Early Church Fathers, he would find that one of them makes the astonishing statement (for people like the writer), "Where the bishops are, there is the Catholic Church." Now this Father was one of the earliest Christians. All Constantine did was legalize Christianity. True, the genuineness of his conversion may be debatable, but that is not the issue. I challenge the writer to produce any document from early Church history which in fact declares that the Christians then objected to the happenings of the early Church, which whether he likes it or not, was known as the Catholic Church. Remember these early Christians KNEW what the genuine faith was. Some of them were either alive during the time of some of the Apostles or were taught by them. There is not one iota of disenchantment or disavowal from any one of them after the legalising of Christianity. In the last century, Fundamentalist Christians have appropriated the name "Christian" excluding everyone else who do not subscribe to their beliefs.
For more information which you can trust on what the Catholic Church is, go to www.catholic.com.

Well, you've claimed several different things that have very different meanings...they can't ALL be true...in one post (above) you claim it was IN suburban Philly..now you attempt to qualify and say it took place in a suburb OF Philly,,quite different than your other claim. Yet another post exists where you claim the cber was a LOCAL to you.
You hung yourself again, Davey..all your squirming and aggitated comments can not snow the intellect of the folks thatfrequent this group..... your arrogance and underestimation of the regs here once again have you scrambling to tell more lies to cover up your old ones...more good advice: Get over yourself, Davey. You were caught lying and funnin' around..you can either take it like a man and move on or continue to squeal and cry and blame others and make certain no one forgets your behavior unbecoming of an amateur.

>And it was NOT in Philly. It was in a suburb of >philly. BIG >difference.

Sure is....either way, BOTH were your claims, but thank you for pointing out how there is such a HUGE difference between the two..it perfectly illustrates the self-contradictory posts you are so well known for.

..the university clarified your lie concerning your email.

>Oh, and how did they do that?

Simply confirmed the email you sent me came from their server.

>Pray tell,

You can pray to whoever you wish, but for some reason you chose me.

>fill in the details please.

I am.....by debunking your lies one at a time.

>I want to hear all about this one. But I'll bet I >don't hear boo from >you. Only another lame excuse. You're full of >those.

You fear the truth so much you attack it, Davey jr.

>Of course, you can make me a believer if you >would just give me names.
>But you won't do that will you?

I said the same thing to you long before you suggested it. You ask of another that of which you refuse to provide yourself. One set of rules for the world, another set for lil' Davey Hall jr.

>No, what you've done, is what you've always >done, painstakenly cut >and paste from google into your "neato" >WebTV browser.

Nothing to fear if you've nothing to hide, dear boy..isn't that what you preach to us?

>Pure obsession, pure sociopath.

How long have you faniced yourself qualified to make judgements? Society (something you refer to consistently as a false prelude as a pillar to your rambling) has held only one who holds a PhD may make such a judgement, but your arrogance preceeds your reputation, so it is of no surprise among those of us who know you so well.

Example? And none of your bullshit..if you have no examples, merely say so, don't try to blow smoke up this ng's ass anymore with bullshit, as no one believes such crap.

>If you're in the right, and have the resources to >fight, then in many

If that is so, merely state a single example. You claim MANY cases...so cite a few where cbers have fought the FCC and won. Hammies? A single case? C'mon Davie...surely you can cite an example since there are "many".....

And here,,remember Dave now said he really didn't own the repeater which is why he couldn't remember the Phelps.......

Gee..........is it licensed to someone else, Dave?

Partner? As in LEGAL partner? I didn't know Pa. recognized such unions.

Sure, Davey, sure...it's all in WHAT you said..like the difference between being IN suburbian Philly and located in a surburban OF Philly..hahahhah!

Here shines your hypocrisy. You claim the TS is merely disguised as a CW transmitter, and used the words "skirt these requirements" in referring to it. Yet you freely profess owning one and modifying one. Owning an amplifier that you claim is "skirting FCC requirements" and then arguing the technicalities of WHY you own one is certainly "justification", something you obsess on and apparently continue to search for, as well as accusing others of doing the same.

>Whether the FCC buys it or not is a matter of >speculation.

>Is this the best you can do?

How much more of your laundry do you want aired? Once again, you have succeeded in sharing your hammie status with the world, unfortunately, simultaneously with the behavior that makes you the worst amateur radio has to offer and I strongly urge you to take your personal problems to email so we can stop sharing with the world your "lidness"

Unlike you, I need not concern myself with what others think of me. As a volunteer representative of the amateur community, you have the duty to put forth truth, not bullshit. You also have the duty to carry yourself without prejudice, which you also fail miserably at.

From: s7000a@cats.ucis.vill.edu (SANDBAGGER) Newsgroups: rec.radio.cb Subject: Working "the world" on 1 watt. Date: 2 Jan 1995 15:26 EST Organization: Villanova University Lines: 55 Distribution: world Message-ID: <2JAN199515264144@cats.ucis.vill.edu> NNTP-Posting-Host: cats.ucis.vill.edu News-Software: VAX/VMS VNEWS 1.41 I want to put this to rest once and for all. It seems that many of our ham friends here, have used the excuse that "I can work the world with 1 watt, so YOU don't need an amplifier". Well, lets set the record straight: Misleading statement: " I can work the world with 1 watt". Facts: You can work the world with 1 watt, IF the ionospheric conditions are proper AND you are on a suitable frequency band. You CANNOT do it anytime you want, you are at the mercy of mother nature. Secondly, what most of these QRP guys have also failed to meantion, is that their "working of the world" was most likely via the CW mode. CW, because of its narrow bandwidth, offers excellent signal to noise ratios, easily 10 db better than a typical CB. If a CW contact were running 1 watt, and they were at your noise threshold, they would need to jump to 10 watts to make the same contact on AM. These "fantastic" claims aren't worth a nickel on the CB band, where most of us just wand RELIABLE (Meaning at ANY time) communications with other LOCAL stations. It all comes down to simple math. You want greater range, you need a greater signal, or a better mode. CW is illegal on CB (Not that anyone would bother using it). SSB is excellent for increasing range legally. But it is not for everyone. Comparisons to 2 meter repeater operations are invalid as well. Most repeaters are in ideal (high elevation, line of sight) locations, which facilitate easy communications. I've worked 2 meter simplex, with 25 watts. From base to base (With a 12 db gain beam) I can work farther than equivilent on CB. But base to mobile or mobile to mobile, is worse due to the rapid fading and "line of sight" characteristics of VHF. I take offense to the "holer than thou" attitude displayed by many hams toward Cbers. They flaunt their "superior equipment" and tell the CBers, to get ham licenses, and then are the first to complain to their ham buddies, that the reason the ham bands are going to pot, is because of all the CBers that are moving up there.

Ham radio and CB radio are both communications services. Both offer their respective users with a forum for enjoyment. Each service has it's own unique appeal that is not duplicated on the other. Ham radio is full of serious discussions and one can learn alot from just listening. On the other hand though, a constant diet of technobabble gets VERY boring fairly quickly. CBers are less technical, and as a result, are more like talking to "regular" people. Topics are more varied, and you can "fool around" without fear of upsetting the "kilocycle kops", and have more fun.

Bill your conclusion is off base as usual, the Big Amatuer radios are made in Japan, they are made to cover work a wide variety of freqs, since the radios are sold to hams all over the world ,different countries have different frequency requirements, so they make a radio that will be able to be sold to amatuer all over the world who's freqs are different than those in the us.
If a radio is to cover that the HF frequency range it would be somewhat difficult and more costly to block certain frequency portions.

Hmm.....many of the teams are very likable. Jets are way cooler than the Giants..Oakland can end up playing SF or TB in a "Bay Bowl"....Pittsburgh is a great blue collar smashmouth team, Atlanta, TB, TN are all good southern teams..Philthadelphia is the only team that is easy to dislike....it's a filthy city and they are a bunch of cry babies when they lose and they talk funny. I love when the DX is running to eastern Pa whenever the "Iggles" lose.

>Twist your letting your love for Dave show >again.

You need to get off this "Dave obsession"obsession. He wasn't even mentioned. Besides, what does Hall have to do with Philthadelphia besides his le concerning the cber that wasn't busted?

>Since when are the eagles crybabays.

Since they all sound like Stallone yelling "Adrian" only now they drone out "Deuuuuce".

So what? So did several other teams.

>What are the excuses?

Just what one should expect from you..a quest for excuses.

>Just because you say it doesn't make it so.

It's one of the dirtiest cities in the country.
Ironic how Philly is supposed to be the city of "Brotherly Love" and stands to symbolize "Freedom" when Hall is for limiting freedom and has expressed contempt and anything BUT brotherly love to those who hold the views he held himself..

>When the Iggles take out your "Southern" >teams then come talk to me.....

There is nothing to talk about. The "Iggles" season is just about over.

>E. A. G. L. E. S. Eagles ....

As I said, all the teams left are pretty likable, with the exception of Philthadelphia.
Germantown, S. Philly, Kensington....what a legacy.

I have a Cobra 148GTL that I bought new in '91 and used only a couple of times before getting my ham ticket. This CB has sideband, and 5W because it's one of the older ones. It has the processor that you can wire for extra channels, but I wouldn't dare cut this baby up, so it's never been modded, never had a linear attached to it. I once used it to talk from Los Angeles to an op in North Carolina during a good skip season.

So, is this CB technically illegal?

Yes-they're called Hams.

There are Hams among us!

It could be your neighbor, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, … anybody. Secretly, they may be Hams. Some of them wear an "identifier" which consists of numbers and letters. They identify themselves and fellow Hams through this identifier. Also, their mannerisms and colloquialisms are recognizable for those who know about them. Still, they travel unrecognized.

On the outside they look like humans. Like a body snatcher, their goal is to convert each and every one of us. They communicate with each other with electronic devices over the airwaves. Those who have gotten this far have seen certain traditions and protocol utilized. They form secret societies. Some, which know of the existence of Hams, have called it a cult.

They use codewords in their conversation, replacing regular works with Qxx. Some have developed the ability to send and receive real time encoded symbols. One gains higher status in the Ham society for demonstrating this ability. Some of them feel superior because of this.

They live.

From: "Cult Guy" OhNO!@Anon.com
Now we have it! Here, for the first time it is out in the open. The ARRL is a cult! They speak in codes. Tongues. Have secret societies with arcane initiation rituals.
Odd groups such as the QCWA, ARES, and an odd-duck bunch calling themselves the 10-10 Club abound and all are rather reclusive and exclusive.
Yes, indeed. This strange bunch of other world types are often seen with funny little metal sticks protruding from the roofs of their cars, from the tops of their funny little aluminum hard hats, and some even keep funny looking protuberances on their belts to, one assumes, keep their dungarees from falling down from their chests.
Where do these strange critters come from? What do they do? Do they bear their children live? Incubate them? Why do they glow in the dark? How do they reproduce?
They must.
They live.

Er, would that be the same Japan that openly violates the ITU treaty agreement by allowing their no-code licensees on 10m? (Albeit at only 10 watts.)

That should be news to Ten-Tec. Try to get one of their rigs on illegal freqs...good luck.

Yeah your point is? those radios are made for use all over the world each governemt has different frequencies that are used, they don't make a different radio for each country. It wouldn't make sense

I have been given a Uniden UH012 CB and no aerial. The reason for this is unknown, however, I was advised to buy a good quality aerial that I can mount off the front of the bonnet. Can anyone suggest a brand/type to couple with this radio for maximum distance/quality? What should I bee lokking for in an aerial. BTW this is mounted in a 4x4 (Disco) well, considering the condition you state the rig being in (no mods of any kind), I'd say yes (and the fcc rules will probably back me on that point). it still meets type acceptance.

Thanks

personally, I'd keep it just for collectors value (it will be worth something down the road a few years).

since you stated that it was never modified in any way, and that it probably was shipped this way from the manufacturer (circa about 1980-83), it is legal under the grandfather clause of the fcc rules with regards to type accepted equipment.

use it in peace if you want... or convert it for use on 10 meters (per your ham lic. privileges). otherwise, I'd leave it alone and keep it as a possible collectors item down the road.

I don't mean this the way it's going to sound, but if you don't know how to do a re-alaignment, it's much better not to

I wont waste too much time on this hogwash. First, the writer has no sense of history, especially church history. If he had, he would not have made the ludicrous statement that Catholicism came about with Constantine. This much repeated canard has long since been dismissed. If he would read the Early Church Fathers, he would find that one of them makes the astonishing statement (for people like the writer), "Where the bishops are, there is the Catholic Church." Now this Father was one of the earliest Christians. All Constantine did was legalize Christianity. True, the genuineness of his conversion may be debatable, but that is not the issue. I challenge the writer to produce any document from early Church history which in fact declares that the Christians then objected to the happenings of the early Church, which whether he likes it or not, was known as the Catholic Church. Remember these early Christians KNEW what the genuine faith was. Some of them were either alive during the time of some of the Apostles or were taught by them. There is not one iota of disenchantment or disavowal from any one of them after the legalising of Christianity. In the last century, Fundamentalist Christians have appropriated the name "Christian" excluding everyone else who do not subscribe to their beliefs.
For more information which you can trust on what the Catholic Church is, go to www.catholic.com.

Well thanks for clearing that up!

OK, I'll give up on the Cobra idea and get a Uniden. Any thoughts on a new PRO538W? It's feature list includes:

Front Fire Speaker Instant Channel 9
NOAA Weather Channels
PA/CB Switch

No scan feature, but what the hell. I seem to be the only one who wants that in a radio. :-)

Thanks,

I shall. We don't need posters like the ones that are losing ISP's left and right...they were here to malign cbers and start guff, sort of like WA3MOJ. In any event, I am NOT your mother, your God, your deity, your Lord and Master, your trainer, your puppet-master, nor your moderator, despite you treating me as all of the above and referring to me as such. Fact is, many of the losers were posting several times a day as several different people..it took awhile...but some are running out of options and it it isn't so easy to do so when you've exhausted many sources. Amazing the amount of new posts once several were made to conform to the rules their ISP's set forth. Your welcome.

since you stated that it was never modified in any way, and that it probably was shipped this way from the manufacturer (circa about 1980-83), it is legal under the grandfather clause of the fcc rules with regards to type accepted equipment. use it in peace if you want... or convert it for use on 10 meters (per your ham lic. privileges). otherwise, I'd leave it alone and keep it as a possible collectors item down the road.

You can use lemon juice on Q-tips to clean and remove any odors but be very careful and very meticulous when doing so. There are similar methods designed to remove gobs of dust from boards when a slight air blast isn't practical and tuner cleaner doesn't do the job. Coffee, ashes, soda, etc....all kindsa things get into some of them radios. If you don't square it away and need more info let me know and I'll email you.

Hi RP, Sorry to hear that... But, you have more to worry about than just the smell of urine.. I serviced an Amateur Radio that a cat had urinated on and in... The big problem comes from the urine leeching into any I.F. cans in the vacinity. The tiny wires eventually corrode and break off inside the can, due to the caustic effect of the urine acting on the hair thin wires. I ended up taking the two open cans apart, and was lucky to be able to salavge them, as they corroded right where they connect internally, at the bottom.. You might want to keep this in mind, and after you get the radio smelling good, off it..
Anyway, my 2 cts worth... Best 73.... TJ

What if one wished to buy it pseudo-anonymously? Or has never made a purchase on ebay? Currently at 21 bucks.......not a bad deal, even if it was dead. Probably be higher if ya' didn't disqualify so many folks. What year is it? Some of those Night Eagles are notorius for the keying contacts going out in both the side and press bars, especially the later ones.

My point is that although you're correct re. how it's cheaper to manufacture a universal rig to cover varying regional markets, the other poster is also correct...the "big three" are likely VERY aware of the "alternative market" demographic.

> those radios are made for use all over the world each

Agreed...if manufacturing cost is your primary concern.

It's not all that difficult, however it IS more costly. Ten-Tec knows this all too well, their rigs cannot be made to <cheaply> xmit on non-amateur freqs. Why do they go the extra step...because they care. They even state so in writing on a number of aspects re. illegal usage of their gear.

No, I can't say that I have. But I do like Ten-Tec gear.

26.965 thru 27.405 MHz may not be illegal, however, using a ham (Or any other non type-certified radio.) rig on them is. That's what I meant, Twist.

Twist, another reply asks that you show your moderator's badge. Hehe ... seriously, folks should check their ISP rules. One of mine that I wasn't aware of concerns cross-posting to newsgroups. Seems they apply some kind of math based upon how many groups you cross-post to and if you're over the limit .... find another ISP. My ISP also forbids forging your posts to appear that they are from another (although you are allowed to use a nickname in a newsgroup). I suspect that many ISPs are somewhat similar. Given enough rope, some of the flamers will hang themselves. Eventually, they run out of ISPs.

Kind regards from Rochester, NY

Illegal is a good word in the subject line for a troll. I wonder what would happen if the rules were set to delete posts with the word "illegal" in the subject line? Better yet, if the word "illegal" appeared anywhere in the message?

That extra was full of crap. There are a few different things in the communications laws which concern "grandfathering". Most have to do with operators' privileges rather than equipment, tho...

KB2AHZ is a General class CBer . And I would not a bit surprised if someone finds Him with His ass ripped out at one of the local pickle parks in VA. He was observed on 3.910 trying to recruit Members for the Lamda club Then on Channel 36 lsb trying to recruit .
And for those of You that are not aware , Lamda is a gay and lesbian organization .
Nothing personal against gay's But I think Charles(aka:Charlene) should respect others when trying to recruit and stick to handing out flyer's at the local truck stops in VA.

Cleaning out the shack and I have the following.

A Ranger AR 3500 100W 26.000-30.000Mhz Transceiver. Condition is a 6/10. To be honest the variable power pot needs replacing and there's some scuff marks on the cabinet. The radio has been boxed and stored since 1992 but is 100% functional. Comes with a the original stock Ranger Mike.

More information on this radio can be found at http://www.qsl.net/kf2tz/rangerar.html

Included is a MFJ Antenna Tuner and Meter, Model Number unknown but retailed for around $149 when new. Also a D-104 Silver Eagle Mike filly functional condition 9/10

Astron 25M Power Supply was purchased new and only used two months. Has been boxed and has checked out fully functional. Unit is extremely heavy so consider the shipping charges. Will package and give a firm price before shipping.

I'll include a Goldpass Ham Quality Low Pass TVI filter and several commercial grade High Pass filters in the deal.

Looking for best offer or trade, Digital SWF Base Receiver/ New Trunk Tracker Base Scanner

Prefer pickup Northern Palm Beach county Florida or will Ship Insured UPS buyer to assume costs.

Payment by check, money order or verified PayPal member.

I'm not looking to rip anyone off but it's a shame this radio has been collecting dust this many years.

I will verify all equipment is 100% operational before shipment and guaranteed no DOA.

its something I remember from high school civics courses. the government is prevented from making laws that can have a retroactive effect (ex post facto), thus, if an action was legal before a change in the law, then one cannot be punished for that action unless he commits it again AFTER the law changed.

same with radio equipment. what was legal 10-20 years ago may still be legally used today given it hasn't been modified outside of its original type acceptance (repairs for normal use not withstanding).

It took a couple of calls to a few folks I happen to know that work in both law and are hams. what i stated above was the simplified version (believe me, I don't want to spend the next 2 hours typing in a lot of legalese!).

Umm... to a certain extent. It's not legal for hams to transmit on the CB frequencies if they use a radio that was legal for that band back when it was a ham band. Or, for a more recent example, the 1.25 meter band. the FCC took a chunk of that band and sold it to private interests. It's not legal for hams to use that part of the spectrum (220-222 MHZ) any more, even though they may have a radio that they used to operate there before the change.

However, to use a CB analogy, you are correct if you use the example of the 23 channel CB's. It is still OK to use them since they still use the same channels as the newer 40 channel radios. What I don't understand, though, is why the FCC thought it necessary to make it illegal to market 23 channel radios after they expanded the band to 40 channels. I would think that the market forces would regulate that change by itself. I mean, who would want to buy a brand new 23 channel radio when another company would offer a 40 channel radio at the same price?

Check 27.555 USB for international DX. 28.00000 begins the ten meter

If you want to REALLY get techincal the word Catholic simply means "established" or "universal" (in some cases) and has nothing to do with the denomination. So TECNICALLY you are correct.

Read the writings of Josephus, lots of documentation there. The Jewish Christians of that time were horrified at what Constantine was doing to the faith but were perfectly happy to live in a culture that wasn't burning them at the stake for claiming Christ so the tollerated what Constantine had done by adding all of the idols and statues.

> Remember these early

I don't know of anyone alive during the time of Constantine who were alive at the time of the Apostles. There's more than a hundred years of time there.

You are putting words in my mouth. I never said that the had a problem with the legalization of Christianity in Rome, what I did say is that they didn't like the idea of having idols and statues in their "churches."

I see a perfect example of the pot calling the kettle black. Doens't the Catholic church say that all but the Catholics are going to Hell? Isn't it true that if you don't march in lock-step with what the church teaches that you can be excommunicated, thus you go to Hell?

All I say, actually Jesus says this, is that Jesus is the ONLY way to Heaven, all others are lost. I didn't say that Jesus says that. There is also no basis in the Bible for MANY of the Catholic TRADITIONS and doctrine. For instance, where does the Bible mention Purgatory? Where does the Bible say that you can go to Heaven based on your works? Where does the Bible state that the CHURCH can decide whether or not you go to Heaven? Where does the Bible say that you HAVE to be baptized in order to go to Heaven? Doesn't the Bible say "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven images of creatures in Heaven, on the land or in the sea....thou shalt not bow down to them?" What do the Catholics do to the statues of Mary, Peter, Paul....? Do they bow to statues of Jesus, who is depicted as a caucasion? What makes them think that Jesus had brown hair and blue eyes? Remember He was a JEW. Do the Catholics pray to Mary? What does the Bible say about that? Jesus says pray only to the Father. What about all of the "good luck charms" that Cathoics carry with them? Do they actually believe that a "St. Christopher medal" is going to help them get from point A to point B any safer than without it? A rabbit's foot would be just as effective. This is paganizm packaged up to make it LOOK like Christianity.

My wife grew up in the Catholic Church, I don't need to go to a publicity web page to know what the Catholic Church is. This site if full of non-answers to the "bashing questions" they propose. A perfect example is the question posted about Purgatory being a money making scheme for the priests. They bring up rules that the priests can only receive so much per day, so what about Purgatory? It isn't even addressed in the answer.

No this is not "Catholic bashing." If it's wrong please provide scripture, not church doctrine, to back up your position. Besides, think of it this way, if you knew (or even suspected) that someone was doing something that was going to be harmful to them wouldn't you tell them? Or would you be afraid of hurting their feelings?

Badges are for folks who frame their callsigns and want power. I didn't keep the priest collar that was tossed my way, either. Between Dave and Kevin's theological debate, maybe some of it will rub off on some of the angrier types. It's good to see goodness being debated instead of malice and hatred for no other reason than being different or holding an opinion that another refuses to entertain let alone comprehend.

I am selling four (4) Amperex PQ 7534 tubes. These have just been tested for emissions and leakage on a B&K 667 tube tester, and all test strong. They are used tubes, but show no physical sign of hard use. I don’t have any equipment that uses these, so I can’t verify that they will work in any specific application. I will warrant these tubes against DOA, and that they will test good on a similar tube tester, but otherwise the buyer accepts these tubes “as-is”.

All 4 for $50, (shipping included for US).

If interested, please respond by email to < OvrReactor@aol.com >, do not post.

As an operator in Aus I can say that we are not allowed all over the band.We are only allowed to use the same channel/frequency allocation as you guys over in the US.Any devation outside those frequencies is illegal and breaks the Radio Communications Act ie: Fedral law.The radio spectrum is regulated by the Australian Communications Authority(the Aus equivalant of the FCC).Also over here in Aus we have a UHF band that is allocated in the 476-477 Mhz band.This service is also given 40 channels with a channel spacing of 25 Khz.UHF is used by anyone & everyone with no licence required(No licence for 27MHz also).There are repeaters allocated for channels 1-8 with Ch simplex & duplex being the Emergency Channel.Check out these links www.aca.gov.au , www.alphalink.com.au/~parkerp/radio.htm &

Today, a cold front blew through. Brought cold and snow showers you know, i think it is a strange thing to defend a faith where rampant homosexuality is practiced and covered up by the church.....i think it is a stretch to call this religious sect a Christian sect.....they are far too involved in traditions which have no basis in fact, but are merely made up, to be pleasing to the itching ears of the church members , who do as they want al week , then go in on friday and supposedly be forgiven about it from a guy in a robe who is probably , judging from the news of the day, a fruit....now i have a problem with this.....and obviously so did martin luther. he had a problem with priest selling condolences to enrich their purse.....heck the catholic church for the longest time refused to allow anyone except priest to read the scriptures because they were in latin and nobody knew latin.....the catholic church is rich in land holdings and money.....all over the world.....and in a lot of places where the people are very poor, the priest eats regularly because the people think that by helping him, they are helping God....geez.....i wonder where they got that idea.....

now then is this newsgroup 'alt.religions' or is it rec.radio.cb...????

this is a valid point though... changes in band allocation may have an effect on what equipment may be used or is valid for use.

I think that someone in the political circles thought they could force the market forward a bit faster. oftimes, this can backfire (see the current rhetoric on HDTV) Still, with the way things are going, the FCC might decide to ban the manufacture of any 11 meter equipment to force users to start purchasing the vhf MURS equipment (shorter range, less probability of long range contacts oustide of a specified radius, etc).
only problem I see with this: users might start modifying radios for more channels, and then start interference with public/emergency services...
Any way you look at it, uts getting to be a nightmare.

Well if that's true, then it would make people more accountable for what they post. Most other posting orgs. have strict guidelines concerning what people post.

PS, it has been a lot more pleasant here

I think the Mirage covers from 24 to 32 and the RCI still only will cover 26 to 32 when a mod

Personally, I think you are screwed. There is one other option, but it wmight not work. When I did bench work years ago, some of the measurement instruments, specially Gould recorders, would come in hidious condition. I would power wash the with light pressure, with Tide and water, or fantastic/409 and water. Then we would put it in a low heat drying oven overnight at about 110 or so degrees.
This of course would be prior to any calibrations. You then would have to get an alignment. I never had one smoke or blow up afterwards. Of course, these was test and measurement equipment, and not communications equipment. Most of the electronics were older transistor and IC based. None ever were ruined by it.

The other suggestion is to rip apart the chassis, dip it in houseold cleaner, and then get a can of blue shower or such cleaner, and use that on the electronics.

You can use lemon juice on Q-tips to clean and remove any odors but be very careful and very meticulous when doing so. There are similar methods designed to remove gobs of dust from boards when a slight air blast isn't practical and tuner cleaner doesn't do the job. Coffee, ashes, soda, etc....all kindsa things get into some of them radios. If you don't square it away and need more info let me know and I'll email you.

Oh good. I thought I was being paranoid about posting information or know when I can ask someone a question about a superstar 121.

Its a general question. Yes I am a person who work on them. They call me a

I have fixed a lot of botched jobs. But its not to brag. Just to let you

I totally agree. Why else would the Kennedy's in Boston be able to have a marriage annulled AFTER there were children and not have the children declared illegitimate by the church? My Catholic LAW a marriage may be annulled only if it has not be consummated. Children=Consummation. However, Money+Catholic Church = whatever you want. It all comes down to cash, nothing else. The same reason that the homosexual, pedophile priests were moved around from one place to another to hide them, money.

Too easy: Doug (Doggie-style) Adairierre, N8WWM. Who else? And his response proves it; nobody else responds with sexual innuendo all the time. Just Doggie. Too bad he doesn't have any maturity.

It's just an old Sears combination CB and FM radio, nothing really special about it...

Repairing that radio is about the same as any other radio as long as they understand tubes. I repaired Dak X radios and the brownig would not be that different. Most of the time with tube radios, just a tube replacement is needed.

Yesterday i went to a local flea market and came accross what i belive to be a combination Ham/Cb radio it has no model name, just Sears and the model number 280.626730. it has one dial with the 1-23 channel cb freqs. plus another dial marked FM that has channels 88-108 marked in the same way a standard FM radio does, the date of manufacture is OCT 1976, ive gotten it to power up but havent hooked it to any speaker as it seems to require a external speaker. I didnt give but 10 bucks for it, any info would be apreciated especially pinouts for the mic since its missing.

Thanks alot,

Jason.

You might try going to cbtricks.com In there forum they have some listings of shops. I believe one of them was strickly brownings, dax and Trams. Bet they could help you out.

Or someone on that forum would be able to guide you in the right direction.

I also find that if you type in www.google.com and put in the data you are desiring it usually gives you more options than you care to read. That too may also help you out.

Good luck in your search.

702. Why Hams feel they are superior to CBers

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2003-01-13 02:10:59 UTC
From: vshah101@aol.com
Message-ID: <20030112211059.22957.00000573@mb-mf.aol.com>

To Ham Radio operators, Ham Radio represents everything that CB isn't. Hams obey FCC rules, CBers often don't. Hams volunteer and do community services. CBers do not provide a service. Hams can experiment, CBers cannot. Ham Radio requires a qualification test to be licensed, while CB does not. And, many Ham Radio operators know Morse Code, a skill which many Hams claim prevents Ham Radio from becoming CB.

This is the basis of Ham Radio's pride and superiority over CB. That's why CBers are often called evil, subject to derision, and inferior to Hams. There's a lot of ill will towards CB for a lot of reasons: use of profanity, illegal use of "linears", poor operating skills, use of 10-4 codes that don't relate to Ham Radio Q signals.

Ham Radio operators continue to dislike CBers. It was almost as though they were fighting the enemy. They make modifications to radios to ensure CB band operation is impossible. For a lot of Ham Radio fans, one of the major appeals of Ham Radio is that it's not CB.

Sometimes Hams hear CB lingo on the bands and fear what it represents. "Its an awful reminder of what the bands could degenerate to", said one Ham.

I am not a Ham, at least not in the sense of personal identification.
Callsign, yes. Personal identification to being a "Ham", no.
Not neccesarily my opinion, this is what most Hams feel.

When I firsr got into CB I used a homemade transmitter with five tubes, two in the RF and 3 in the modulator and a modified 5 tube AM BCB radio for a receiver. This was 1967. This was absolutely the most fun I have ever had in radio.

It's not required on some ham frequencies, and from what my hame friends tell me, it's overrated. You have to pass a 5 word per minute test. I don't see where that qualifies as "knowing" morse code. And many that did pass the test, never used it again.

I have not been on ham, but I would guess there one that do similar to the above.

Skipped the rest of the post. My boss is a ham, as well as another co-worker. They have tried to get me to ham. I might try it. But they told me up in their area, the hams are pretty cool, and not these arrogant types you mention. You also fail to mention that there are many that do both.

You going to have your purists, your illegal people, your profanity laced individuals, in almost any area of life.

Actually Randy, if you are connected period you can be attacked, it doesn't have to be a ping. It could be a port closer or an attack on the persons uplink port. There are many ways, but none of them are smart as some people have found out in the past from trying to take down some of my machines, they are now doing time.

In closing the only safe system is one not connected at all. But if you want a good suggestion for a secure system, get an older machine 486 or so, put in a cd-drive and a floppy, the floppy is your boot sector and the cd has linux OS on it, use this as your firewall/router. Since there is no HD it can't be hacked as you can't write to a cd.

I don't think HAMs feel superior to CBers.. Being one of each myself, I hold no ill towards CBers. I don't like what some CBers act like, and I don't like how some HAMs act. It's a person-person relationship out there, and if people would stop GENERALIZING and SPEAKING FOR EVERYONE ELSE IN A GROUP, perhaps this MYTH of "All HAMs hate CBers" would go away, and 40% of the bullshit in this Newsgroup would disappear.

Just my thoughts on the subject.

I may be incorrect but it looks lile a toledo oh address to me if it was in michigan wouldn't it have a detroit.mi.da.uu.net adress? I know they have uu.net there and that they have their own ip block for the area just like my provider which has nodes in several states says napo-cas2-cs-94.dial.bright.net which shows I am connecting from the napoleon modem pool vs the deshler or other area pools.

Hi Doc... Yep, I'm back.
Did you have a good christmas?

I have to agree with you. SSB is not set by one "can" alone, and diong little bits here and there is not the way to go.
When doing a re-alignment, the whole set should be gone through, in the correct order with, as you say, the correct test equipment.

For best effect have a mp3 player open with Don Mac leans American Pie playing as you read the song!

BYE BYE AARON, TWISTEDHED LIES.

(sung to BYE BYE MISS AMERICAN PIE)

A long long time ago
I can still remember
How that newsgroup used to make me smile
And i knew that if i had a chance
I could make the keyclowns dance
And stop illegal CB for awhile

Did you read all of Part 95
Or do you have faith in Dave or Debby's jive
He says it cause the bible tells him so Now do you believe Scott69's CB tricks
And can Skipp save your 6LQ6
And did Aaron make you burn real slow
Well i know that you were in love with him
Cause i saw you dancing to his whims
You all turned off your brains
And swallowed that BS of Train's
We had us a wild AKC broncin' buck
Bust an auction, he didn't give a fuck
But we knew that we was out of luck
The day that Voobner left
We started singing

[Chorus]
Bye bye Aaron, Twistedhed lies
Moped he got roped
And Landshark did cry
And them keyclown boys were eatin hypocrite pies singing
This will be the day that i die
This will be the day that i die

Now the keyclowns sing some sorry blues
Professor makes up some happy news
But all just smile and turned away
Well i went down to the CB store
They sold amps there years before
But the man there said the FCC come that day
Well now in the streets the keyclowns screamed

The outlaws cried and the pirates dreamed
But not a word was spoken,
FCC rules they went unbroken
Yes Voobie was the man we admire most,
The father, son, and the holy ghost
And we knew the newsgroup it was toast
We started singing

[Chorus]
Bye bye Aaron, Twistedhed lies
Moped he got roped
And Landshark did cry
And them keyclown boys are eatin hypocrite pies singing
This will be the day that i die
This will be the day that i die

How about a personal situation? Will that do for proof? I help with the Livingston County Emergency Operations Center as an Assistant Digital Communications Coordinator. I take phone calls at all times of the day and night regarding the state of the county's communications equipment.

I run, at my own expense, a digipeater to get EOC data between Livingston, Washtenaw, and Oakland counties to the head EOC in Lansing. This digipeater repeats digital data between the EOC's so that the data can get through in a timely manner. The subject of the data is usually weather data during sever weather watches.

Ever see the weather reports on the news and see the term "Skywarn"? Guess who runs Skywarn? HAMs! Yeah, that's right...

Now it's your turn to quote data. What's your source. Callsign, name, whatever.

Fact of the matter is, it's required on ALL frequencies allocated to HAMs in times of emergency. If it's so trivial to pass the test, go out and pass it tomorrow. After you've passed it, scan and post your certificate of completion to a webpage for us all to see, then post the URL here.

The reason that 23 channel radios became illegal to sell new after 40 ch radios became legal, had to do mostly with tightened technical specs, that 40 channel radios had to pass in order to gain type acceptance. The older 23 channel radios could not meet the new specs, so they were no longer type accepted to sell as new equipment after a certain cutoff date.

Some of the "new" mandates of the time were PLL frequency synthesis (Many 23 channel rigs used xtal synths), improved (read: more effective) modulation limiting, and better shielding to limit TVI problems.

There is NO distance limit in the UK.
The RA make this clear on their website.

> * What are the CB Frequencies?
> --- in the UK
> The UK has 3 bands for CB as follows:

NO... only two.
Although, we can now obtain equipment with both of those bands in.

> 934.0125-934.9625 FM 20 channels, 0.05 MHz (50 kHz) spacing 4W > max power.

WRONG... the power output is 4Watts for 27MHz, but was 8Watts on 934... with directional antennas being allowed. I believe that the max. ERP was about 25 Watts.
However, the radios are now ILLEGAL to use.

> no new radios of this type are being made but existing equipment may > continue to be used legally.

The 934 sets have been illegal to use for some years now.
They did promise that they could be used for the lifetime of the sets... but soon went back on that.
I believe that the service that the band was given to has even stopped using it now. Technology moved on and they needed more space.

> 27.6 - 27.99 FM 40 channels, 0.01 MHz (10 kHz) spacing 4W max power.
> Radios using this band are marked "27/81-UK" and are only legal in the UK

That spec was withdrawn some years back.
The band is still in use, but the marking has changed and the spec tightened.
Old 27/81 sets can still be used, but new sets must conform to the new type spec. There was a bit of a fuss, as the RA gave a date for the shops to clear the old "27/81" sets by... but it was not long enough, with all the stocks held and the low sales.

They were promised severe prosecution if they sold new sets to the old spec after that date... with the threat of Trading Standards prosecuting them if they tried marketing them as second hand, when they were not.
As far as I know, nothing came of the threats... it would have finished off the CB shops, with all that money in useless stock and it would have stopped the government from receiving the taxes from the sales.

> Antennas must be omnidirectional - beams and yagis are prohibited.
Antennas

The length depends upon the type of antenna:
Monopole - 5/8 wave,
Dipole - 1/2 wave.

MODES:
There is mention on the UK group that the RA has finally made data transmission legal... packet on CB. I am checking out the information, and finding links which I will add to my site.
Still waiting for SSB.

hi
what is the most popular freq. 27mhz or 29mhz in USA and in Aus?
thanx
In the USA the cb band is from 26.96500 to 27.40500. Popular?
Sure....but so is 26 on up to 27.99500 (the freeband).
Check 27.555 USB for international DX. 28.00000 begins the ten meter amateur band..a good place to stay away from in the US unless you have your ticket. Aussies are found allo ver the freeband, from way down low to way up high.

What twithed didnt tell you is that 27.555, where he hangs out, is for faggots who pimp FUGGLIES.

I have to agree. I've been both a ham and a CBer and there are some traits of CBers I didn't like and some traits of hams I don't like. That's why I don't belong to the ARRL or any other ham radio organization.

I've never felt superior to CBers because I know that there are a lot of CBers out there who have a metric buttload of technical electronics knowledge. Just because you hear some CBers hollering for a radio check every five minutes doesn't mean that each one is just like them. I've even known hams who didn't know which end of the screwdriver to hold. Yes, the license test is supposed to make you show that you have some technical knowlege about radio, but they're so easy to pass that it's not hard at all any more.

On the contrary, Doug. I'm here because I enjoy the hobby, and if I can help someone run a clean station, I will.

As for Chuck, I think he's a jerk, and needs to take a bit of time off from everything to figure out a human being should act. You could stand to take the same advice.

You, however, are the traitor to HAM radio, running your mouth off, acting all big and shit, thinking you're Mr. Baddass, and acting EXACTLY like the CBers who you claim to hate so much.

A little introspection (is that too big a word for you?) might do you some good. Now go lay back down by your bowl. You don't want another asskicking like I gave you last time on this NG. I don't think a year and a half has been nearly long enough to completely heal your fragile psyche.

Oh, has the inferiority complex gotten any better? How about the bruises on your fingers from the tweezers?

On second thought, don't let us know, we're REALLY not interested.

However, to use a CB analogy, you are correct if you use the example of the 23 channel CB's. It is still OK to use them since they still use the same channels as the newer 40 channel radios. What I don't understand, though, is why the FCC thought it necessary to make it illegal to market 23 channel radios after they expanded the band to 40 channels. I would think that the market forces would regulate that change by itself. I mean, who would want to buy a brand new 23 channel radio when another company would offer a 40 channel radio at the same price?

The reason that 23 channel radios became illegal to sell new after 40 ch radios became legal, had to do mostly with tightened technical specs, that 40 channel radios had to pass in order to gain type acceptance. The older 23 channel radios could not meet the new specs, so they were no longer type accepted to sell as new equipment after a certain cutoff date.
Some of the "new" mandates of the time were PLL frequency synthesis (Many 23 channel rigs used xtal synths), improved (read: more effective) modulation limiting, and better shielding to limit TVI problems.

This is a completely UNFAIR assessment of BOTH CBers and Hams. While it may be true, and probably is, that most CBers don't obey the rules...most CBers DON'T know what the rules are in the first place. No this is no excuse but to just make a blanket statement that "CBer's don't obey the rules" is completely unfair and inaccurate. It is JUST AS INACCURATE to say that hams obey the rules. I am an Official Observer for the FCC (not an Official FCC Observer as someone else accused me of saying) and I can tell you that there are a great number of ham operators that DO NOT obey the rules. Just pick up any issue of your favorite ham publication, they are listed.

Also, to say that CBers don't provide community service smacks of either ignorance or a troll. I have worked plenty of natural desasters, we've had our share this year in south Texas, where CBers outnumbered hams ten to one.

CW does not prevent "ham radio from becoming CB." There are many areas, San Antonio included, where you couldn't tell the difference between channel 19 and one of the local repeaters.

You say that you are not a ham, it shows. IF you ever become a ham and IF you ever are called into community service you will learn to appreciate CBers.

SOME hams do, some don't. You make the same mistake he does with your BTW, it's "severe" weather watches.

More meaningless all-inclusive statements. SOME CBers do not provide a service, but it's also not a requirement. Also, SOME CBers DO know the code but choose not to bother with the license for reasons of their own.

All true. No code is required for 6 meters and above, and I know General-class hams who never use code and can't decipher it. They learned enough to pass the test and promptly forgot it. They have HF priviledges and have no intention of ever upgrading.

Simply not true. No code is required to do emergency (or any other) comms above 50 MHz, for example 2m repeaters. And nobody has to prove anything to you, least of all that they're licensed.

And there are licensed amateurs that do the exact same things: Use profanity, run unnecessarily high power to QSO, jam other hams, play music on the 75 meter phone band, and the like.

I'd say most of the "ill will towards CB" can still be traced back to 1958 when the FCC re-allocated 11 meters to the Citizen's Radio Service, taking it away from the licensed hams who didn't use it.

Yep, nothing more than the typical Catholic Church propaganda. They excuse their actions by saying that

"Crucially, Catholic priests and other clergy have nothing like a monopoly on sexual misconduct with minors. My research of cases over the past twenty years indicates no evidence whatever that Catholic or other celibate clergy are any more likely to be involved in misconduct or abuse than clergy of any other denomination - or indeed, than non-clergy."

So just because they do it in the same proportions as everyone else it's OK? Give me a break!

Here's another whopper!
"Also, the definition of "childhood" varies enormously between different societies."

So it's ok to take advantage of someone just because they aren't technically defined as a "child" by the society? BWAAAHAAAHAAA!

I can just hear it.
Priest: "How old are you my child?"
Parishioner: "I'm 18 and a half."
Priest: "All right, would you step into my office for a moment, this matter needs my personal attention."

It's WRONG for anyone in AUTHORITY or with any type of influence to take advantage of ANYONE!

The entire article is based on the age of the abused in the offense classification being "pedophilia" and does not address the fact that what they did was wrong, period wrong.

Besides whether or not you call it pedophilia, child abuse or consensual sex as an Orange County California priest's defense called it, these priests took a VOW before God to remain celebate for life. They abused their office big time by taking advantage of these young people. Christ Himself warned those who might abuse children saying that whatever you do to the "least of these" you do unto Me. So according to what Jesus has said these priests have abused Him!

One correction.. I wasn't talking about the code requirement, I was

As for my excuse, I don't have one. I made a typo. It happens.

So one of your personal experiences makes the case for "all hams" doing community service? You're kidding, right?

My friend is a volunteer firefighter. I guess he's just some shmuck, right?

Now there is something you never can get. Severe weather reports. I can't get them from TV, radio, or the internet. The country simply relies on you.

>Ever see the weather reports on the news and see the term "Skywarn"?

So what you are saying, is that the entire country's weather reports are at the mercy of hams? If anything happened to hams, the weather reporting would go down, and we couldn't get any weather reports?

Apparently so. I call it poor typing skills, which I have. You on the other hand, seem to have selective understanding. You understand most of my post, and Here is you quote"

"Fact of the matter is, it's required on ALL frequencies allocated to HAMs in times of emergency."

That's one hell of a typo. And I thought I was a poor typist.

>As for my excuse, I don't have one. I made a typo. It happens.

BTW, I only yesterday started looking into into passing the test. I have only recently started back on the CB after a 20 year absence. I have no ham equipment. I figured I would get my license first. And please don't sit there and act like you are some pompous ham, because you passed code. Like I said, you have you know 5 WPM. That does not qualify you as knowing code. That only qualifies you for a general class license. And it clearly will not be harder than the Windows 2000 Pro MCP that I passed. The 2 hams I know that passed code, don't even know it anymore. And since I have a electronics degree, the electronics portion will not be a problem. So after I relocate and find a ham club to take the test, I will post my call sign and certificate for my general class license, for you to see.

Then you can send me a weather report.

We've had the electric department to check and install new grounds, the cable company to replace all wiring to the house, and have asked him repeatedly to turn it down. Is he doing anything illegal. It seems hes bordering on harassment. I think he is simply operating with too much power. I've heard him talking all the time to folks in maine and seattle and we live in alabama. David, the CB'er is responsible for not causing interference. Ask the CB'er if he has his equipment and antenna grounded to an outside ground rod at which is at least 4-6 feet long. The best thing at first is to get a dialog going with him and ask him what he has before doing anything else. May not be power, it could also be a power mic turned up too far.

There are a few things that You can do
If You have a video camera , Video what it does to the computer and other things in the house . Then video the antenna .
Find out who the FCC field agent is in Your area then set up an appointment with Him or Her and show Them Your evidence . They should take the proper steps to stop the problem.
The downside to this is that this will still be Your neighbor .
One of the things that You can do is go to Your local electronics store and pick up some snap on chokes . Put these on Your keyboard , mouse and power cord . There is a good chance that this will solve the problems with the computer with the exception of any amplified speakers You may be running on the computer . and for the phone pick up some phone line filters from radio shack . all this would be good to take with You to the FCC
This fix can also be used on TV's , stereo's , ect. ect....
And of course You can always talk to Your neighbor and ask Him to limit His operation till late night or when Your not at home.
If He tells You something that You don't want to hear then go with the first suggestion and one other thing , When You make this video also go around to Your neighbors and see if He is causing any problems with them and if so make notes of who and where and also give this information to the FCC field agent.
Just a few other things that are effective alternates are :
Put a straight stick pin through His coax , or buy a cheap handheld cb and find out what channel He is on then get a rubber band and put it around the push to talk on Your hand held while on His channel, This will run Him crazy because He won't be able to hear anything but Your little signal and lets face it , most cbers are not smart enough to figure it out .(some good Mozart or classical music playing into the handheld will compliment this plan) and My favorite is to tie a water hose to His coax then the other end to the bumper of Your car then just haul ass . This will usually snatch His radio and gear right through the window before He ever knew what happened . When You get a few blocks away , cut the water hose and mail it to Him with a ha-ha note . very very effective.
Good luck and come on back and let us know what worked best for You

True, most anyone can pass any license class in one day.

Hams pride is on code, not on technical skills, with the exception of antennas to outfit the radios. Hams can get quite good with antennas.

Same with most Hams. They like to glorify what Ham Radio COULD be, not what it

If he refuses to turn it down, and you've tried everything on your end to stop the interference, call 1-888-CALL-FCC, and report him. Do this as a last resort, after having exhausted all other paths of trying to resolve the interference.

When they answer the phone, describe the problem, enumerate the steps you took to stop the interference on your end, and hope they decide to help you out.

Vinnie:

Again, you misunderstand what I was saying. It's either intentional density on your part, or you just missed the point.

I was stating that all frequencies allocated to the Amateur radio service are to be used for emergency traffic, if required. I wasn't talking about code requirements at all. The paragraph preceding the quote (which you conveniently left out) was talking about requiring the use of the frequencies for emergency traffic. That was my point.

Perhaps next time you should read a little more thoroughly...

The typo I was speaking of was the sever/severe oops...

No, you messed up, and are backtracking. And low you are blaming your typing skill. All I ever said to the inital poster who had his head up his ass, was while he was gloating about how great ham was and CB wasn't, and hat you find. I said that simply not true. You will find your assholes and your credible people in both, as well as most parts of life. You got your ass in an uproar asking me for my license, like that makes you special.

>I was stating that all frequencies allocated to the Amateur radio >service are to be used for emergency traffic, if required.

Are you kidding me? Read your own words here. You said code is required for alocated to hams in times of emergency.

"Fact of the matter is, it's required on ALL frequencies allocated to HAMs in times of emergency."

By this quote, you don't even know that code is not even required for certain frequencies. How the hell can you it's then required on "all frequencies" allocated to ham?

>I wasn't >talking about code requirements at all. The paragraph preceding the >quote (which you conveniently left out) was talking about requiring >the use of the frequencies for emergency traffic. That was my point.

There was no paragraph preceding your quote. The only thing preceding was this:

"Now it's your turn to quote data. What's your source. Callsign, name, whatever."

Which was in response to my quote:

>" It's not required on some ham frequencies, and from what my hame friends tell > me, it's overrated. You have to pass a 5 word per minute test. I don't see where > that qualifies as "knowing" morse code. And many that did pass the test, never Here is the your paragraph that came after"

"Fact of the matter is, it's required on ALL frequencies allocated to HAMs in times of emergency. If it's so trivial to pass the test, go out and pass it tomorrow. After you've passed it, scan and post your certificate of completion to a webpage for us all to see, then post the URL here."

You fucked up. And now are trying to blame it on a typo. This paragraph basically states it's required to pass the test, because it's needed in times of emergencies. WRONG.

Best of all, it was you who jumped down my ass, and are now bitching at me for throwing your own words in your face.

>Perhaps next time you should read a little more thoroughly...

Seems you need more of this advice.

>The typo I was speaking of was the sever/severe oops...

What the hell are you talking about? You are now changing the story. Here is the original typo:

"One correction.. I wasn't talking about the code requirement, I was talking about the requirement that Amateur frequencies are used for emergency communications. I know good and well where code is required and where it isn't.

As for my excuse, I don't have one. I made a typo. It happens."

Now, you don't even know what typo you are talking about. You just changed the story. First the code requirement was a typo, now it's the word "severe".

And you passed the test !!!!!!

>So stop jumping up my ass for something you misunderstood...

Remember, it was you who jumped down my ass. Get your shit together.

>My ass is exit only.

That's none of my business. That's your problem.

Fine. I ill ask you again. So one of your personal experiences makes the case for "hams" doing community service? You're kidding, right?

Now answer it.

Just out of curiousity, what does the national weather service do? Do they depend on hams?? How about all the doppler radars? Are they run by hams? What about if I see a tornado, and call it in on my cell phone? Do I need a ham you get the message thru? I would bet I could call the local authorities faster on my cell phone if I saw a tornado, faster than the hams could get it to the EOC.
Do you think the only people that can see a tornado before radar and report it, are hams only? In other words, I am not qualified to see a tornado? LOL.

I will throw him an olive branch because I came on this newsgroup to re-educate myself about CB, after being away for 20 years. I stated to the original poster that you will find all sorts of people in both CB and ham, as well as any parts of life. Then this guy has to jump thown my throat about licenses and code. Last I looked, I was in a CB newsgroup, and there was no requirement for license.

Again, this is bullshit. The requirement is 5 WPM. That does not make you "know" code. That simply passes the requirement for a General class. I would guess that the vast majority of hams, learned it just to pass the test, and that's it. And the 2 hams I know, don't use or know code. But they passed the test.

99% of interference is caused by lack of filtration in the TV set or other electrical equipment....providing the cb your neighbours using is legal..
yes you can call them out and they will inspect your neighbours radio cb set up and installation...and if it is all installed ok they will then come into your home and test your TV hifi e.c.t and if the problem is in your equipment you will have to pay them ?50 plus any parts used to fix the problem.....

Agreed... but most TVI problems that involve CBer's are caused from non-legal stations using amplifiers with improper biasing schemes. This is most likely one of those cases...

David, your problem sounds more like a HAM radio. {the long range} It very likely is his equipment. You can ask him about it. Then call the FCC if you cannot work with him.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1326 – January 10, 2003

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1326 with a release date of Friday, January 10, 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. Ham radio gets two new satellites and the F-C-C tells a radio club that it wont get involved in an internal club dispute. The details on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1326 coming your way right now.

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: RUBIN-2 / SAFIR-M IN ORBIT

Two new ham radio satellites are in space. One is from Germany and the other from Saudi Arabia. Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, has the details has the details on a German payload called SAFIR-M:

Audio Only Report. No text available. Hear it in MP3 at http://www.arnewsline.org

More information is available i on the SAFIR-M website http://amend.gmxhome.de But be advised that it is in the German language. There is no English translation provided. (ANS, Q-News)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: SAUDISAT 1C ALSO IN ORBIT

The other new satellite is called SaudiSat 3. Its also known as SaudiSat One C and now as SO-50 – its ham radio designation.

As it name implies, this is the third in the unique SaudiSat series. It was also on board the same Russian launcher that orbited SAFIR-M.

Accordiing to AMSAT North America, this latest bird in the SaudiSat series comes by way of the Space Research Institute of the King Abdulaziz City for Science and Technology. For ham radio operation it carries what amounts to closed but available on-demand cross-band F-M repeater. The input uplink is on 145.85 MHz. The output channel is 436.775 at 250 milliwats into a quarter wave antenna.

And like a growing number of terrestrial repeaters, this orbital one requitres use of an access tone. In the case of SaudiSat, that tone frequency is 67.0 Hertz.

And there is one other similarity to closed terrestrial repeaters. SaudiSat-1C also requires that a designated control operator activate it on each pass so that it can be used by the general ham radio community. (ANS)

THE 5 MEGS EXPERIMENT: ARRL SAYS ITS WAITING FOR A NEW BAND

The ARRL is out of the 5 Mhz experiment and is now hoping for for the creation of a new ham band. Amateur Radio Nerwsline’s Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the rest of the story:

The ARRL has permitted its WA2XSY experimental license for 5 Mhz to expire on January 1st. The League says that it is now pinning its hopes on the FCC to establish a new ham band in that spectrum but admits that it is facing some stiff opposition.

An ARRL bulletin says that starting in January 1999, 15 Amateur Radio clubs and individual hams took part in the 5-Mhz experimental operation that basically concluded in 2002. Through these operations the ARRL says that it obtained sufficient information to justify its petition for creation of the new band.

Last May, the FCC proposed going along with the ARRL's request to create a new domestic secondary High Frequency allocation from 5.25 to 5.4 Mhz. But in August the National Telecommunications and Information Administration requested that the Commission not go forward with the proposal. The NTIA says that several government agencies with allocations in the proposed spectrum had expressed reservations about sharing the spectrum with hams.

But the ARRL is still very hopeful the new band can be created. In fact, it has been working with the government to resolve the impasse. Meantime, the FCC has yet to act on the 5 Mhz request.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m, Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

The ARRL says that the new allocation at 5 MHz is an urgent priority for Amateur Radfo. It says such an allocation would enhance emergency communication activities by filling a propagation gap that exists between the 80 and 40 meter bands. In the meantime, experimental operations on 5 MHz continue on a limited basis in the United Kingdom and in Canada. (ARRL)

RESCUE RADIO FOLLOW-UP: THE GUAM SUPER TYPHOON

Guam continues to recover from the super typhoon which hit last month. Amateur Radio Newsline’s David Black, KB4KCH, has the latest:

By far, the best source of information during and after the December 8th super typhoon that hit Guam has been Duncan Campbell, KF6ILA. Campbell lived through the storm and reported on it and the welfare of Guam’s ham radio community through his postings to the QRZ.om website. In his latest report Campbell says that the focus has shifted to recovery from the giant storm.

Campbell says that utility services are slowly being restored. As his report was filed about 30 percent of the island had both electricity and water. He says that the electrical restoration is hampered by a lack of transformers on the island. A shipment is expected shortly.

More signs of recovery Schools were slated to re-open on January 6th. Three schools which are too damaged to reopen. These students will be bused to other schools which are open.

As to ham radio on the island. As reported earlier all of Guam's radio amateurs are safe. There was s damage to some homes due to windows being blown out but no homes were destroyed. And two members of the Marianas Amateur Radio Club radio reportedly rode out the storm in their boat moored in the harbor.

Campbell says that a pair of Guam's more senior hams were not able to get their antennas down in time. He explains that the younger operators usually take care of them before a typhoon when there is notice. This time the typhoon was being reported as missing Guam by 100 miles up to 12 hours prior to landfall. So their antennas were still up when the typhoon hit. Needless to say the antennas and towers were destroyed.

Having talked to these two, Campbell reports that they do not know when, if ever, they will be able to replace their antennas. But help may be on the way. The Marianas Amateur Radio Club is already in discussions to install some wire dipoles for the high frequencies and some copper J-Poles for 2 meters at their homes.

Finally, Campbell says that the Red Cross, Salvation Army and FEMA are doing an outstanding job here on the island. Though he hears that the national news outlets are not covering this disaster, he wants the world of Amateur Radio to know that Guam is not being neglected..

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm David Black, KB4KCH.

According to Campbell, the Army field hospitals he reported having been flown in have now shut down and the medical professionals have now returned home. The hospitals have been stabilized with power and water, and the damage occurred has been patched, though final repairs are still months away. (KF6ILA, ARNewsline™)

Break 1

From the United States of America, We are the Amateur Radio Newsline, heard on bulletin stations around the world including the W5MCC New Orleans VHF Club 2 meter net heard Monday nights on their 146.86 MHz repeater.

ENFORCEMENT: ITS NOT OUR BUSINESS

If you are having a personal disagreement with a member of your radio club, don't bring it to the FCC. That's the message sent by the regulatory agency to a Texas group where it says that it will not iget involved. The agency's Daryl Duckworth, N-N-Zero-W, explains:

Duckworth:"The complaint of the Texas Soputhmost Amateur Radio Club concerning actions by a former trustee was dismissed. The club was told that the matter was Civil and best handled by the local courts."

By way of background in January of 2002 the San Benito, Texas, based filed a complaint with the FCC. It requested that the Commission issue a Cease and Desist Order to Thomas A. Tanner directing him to stop unauthorized operation of the club repeater. It also wanted him to remove his personal equipment from club property and discontinue unauthorized use of other club equipment.

But says the FCC says that setteling what amounts to interpersonal disputes is not within is jurisdiction or purview. Rather its a civil matter and not one that the Commission does not plan to pursue any further. (FCC, RAIN)

ENFORCEMENT: NO MUSIC ON 2 METERS

The FCC has told an California ham that he could face some strong punitive action. This, following allegations that he transmitted music in the two meter band.

The warning comes in a December 12th letter to Mark T. Sprague, KF6WAF of Antioch. In it the regulatory agency says that monitoring information indicates that on numerous occasions in October and November of 2002 that Sprague transmitted music on 146.415 MHz simplex and also failed to properly identify his station. The FCC says that direction finding bearings led them directly to Sprague's home.

The agency tells Sprague that these charges are violations of Sections 97.113 and 97.119 of the Amateur Service Rules. It adds that he could be subject to license revocation and suspension proceedings, as well as a monetary forfeiture or fine. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: STAY OFF 20 METERS

One last chance to straighten out your act or we we act against your ham license. Thats the jist of a warning from the FCC to a Michigan ham. Amateur Radio Newsline's Mert Garlick, N6AWE, takes an in-deoth look:

The threat of stern enforcement action comes in the form of a letter to to Michael E. Guernsey Sr., ND8V, of Parchment Michigan. Its from FCC rules enforcer Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH. In it, Hollingsworth says that his agency continues to receive complaints of Guernsey's alleged appropriation of certain frequencies and interference to certain operators who attempt to use them. Among the frequencies mentioned in Hollingsworth's letter are 14.262 and 14.275 Mhz – both in the 20 meter band.

And the FCC notes that this is not the first time that it has taken up enforcement issues to Guernsey. Hollingsworth letter reminds ND8V that the agency has contacted him before regarding such incidents. Specifically on November 14, 2000 and May 20, 2002. And after the November 2000 incident Guernsey's authority to operate below 30 MHz was removed for a period of nine months.

And says Hollingsworth, he is not going to warn Guernsey again. He tells ND8V that if it writes to him another time it will be to notify him that the FCC is taking punitive action. Hollingsworth says that future incidents of such operation -- even a single incident -- will result in a fine being issued and revocation proceedings against Guernsey's ham radio license being initiated. That says the FCC, is the way that it is.

Meantime, Hollingsworth has taken one step to defuse the overall problem. He has told Guernsey to stay off of the 20 Meter Amateur Band until the issues surrounding the allegations of his operation are resolved. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: HAM JAILED FOR SPYING STILL HOLDS HAM TICKET

A ham who is serving a life sentence for espionage still has his ticket. This even though he will probably never be permitted near a piece of ham gear again. Amateur Radio Newsline's Kenn Locke, N8PJN, tells us why:

Remember Robert Hanssen the former F-B-I agent convicted last year of spying? If you do, you will also recall that he held the Amateur Radio service call sign K-9-Q-V-L.

Well guess what. He still does.

Contrary to what many hams thought would happen, the FCC has not acted to revoke his Amateur Service licenses. The reason? Most likely nobody has bothered to ask it to.

While Hanssen may have been one of the highest profile cases in 2002, the charges against him did not involve prosecution by the FCC. It was a matter for the Department of Justice and Federal Prosecutors. As such, its very unlikely that anyone in either agency sat down to write a letter to their counterparts at the FCC asking them to cancel Hanssen's ham radio license.

The bottom line: Unless someone files a formal request, the chances are that Robert P. Hanssen will remain as K9QVL until his ticket expires. Maybe longer if he decides to try to renew it from his cell in the Federal Penitentiary where he will probably live out the rest of his natural life.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Ken Locke, N8PJN.

Thanks Ken. (ARNewsline™)

REPEATER LISTINGS: ARRL SEEKS REPEATER LISTINGS FROM COORDINATORS

This note to frequency coordinators. The deadline for this year's submissions of listing for the 2003 ARRL Repeater Directory is Friday, February 7, 2003. As has been the case for many years, the ARRL only accepts listings from recognized frequency coordinators unless no coordinator exists in a specific region. For more information on how to list repeaters please contact Brennan Price, N4QX, at ARRL headquarters. His e-mail is n4qx@arrl.org. (Repeater Owners Remailer)

ARRL: LICENSE RENEWAL AND OTHER SERVICES TO NONMEMBERS

The ARRL is now providing F-C-C Amateur Radio license renewals, address changes and other license modification services to nonmembers. For a $12 fee, the League will renew a nonmember's Amateur Radio ticket within 90 days of expiration, file an application to change address or name or request issuance of a new sequential call sign.

For several years, the ARRL has been handling renewals, address and name changes and modifications free of charge for members. Nommembers were directed to the FCC's free Internet or hard-copy application options or to other providers of such services. (ARRL)

GOOD INFORMATION SOURCE: NEW RFR WEB SITE

Our friends over at the CGC Communicator report that RF Safety Solutions has a new web site dealing with that very subject.

As its name implies, RF Safety Solutions is a company that provides consulting for those concerned with human exposure to RF signals. It was founded in 2002 by Richard Strickland who is a well-known expert in the field of RF safety and who has developed RF safety programs and conducted training for a number of major wireless communications companies and broadcasters

The RF Safety Solutions web site covers RF safety reporting, safety programs and training. There is also a good overview of what RF radiation really is. Its really one of the best thought out places to learn about R-F safety. Look for it in cyberspace at www.rfsafetysolutions.com. (CGC)

THAT FINAL ITEM: DOGGIE TALK AND THE IG NOBEL AWARDS

And finally this week, word that an inter-species communications device has received special recognition. Amateur Radio Newsline’s producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more:

No, we are not kidding. An inter-species communications apparatus -- as in a dog-to-person translator -- is one of the winners of the 2002 Ig Nobel Awards.

What are the Ig Noble awards you ask? They are a spoof of the famed Nobel Awards ceremony and are given annually at Harvard University to recognize achievements that cannot or should not ever be reproduced.

Winners are selected by a secret committee from thousands of nominations. Actual Nobel Laureates present the Ig Nobel’s at a ceremony where the winners are hailed with cheers and a flurry of paper airplanes. And if a recipient feels insulted or slighted by the award, it is withdrawn.

For 2002 those victorious included the people behind the definitive study on bellybutton lint and an inquiry into what arouses ostriches. But by far the dog to person translator was one of the most popular. Its works by listening to the tone of a dog's bark converting that data into an interpretation of the dogs mood.

The device is already on the market in Japan. An English language version called Bow-Wow-Lingual -- nope -- we are now kidding -- Bow-Wow-Lingual -- It may be on the market here in the U-S-A in about a year. And we thought that you’d want to know.

Hmmmm. If it happens, we wonder what breed will be honored with an Ig Nobel for being the first to dog to get a ham radio license and make DXCC.

More about the Ig Nobel awards is in cyberspace at http://www.improb.com/ig/ig-top.html (Science Frontiers)

130 amps x 13.8 volts = Watts. Divide 746 into the watts and there is the answer to your horsepower.
Now I am not sure about belt drag etc but there you have the answer.

Not much.....I have an alternator mounted on a board with a 1hp electric motor to charge my battery in my shack.....I just turn the motor on whenever I use my amp and the battery stays charged all the time. The motor spins at 1750 rpm and thats enough for my setup.I would say 2 hp will be plenty, just get those rpms up. You might have to change pulleys on the engine so it will run faster at a lower engine speed

That's odd. I know Comcast blocks the networking ports (135-139) and I know they block port 22 (VPN/Secure Shell) in, so I figured they would also block port 80 coming in. I figured no HTTP server would work at the allotted port. I don't have any servers running, but I will go block those ports right now anyway.

HORSE HOCKEY!! Even the FCC knows that most interference problems are really caused by improperly constructed (read: CHEAP!) consumer electronics.

When I was CBing 20 years ago, I was coming in on my father's TV, with a Radio-Shack TRC-422A pushing 3.5 watts. And that was thru cable TV.

When I set up a base after I relocate, I will use a quality 95% shielding coax, a TVI, etc. I am not sure how much TVI filters work. I spent $40 one time, and it didn't work.

Oh yeah, I forgot, I volunteer too. I do some commo for the Texas Guard, 19th Brigade. Besides some military frequencies, we use ham, CB, and GMRS (commercial) frequencies and equipment at times. It's for interoperability, and it's real important in an emergency.

Since as volunteers we supply 99% of our own gear, we do this with a mix of equipment, some of it is military, some is consumer or commercial gear which has been modified. Our radios including CB's are in compliance with FCC rules. All mod/service work on the radios is done by FCC radiotelephone license holders.

Go in, set up, listen to all, talk to some..
HOOAH!

Here's one of our vehicles:
"http://65.64.220.210/~opcom/my_m35.htm"

Superior? No, not at all. I have heard alot of CB-like talk on the ham bands from time to time. 2 meters is a good example. It does not bother me. I just like electronics, and the Guard is exciting! I try to do things to my best ability.

By the way, you get caught saying 10-4 on a military net and someone's gonna chew yer butt.

I find that renaming win.com (98) does the job pretty well. Until the machine is rebooted, nothing appears to be wrong.

Microsoft windowed o/s stinks. VMS 7.2 is my choice when possible.

I get 130 amps at 14-15 volts in my radio room. It and my deep cycle battery are in my utility shed just on the south side of my room. I have two switches under my desk that run it. 1 is 110v to turn on the motor, and the other one is 12v to supply the alt with a field. it works great for what I use it for and its a hell of alot cheaper than any 100 amp power supply

I filtered those ports, but then you can't get to web sites

I asked the original poster because his post said "hams" do community service. He said it in a way to mock CBers, and that none do community service. I don't doubt at all that hams do community service. But not all hams. and I am sure that plenty of CBers do community service. I would also think that it would not have to be radio related. I would consider community service being anything like volunteer firefighting, coaching little league, working elections, etc.

Right, and the higher-powered stations have a stronger near-field radiation pattern, meaning that they are more likely to interfere with neighbors farther away than 4-watt transmitters are. Next door, though, probably won't make any difference between 4 watts or 500 watts.

Well, there is paging, but that's about it. However, I have heard PSK31

I would agree with Brian here....

He does not just post his amp info....he PARTICIPATES in the conversations! Actully, his posts are better then your (morph's) bitching, whining and complaining posts! How about contributing more and crying less!

And while we are at it... What is it about this group that HATES a quality built amp? I would think that people here would want a BETTER radio system! But then again, many of you like the RCI and Galaxy radios...so I guess you are willing to compromise.

Brian is the ONLY person who has taken the extra steps to provide a better quality device. Sure it isn't a competition amp...but those in the KNOW wouldn't run one of those dirty amplifiers!

Only a few feel this way....they're not representative of the group whatsoever. Those few that usually have a problem with are confused as to what they really hate.

>I would think that people here would want a >BETTER radio system!

The sky is the limit.

>But then again, many of you like the RCI and >Galaxy radios...so I guess you are willing to >compromise.

I have a pizzed upon hammie or 3 on the freeband that are living testament that my Galaxy is no compromise and never was. It exceeded my wildest DX expectations (which was my main objective) and is loud as all hell on AM while staying crystal clear. It can take a beating, has never needed serviced and has some mileage as well as years. While the Ten-Tec is 10 times the radio, it's also 10 times the "high maintenance" factor,,ditto for many all band hammie rigs. The Galaxy is plug and play...one of the biggest bangs for the buck when it comes to loud and proud on AM. I know what my radio sounds like and it sounds damn good.....and I don't need a linear. I could turn the ever-so-slight echo completely off and say I was on my Ten-Tec and guarantee none would be the wiser on AM, save for the locals that know me. Hey, some like Ford, some like Chevy, some like Dodge.

>Brian is the ONLY person who has taken the >extra steps to provide a better quality device.

Sure would be nice to know if one them daily stations I talk to in Chi-town are of Brians labor.....as goes the Galaxy, in the radio world hearing is believing. I'll ask 'em if any of 'em heard of the "Skywave".

>Sure it isn't a competition amp...but those in >the KNOW wouldn't run one of those dirty >amplifiers!

Some say the same thing about the Galaxy...while I'm shooting DX, some of these same folk are waiting for their "better" rig to be repaired.

Different strokes....

Ummm..the craft for which I utilize the Galaxy is quite mobile.......one wouldn't practically use a base in a mobile situation.

>for the price they are JUNK!<

Got a great deal on mine......you must have missed the line were I said they last a long, long time and are trouble free for the most part..couple that with their sound and it certainly isn't junk when applied to AM HF.

The Galaxy is plug and play...one of the biggest bangs for the buck when it comes to loud and proud on AM.

>Which Galaxy are you speaking off the Saturn >is the biggest Turd for the buck.

No, I prefer the mobile lines that have the Malaysian board.

I know what my radio sounds like and it sounds damn good....

>Did you think

I say what I think.

>we expect you to say your radio >sounds like >shit?

I don't expect anything of the "we" you speak for,,neither does anyone else. I get compliments daily on my radio and it is in use other times when I am not the operator. It sounds great..I hear it all the time.

and I don't need a linear. I could turn the ever-so-slight echo completely off and say I was on my Ten-Tec and guarantee none would be the wiser on AM,

>So you do admit to using another Illegal radio

Why are you so ignorantly hostile?
A Ten-Tec is not an illegal radio no matter how much spin you put behind it..you were educated last month of why an export is a legal radio after you mistakenly and intentionally claimed it was not legal in any manner.

>to freeband
> and perhaps talk on the amateur bands.

You interpret all that from my statement that you couldn't tell the difference between it and the Galaxy with the echo turned off on AM? No wonder you are so full of perplexion and discord..you're seriously cornfused. If you were ever to catch me on an amateur band, you can rest assured I am qualified to be there. So, for now, you must be absolutely content with your use of "perhaps".

Ahhhhh yes, my '65 Mustang also had an alternator with an external mechanical regulator. Alternators were the new thing. Their voltage was higher at idle then a generator.

I have been given an old Cardon Iroquois 40 CB radio to see if I can retune and/or fix why it's not working.

Would anyone have a schematic or web page for such an older CB base station?

thanks!

The fact that the original poster of this message hasn't replied to a single reply in 2 days tells me this is most likely a troll post and I am quite amazed that no one else seems to have picked up on it.

Just in case you're real, "David", here's some information or you:

1. Anyone operating a LEGAL CB station has no legal responsibility to prevent interference to your house. Read the little stickers and instruction books that come with your electronics. It says something like "This device must accept all interference." Visit http://www.reactintl.org/rules-cb.htm for all the CB rules.

2. According to Part 95, it is illegal "to communicate with, or ATTEMPT to communicate with, any CB station more than 155.3 miles (250 kilometers) away" so if he is talking to stations in Maine or Washington, he's violating the rules, but that's not the easiest thing to prove.

3. Visit http://www.arrl.org/FandES/field/regulations/rfi-legal/

4. Visit http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/rfigen.html

5. Ignore the "pin his coax" and other destructive type responses you receive here.

6. Forget about asking the FCC for help. They won't respond to interference complaints unless you have proof someone is operating illegally, and that's not easy to obtain.

The alternator doesn't care if you use a vertical or horizontal shaft engine

A Ten-Tec is not an illegal radio no matter how much spin you put behind it..you were educated last month of why an export is a legal radio after you mistakenly and intentionally claimed it was not legal in any manner.

You nor any CBer or amateur can use a Ten Tec on 11 meters. therefore in this context it is illegal, now go wash off.

After watching The Simpsons on TV, I have to wonder who would trust a repair to someone named Homer :~)
I have seen how Homer Simpson fixes a TV... a good thump or two on the set.

I cannot comment on this chaps technical skills, but his marketing skills are sadly lacking. The Internet is a worldwide medium, with this group being mainly Americans with a sprinkling of us Brits. I don't expect his Spamming will get people to travel to Canada just to get a CB repaired by him.

For the record, I don't hate CB. In fact I like it alot. For the last 30+ years. I do have a disdain for a growning number of operators, who disregard common courtesy, sense, and engineering practice, in their endless pursuit of being king of the hill.

I wouldn't trust your definition of "clipping", "peaking", nor "high performance", as it has been shown your agenda is one of attack and sarcasm and not in the best interest of cb or hammie radio. As far as being "a much better way",....it depends what you are comparing your vague references to.

Too late, He put himself on the list long ago. It started when he began lawyering for artificial Aaron and defending N8 in several posts.
And more will talk to you when you become skilled in communications and

If I was on my Ten-Tec or the Galaxy on AM with the ever-so-slight echo turned off you wouldn't be able to tell the difference.

>So you do admit to using another Illegal radio

Why are you so ignorantly hostile?
A Ten-Tec is not an illegal radio no matter how much spin you put behind it..you were educated last month of why an export is a legal radio after you mistakenly and intentionally claimed it was not legal in any manner.

>You nor any CBer or amateur can use a Ten >Tec on 11 meters. therefore in this context it is >illegal,

No one ever made the claim the Ten-Tec could be used on 11 meter. You intentionally snipped the part that specifically said "HF DX AM".
In addition to the anger, you're cornfused again.

>now go wash off

Everytime I do you're underneath trying to get a drink.

>to freeband
>and perhaps talk on the amateur bands.

You interpret all that from my statement that you couldn't tell the difference between it and the Galaxy with the echo turned off on AM? No wonder you are so full of perplexion and discord..you're seriously cornfused. If you were ever to catch me on an amateur band, you can rest assured I am qualified to be there. So, for now, you must be absolutely content with your use of "perhaps".

Some say the same thing about the Galaxy...

>I can't blame them either.<

To each their own...if one isn't a fan of AM HF DX, it would be easy to slam...as are many of the hammie rigs in the same application.

I wouldn't trust your definition of "clipping", "peaking", nor "high sarcasm and not in the best interest of cb or hammie radio. As far as being "a much better way",....it depends what you are comparing your

Take the red and black power wires and plug them into the nearest 120V AC wall receptacle. The current out of this outlet is more than enough to power your radio. Also by using the in house wiring, your ERP will more than triple. In other words you will "get out"

I tried this with a computer power supply off of the 12 volt lines...
+12v 8.0 amps, -12v .3 Amps, 2 ground wires (I was using one of the drive power connectors). I had this connected with gator clips to the cut wires on the CB...Didn't seem to have enough juice...is there a way
CD
I can make that setup work? How should it be connected up? Should I just use a wall-wart type 12v adapter and connect it to the lines?

Also, the CB says 13.8v on the back...everything I've seen says 12v..

Any experts give me a good link or idea?

You need at least a 4 amp power supply. And it goes up from there, depending on the peaking.

I much prefer a calculated risk.

Example, buying ONE lotto ticket when the jackpot is $100M.

I can only lose $1. My chances are no greater by buying more then one.

The lottery is a tax on people who don't understand statistics.

Agreed. When wagering, the odds are always in favor of the house. If folks would only gamble with what they could afford to throw away we would have no need for GA. Been to any local horse or dog races lately?

Automotive brake cleaner? Great... You can watch all of the plastic parts in the radio shrivel and crack... 20 years ago, I thought automotive brake cleaner was cool for cleaning switches and stuff.. Until I sprayed the emission switch of a Browning Eagle Mk III, and watched the blue plastic inner rotator hub fall apart.. Took me about a week to hand make an inner hub.. If your gonna try and clean ANYTHING that has plastic parts, make sure you have a plastic friendly type of spray before you douche your radio. In fact, even though it says plastic friendly, test it on a plastic part befrore you continue. I have found that the product "Blow Off Contact Cleaner" which is available in computer repair shops works great, even on those pesky plastic driven rotator hubs in CB and Ham rigs... BTW, don't even think of spraying brake cleaner into a potentiometer to try and clean it... You will promptly see some black crap exit the pot... This USE to be the carbon part of the resistor that the wipers press against while turning the pot... Ruined a Collins R-392 volume control like this too.. Ahhhh... When I was a child, I fixed rigs like a child, when I grew up, I figured out what the hell NOT to do!!! Good Luck..

ThisIsMyName,
A computer power supply, at least the common variety, does not supply enough current from the 12 volt tap to run the qaverage CB radio. The common 'wal-wart' won't do it either. Most CB radios need something between 3 and 7 amps of current. Find a power supply that supplies at least 7 amps (more is better).

Take a look at these pages.You need at least a 3 amp regulated 12 or 13.8 volt power supply. The term 12 volt, as in describing a power supply, usually means 13.8 volts.

I agree, 2000 is much more stable than 98. I need to get directly at

That CB'ers do community service, I don't doubt. The media just does not play it up as much, and there are always those who do 'community service on demand', who we never hear of, such as the guy that puts

I guess it would depend on what country you are from. People have different ways of saying the same thing. I talk to many American hams who word things differently than us Canadians do, but I still know what they mean.

Well, unfortunately I don't remember exactly where, but it may have been on 27.555. I believe the operator was typing Spanish, so was probably from south of here.

The trick is connecting a load across the +5V wire and ground, such as a 12V automotive lamp. Computer power supplies need a load across the +5V to be used as a 12V supply. 8 Amps should be plenty to run a stock CB radio from. You might also want to connect all the +12V wires together, and all the ground wires together. I have plans on how to use a computer power supply as a 12VDC supply at www.geocities.com/n2uhc/pwrsupply.html.

and comes with a hand mic, schematics/parts listing from Cobra/Dynacorp., matching external speaker. Display/clock/freq.counter working perfectly, very few minor scratches on top of cabinet, but face is quite clean.

Trying to raise funds to get my son an Icom R75 shortwave radio...
Paid $375 five years ago (a little much, yes, but it IS in nice condition), used relatively little, not original owner but I never went inside to do anything more than clean. No butcher jobs!!! I'm asking $250 you ship, $275 I ship.

With computer chips, it is actually rather trivial and inexpensive. It doesn't even require multiple chip designs, just some burnable ROM on the computer chip. Then the only way to bypass this blocking is replace it with a computer chip that did not have the blocking.

And international Ham bands are not that vastly different. There is no need, for example, of continuous broadband transmit capabilities. Yet most of the modern HF transceivers have this capability - often by the simple flipping of a switch.

I stand by my previous statement.

...a Part 15 device WILL put Morse code LEGALLY "on the cb band."

My niece and I practiced our code across approx. 15 mi. very well on 100mW.
There ARE some specific rules re. ERP that you must follow to be entirely legal, but you can offset that by raising the transmitting antenna (this involves locating the entire xmitter section up in a tree or on a mast.) and using a directional recieving antenna. Seems like a bunch of work, but it's really not if you already have CB or ham gear in place.

BTW, packet is now legal on CB in the U.K., next up...SSB. ;-)

Yep, that's every hams dream alright, to touch as much ham equipment as possible. I can't even go near a ham store anymore. I get within 10 feet of the front door and I start to shake uncontrollably and sweat profusely. My wife thinks I crazy, but I tell her it's normal, I'm just a hammy.

"Backward Swing" is a term that actually describes a condition where there is not enough modulator power to fully 100% positive modulate a particular carrier power level. This usually occurs due to a weak part or a misalignment of the RF section, that aligns for maximum dead key wattage.

If your dead key power is significantly higher than 4 watts (6 or more), I'd suspect that the rig was improperly aligned. Have the rig tuned by a competent tech, and the problem should go away.

If the power is at or less than 4 watts, then I'd suspect a defective or weak part or a poor design (There were a few like that over the years).

No, there won't be. I've reached my limit of trying to debate with someone who is obviously short on mental facilities. Once he got to that level of nit picking where he tried to make a distinction between suburban philly, and a suburb of philly, that was it. Anyone with half a brain knows that there is no real difference. But Twisty likes to pick apart nuances, and obfuscate meanings in order to make them fit into his own self conceived universe of make believe.

A wise older person once told me that if you try to tell a nut that he's nuts, he'll think that you're crazy. Such is the case here. I'm through defending myself to that nitwit. If he wants to think that I'm a liar, then he's welcome to do so. I know differently, and it matters little what a sociopathic malcontent in the bowels of Florida thinks, when put in the perspective of the big picture.

The truth is still that everyday, he operates in violation of Federal FCC regulations, which makes him a federal criminal, and should he finally get caught, he will feel the burden of his crimes. He gambles on the likelihood that he'll never get caught, and he's probably right. But what does that say about a person, who openly defies laws, when he stands a good chance of getting away with it? The fact that he has little regard for the rights of other people, the legitimate users of the "freeband", or the rules of society, only confirms his mental condition. The fact that new technologies used to monitor people, thereby increasing the ability of law enforecement to catch lawbreakers, bothers him to such an extent, is further testamony to his desire to do what he wants to do, without having to deal with the consequences. Any deflection from this onto any other subject is only a feeble attempt to trivialize his abhorent behavior by slinging mud at those who point it out.

True to an extent. But it is more costly to stock many different variations of basically the same part. Most CPU's are masked ROMS, which are not field programmable. Having erasable ROM on board increases the part cost considerably. When we design products, we develop using CPU's with erasable ROM. Once the product is finalized the design is sent to the chip maker in masked form, for mass production, which is much cheaper. Chip makers also price by quantity. If you can buy 100K of a part, it will be cheaper than if you only buy 10K. So if you have to make 6 different variations of a CPU, to cover the expected frequency bands, you will not be able to realize those volume discounts, as each part is a different mask, which requires a different part number, additional inventory tracking etc.

When you consider that shaving a few dollars off of the BOM, could give you an edge over competitor's products, you do everything you can to maximize profit, at minimal cost.

The cynic inside me tends to agree with you. I can understand that the marketing gurus at these radio companies see the enormous market opportunities that could be gained by their rigs being easily converted to operate outside of the legal ham bands. Market share is a great motivator.

That being said, there are many markets in the world, where operating an amateur radio, outside of the "ham" bands would not be illegal, providing that the operators had the proper authorization. MARS is just one example. I'm sure other countries have similar services, and are not governed by strict "type acceptance" rules.

Use on 11 meter CB in the US is only one of many "other" markets, that the big ham radio makes look to capitalize on. There are many other bands that are available when the rig is "opened up", other than 11 meters.

But there are many factors, inculding the cost of manufacture, that play a big role. If there are no rules that require "band switching", and it is cheaper not to do so, then it doesn't happen. If the FCC starts requiring "type acceptance" for ham radios, and one of those requirements is no out of band transmit, then the manufacturers will have to comply. But don't be surprised if the cost of the rig jumps up a bit. Of course they'll try to spin it as an "improvement" or "enhancement" over the older radios, and you'll still have guys complaining that the new radios do less, so why should they cost more? But the truth is there in the cost of manufacture, for those who understand the process.

I used VMS 15 years ago. Is it still useful? Have they developed a GUI interface, or is it still text based? Are there any good applications?

The reason why VMS isn't prone to virii, is that there isn't enough interest for a hacker to make one. A "cyber terrorist" is interested in causing the most damage. That's why the greatest majority of virii are windows based. You don't see many MAC virii either. UNIX used to be fairly safe too, until the rise in the popularity of LINUX.

I don't know if I would want to cripple myself by using an old, nonstandard, and largely unsupported, operating system, in order to gain some system security. I run firewall programs, and virus scanners, and my machine uses NAT to hide it's actual IP address behind the firewall. If by chance, I do get "hit", I can restore everything in a few hours. It's not like I'd lose a few million by having down time.....

The usual cause of this is peaking the finals so high that the power supply in the radio cannot supply enough current to manage both the finals and the modulator. The end result is, when you modulate the radio, the power output is reduced.

The solution is to return the final amplifier tuning to close to factory specifications.

Your best bet would be to take a couple of pics, and go to ebay. They have been going from $150-400. $25 sounds like it's high for shipping, but I could be wrong.

How is that? It might be easier to see it all working if it is mounted in sight, but it will be neater, safer, and cheaper using a vertical shaft. Same amount of work, same parts and fabrication requirements... maybe a couple of extra 2x4 board pieces is all. If it makes you feel better, turn everything over 90 degrees, mount it all up, and turn it back! The vertical shaft commercial generators, for example, are much more compact, easier to move around, etc.

I'm surprised anyone is interested in packet any more. Here where I live there were a lot of us on packet, but now there's nobody using it. Kind of a shame since it is a fun mode. I guess since it's finally legal for use on CB in the UK, the novelty of it will keep it going for a while.

Nope, it was on 27.1250 MHz and 27.3050 MHz or channels 14 and 30, if you prefer. We actually found that once you kinda "zoned in" on the dits and dahs, the QRM sorta just faded into the background. Although, both our receiving rigs (A Uniden Grant XL and a Radio Shack TRC-485) were equipped with additional receive filtering for improved ACR.

Actually it was quite easy. I got the idea from Radio Shack's (then new) mobile FRS rig. In order to get around the Part 15 requirement that the antenna be directly attached to the transmitter with no coupling connectors, they actually put the transmitter inside the mag-mount assy. with the controls located remotely in the mic. The result was a FRS rig that boasted an increase in effective range almost three times that of the standard FRS h/t.

Well, our situation was even easier. We simply relocated the circuit board (Quite small and light sans battery, case, speaker, etc.) into a weather-proof housing and ran some multi coductor UV-resistant covered rotor control cable up to the unit. Two wires supplied pwr. and gnd. while the other two wires controlled the keying circuit...easy as pie. (As are most challenges re. anything one truly enjoys.) With the transmitting antenna now located at approx. 35 ft. with no coaxial cable loss, (That 10m Yagi below it makes a dandy ground plane.) being supplied constant power via a wall wart, keying with a true straight key, (As opposed to a little red button.) and operating split with the receiver fed by a directional antenna, (3 el. Yagi on my end and a 2 el. Yagi on her's.) we did a bang-up job. Especially taking into consideration that the transmitting antenna was vertically polarized while the Yagis were horizontal. Did I mention that it practically takes up no space in the shack? So there you have it, no Bravo Sierra and very little work. Can we be a little nicer next time. I'm generally a pretty nice guy and really don't need the "bifocals" or "BS" remarks. I just lay down the facts and try to help folks figure out "how they can" rather then slamming them with "why they can't." Take it easy now. :-)

You can own it. I don't care if you do. I wouldn't want to be you if you were caught.
I'm not calling the Uncle on you. Some hams may have a different opinion.

Have fun.

I have the 949, which is the same without the freq counter. As long as it's aligned, it kicks. I was off frequency and needed alignment for SSB. AM was fine. SSB like to be a litlle inconsistant. I did the clarifier unlock mod, and that helped immensly. I am happy with it.

By your very post, you are responding to me and saying, in essence, that you are unable to debate intelligently. You don't see that because, well, you don't see a lot of things.

>Once he got to that level of nit picking where >he tried to make a distinction between >suburban philly, and a suburb of philly, that >was it. Anyone with half a brain knows that >there is no real difference.

Agreed,,,,,but you must enjoy being shown the light, as it was you that drew the exact distinction between being IN suburbian Philly and in a suburb OF Philly..I merely thanked you for illustrating yet another of your self-contradictions. Are you that cracked you forgot abut that, TOO?

>But Twisty likes to pick apart nuances, and >obfuscate meanings in order to make them fit >into his own self conceived universe of make >believe.

I merely repost your exact words....obfuscation is an understatement,,after all, they are your words.

I don't think you are crazy, merely an obsessive and compulsive liar who was caught and a sore loser..oh yea...and the perfect example of the poorest hammie radio has to offer.

More lies. You must lower yourself and abstain from any dignity and attribute false words to me, 'cause that's all you have in your trashed cber-net reputation as N3CVJ.

Look, Davey, Jr.,,the bottom line is I don't cotton to fools well and I don't suffer liars well at all. I abhor those such as yourself who follow other angry nocodes into such nefarious behavior such as downing one for merely expressing an idea, opinion or practice you disagree with. People like you who don't have the guts to admit what they do and when they do it and lie when someone shows it to them in black and white. Quite a great rep you carved for you call.. remembering your statement concerning the delight and pleasure you find in "messing" with me.....the word "troll" was utilized by English school children to describe one who offers up words as "bait' in order to get a reaction...to get folks riled and sit and watch their trash mutiply. To most, it is a pretty pathetic and practice, but then again, there exist these malcontents who love to torture small animals also..
You and your named clique buds of Arron and N8 and Lelnad and Gilliland and 'lil Geo would be better served attempting to grasp what the real problemwithin y'all is rather than incessantly misattributing something to another simply because you are too ignorant to figure it out yourself.

A first step in calming calamity is to identify the one or ones responsible for setting the initial tone of rudeness, sarcasm, intimidation and other behavior conducive only to the uglies agenda. As stated and shown several times in the past and you have admitted it as well, to gain favor with your little friends, you find delight in attempts at "messing" with me, and approach acute foolishness in response to an inquiry or question of your claims. You have laughingly failed, but attempted nontheless to foster lies perpetuated against myself and others, with several mired attempts at humiliatiion, for nothing more than an expressed opinion or attempt at bringing information or services or products to the interested.
As I have stated, one has to get mud on oneself and get in the sty when them when wrasslin' with pigs and as you see, I really don't mind it at all.

>The truth is still that everyday, he operates in >violation of Federal FCC regulations, Intellect shining today, eh Davey Jr..

This is entertaining...in one post your angry self now has me breaking federal law on a daily basis.

>He gambles

I don't gamble at all, Davey jr...and if you wouldn't have lost another ISP you may still retain a server that allowed you to see ALL the posts.

>on the likelihood that he'll never get caught, >and he's probably right. But what does that >say about a person, who openly defies laws, >when he stands a good chance of getting >away with it?

Well, according to your exact words taken from one of your unadulterated and untouched post, it makes you no less a criminal merely because you happened to get away with something for a period of time.
My persona appears to be a lightning rod to those such as yourself who suffer a great deal in the art of skilled communication.
Wasting plenty of energy with lies and the way you wish things were accomplishes nothing but to add to your already ruined reputation. No one may stick out their neck without one not unlike yourself trying to chop it off for no other reason than a disagreement.. Your lack of basis-in-facts does you and your cause more harm than you will ever realize...you've demonstrated such.

Long before you came with your lies and claims and accusations, Lelnad KC8LDO expressed my opinion by posting an article I wrote for freebanders in this group while desperately searching the web on anything he could find on my chosen cartoon character of "Twistedhed". That article hit home with a great deal of angry disenfranchised hammies. No one likes the messenger of truth when pain accompanies such, so, they began a campaign of harassment and personal attack, which you quickly reduced yourself to the level of in joining with offtopic insults and lies . Long ago I claimed getting along with both services is paramount and necessary for harmony...this group is for disseminating ideas and information.With those like yourself, it went in one ear and right out the other. Your angry clique of lids attempted to run me off and anyone else who dared express an opinion that was deemed illegal or unethical by anals such as yourself.
If one lets rude and insulting thugs take over a neighborhood or office or scene or group and doesn't stand against them it gives them tacit license to continue to abuse folks.
As I have alluded to and even recently, one first has to identify the underlying root cause of what ails this group or anything and especially a pseudo-social gathering. In attempting to do that, one has to constantly remind folks of what they are doing and that their behavior is not to be tolerated.
The danger is a newbie may miss a lot and come in and sees all of the wild swinging and verbal punches and gets confused.

I honestly believe that good triumphs in the end and that those that pave the way to foster that good will be the better for it. I also honestly believe that folks that humiliate, denigrate and try to destroy everything and everyone, will be the worse for it.

>The fact that he has little regard for the rights >of other people, the legitimate users of the >"freeband", or the rules of society, only >confirms his mental condition.

Then you express the same sentiments by not abiding by your TOS..they were set forth for everyones considerations and enjoyment, not just yours. The TOS are there to make you conform to respect the rights of others.
Your hypocrisy shies on the weekends, Davey, jr.....is this when you drink?

>The fact that new technologies used to >monitor people, thereby increasing the ability >of law enforecement to catch lawbreakers, >bothers him to such an extent, is further >testamony to his desire to do what he wants to >do, without having to deal with the >consequences.

Make up your mind. This is anothe of those self-ontradictions..you have claimed I don't care at all about the law, now you have me terrified of being caught....and how can I be breaking federal law each and every day when you claim I am frightened to death of the technology that will bust me?
Geez, Dave,,,you're quite the mess lately....

>Any deflection from this onto any other subject >is only a feeble attempt to trivialize his >abhorent behavior by slinging mud at those >who point it out.

Pointing out your lies is not slinging mud, but most are aware of the personal nature you take from the act.

Cherubic thinking is nice and wouldn't it be just wonderful if we could treat everyone as cherubs but the reality is that there are folks in the world with agendas that cause them to destroy and some of those folk seem to find each other and fortify themselves and some are to be found in these newsgroups and like to "mess" with folks just to elevate themselves. Why these folks do this is a subject that has no real definitive answer. Some were raised with dissention as a regular meal. Some have not yet matured. Some like the thrill of seeing blood and guts like those morons who slow at accident scenes so that they can see gore and also endanger themselves and others. Some like N3CVJ are jerked around by their subconcious whereby they may say one thing yet be driven by quite another.
No easy answers, for sure. The one thing that I am sure of is that if you let weeds take over your garden and don't tend your garden, you won't reap what you seek.
Thank you for your interest in my MO.

Go ahead and call the FCC. If the ham is operating his equipment cleanly and not generating any harmonic interference then he is under no obligation to remedy the problem. Personally I am sick and tired of people complaining about hams causing interference on their TV's, stereos and telephones. You buy a TV or stereo from Wal-Mart, what in the hell do you expect? You get what you pay for. If my neighbours complain about interference, I invited them over, run the radio at full power and not a hint of interference on ANY of my electronic gear. Yes I understand it is hard to tell someone that THEIR equipment is at fault, but it's time hams stop taking the blame. You might want to go after the CB'er running the kilowatt with no filtering and 200% modulation splattering all over the damn place.

The RG-8X is falling off the JoGunn 5+5 after 5+ years in the salt air environment here on Long Island. Is there a better alternative than using plastic tie straps which are suspect to ultaviolet and temp variations? Basically, chaffing is the concern if its a metal type of restraint. We use wax cord for all fiber optic cable securing at work but its indoors and we have no history of being exposed to the elements. Thanx, 73, Jim KP920

QRP is fun isn't it? There seems to be a mentality among many hams & CBers alike that you can never have too much power. As a ham friend of mine once said, "Tall tower, full power." I've been having a lot of fun seeing what I can do with less. So far I've been making a lot of CW contacts using my Small Wonder QRP transceiver I built. It's amazing how much you can do with two watts.

>Yes-they're called Hams.

I find this very amusiong since "Vshah101" is also known as Amateur Radio licensee KB1HMW.

He IS a very confused person.

>There are Hams among us!

And YOU are one of them, Vipul. How come the anti-Ham rhetoric? JUST THIS WEEK in RRAP YOU stated to "support and defend" Amateur Radio.

Don't get me wrong. I know there are folks that dislike Amateurs, and I can't say I always disagree with their reasons.

However YOU...Well...YOU are two-faced. A liar. You say one thing in RRAP, then step over to RRCB and say something completely different.

It's pretty hard to be taken seriously or TRUSTED when you are so blatantly willing to compromise yourself in public.

>It could be your neighbor, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, …
>anybody. Secretly, they may be Hams. Some of them wear an "identifier" which >consists of numbers and letters. They identify themselves and fellow Hams >through this identifier. Also, their mannerisms and colloquialisms are >recognizable for those who know about them. Still, they travel unrecognized.

YOU are not "unrecognized, Vipul. KB1HMW. Right there. For evryone to see. Anyone may check www.qrz.com and see that you are among the almost 700,000 licensed Amateurs in the United States.

And MOST Amateurs I know are VERY recognized. Thier callsigns are proudly displayed on their cars...They go to certain public affairs with their callsigns on name tags that display the accomplishment they are proud of.

They are cited by local and national agencies alike for thier public seervice. There is nothing "unrecognized" nor secretive about them.

>On the outside they look like humans. Like a body snatcher, their goal is to >convert each and every one of us.

Guess we got to you, eh Old Chap?

>They communicate with each other with >electronic devices over the airwaves. Those who have gotten this far have >certain traditions and protocol utilized. They form secret societies. Some, >which know of the existence of Hams, have called it a cult.

Only YOU have called it a "cult", Vipul Shah, KB1HMW...Only you.

>They use codewords in their conversation, replacing regular works with Qxx.
>Some have developed the ability to send and receive real time encoded >symbols.
>One gains higher status in the Ham society for demonstrating this ability.
>Some >of them feel superior because of this.
>
>They live.

Yes..We live. But most of us are not as two faced and deceitful as you seem to be.

Vipul, WHY do you play this game? You make up these allegations in RRAP about hating CBers when NO one there (except for WA8ULX, and he's an idiot) makes such comments?

And then you come to RRCB and pretend to NOT be an Amatuer, make all of these blatantly anti-Amateur rants, and try to make the Ham-vs-CB rift even deeper?

Whew...Vipullian logic...what a concept...

Jim.......Here is what I do. Use the heavy wire ties, then go over each one with some of that very heavy, wide electrical tape, like AT&T uses. Have you seen that? It is very heavy duty, and about 2" wide. Example: wire tie, tape, wire tie, tape. A bit overkill, but it will last for a long time. Good luck.

One of the things that goes wrong with those radios is people play with the VCO and bust the slug in it. Or the VCO itself dies and since it is coated in epoxy most people can't repair it.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1327 – January 17, 2003

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1327 with a release date of Friday, January 17, 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. Australian telecommunications regulators oppose the Amateur Radio fix for 40 meters and hams on Fiji provide aid in the wake of cyclone Ami. These stories are first on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1327 coming your way right now!

SPECTRUM ISSUES: AUSTRALIAN REGULATORS FAVOR 40 METER STATUS QUO

A disagreement over the future of the 40 meter band between Australia's national amateur radio society and that nations telecommunications regulators. The Australian Communications Authority -- the A.C.A. favors the status quo. The Wireless Institute of Australia says its time for a change. From Brisbane, Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, picks up the story:

The 7 MHz issue. Currently A.C.A. is against the motion at WRC 2003 -- which is of course at variance with the current allocation in Australia. At present the A.C.A. are steadfast in their opposition to the motion notwithstanding numerous attempts at lobbying them. The WIA position is in support of the IARU motion and WIA will continue to lobby A.C.A. to support the full 300 kHz allocation at 7 MHz on a world wide basis.

WIA President Ernie has asked: "If anyone can think of any additional justification that we can provide to A.C.A. to make them change their minds please let the A.C.A. Liaison Committee know and we will try and push the matter with A.C.A. again".

What impact the A.C.A.'s stand will have on the outcome of WRC 2003 cannot be assessed at this time.

RESCUE RADIO: CYCLONE AMI HITS FIJI

A Cyclone named Ami has torn across parts of Fiji, destroying homes and unleashing floods across northern islands. And it appears that once aghain, Amateur Radio has come to the rescue, It all happened on January 14th. Amateur Radio Newsline's Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, has what we know so far.

Packing sustained winds in excess of 90 miles per hour and gusts of 125 miles an hour, the Cyclone Ami whipped up mountainous seas, cut communications and left the tourist hub of Labasa, on the main northern island of Vanua Levu, under four feet of water. All normal lines of communications with Vanua Levu were cut at about 17:00 GMT as the storm approached. Vanua Levu is where a quarter of Fiji's 800,000 people live.

According to news reports, emergency officials did manage to restore partial communications with Labasa and the town of Savusavu late on Tuesday using Amateur Radios circuits. Over them they learned that Labasa was under four feet of water after a nearby river overfload its banks. Also that there had been extensive damage throughout the area.

But even these communications efforts were hampered by extensive flooding. Also, the extent of the involvement of hams is still unclear since news reports did not give the names or call signs of the operators handling the emergency operations.

Here in New Zealand the government has already sent an air force surveillance plane to assess damage. Another aircraft was scheduled to arrive in Fiji the same day and, carrying aid experts and some relief supplies.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, reporting from Auckland, New Zealand.

The cyclone is the second to hit the South Pacific in as many weeks. Thousands of inhabitants of a remote part of the Solomon Islands chain northwest of Fiji survived powerful Cyclone Zoe, which hammered the area with 190 mph winds.

RESCUE RADIO: HAMS AID IN WAKE OF TYPHOON ZOE

And speaking of Cyclone Zoe, ham radio is helping in recovery efforts following that storm after it hit the Solomon Islands a few weeks ago. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, is in Nottingham England has more:

--

Students and graduates of the Solomon Islands Amateur Radio Training School have been on the air from the capital Honiara in the wake of Cyclone Zoe.

The storm hit the islands of Tikopia and Anuta in the Solomon's remote Temotu Province last week. The amateurs are volunteers at the National Disaster Management Organisation and are providing assistance to the staff of three at NDMO HQ during the current state of disaster in the Solomons.

Using donated equipment received last year fromoverseas amateurs and CB operators, the first on the air was Moffet, H44MD. He was told that three 100-watt HF transceivers were donated by an American amateur and sent by air mail three weeks before the cyclone.

As we go to air, reports say that the Solomon Island radio school graduates are still providing post cyclone aid. (GB2RS)

COMMUNICATIONS LAW: BIG BROADCAST TOWER WIN IN NH

Back here in the United States, a big tower case win for a broadcaster could have a trickle-down effedt for ham radio. This, after the New Hampshire Supreme Court has rejectes a city's zoning ordinance limiting the height of new communication towers to 42 feet. It says that regulation conflicts with federal law.

The ruling clears the way for Koor Communication Inc. to obtain local construction permits to begin constructing broadcast towers for WQTH-AM in Lebanon, New Hampshire. According to Radio World Online, Koor Communications first filed for variances to the ordinance in 1999 seeking to construct four antennas to the height of 266 feet in accordance with its FCC license and Construction Permit. The broadcaster's attorneys argued that Lebanon's restrictions effectively prohibited the construction of new radio stations.

Koor Communication lost several lower court decisions. This lead to the appeal to the state's highest court. That court has now said the lower court findings were incorrect and it reversed their rulings. (CGC Commuinicator, RW-ONLINE)

ENFORCEMENT: HAM JAILED FOR SPYING FOLLOW-UP

Two interesting follow-ups to last weeks story on convicted spy Robert Hanssen, K9QVL. The first came in a note from the FCC which takes issue with our account.

It says and we quote: “the assertion that we need a complaint to pull Hansen's ticket or anyone else's ticket is dead wrong.” Endquote.

But thats all the spokesman says. No other information was provided.

The other item is even more interesting. After the story ran, we began getting reports that Hanssen's call had been deleted. We went over and checked the FCC's database. It was still there. It was also on the Buckmaster websire, but ther was a surrprise when you inputted the K9QVL call over on QRZ.com. It came back stating that the K9QVL listing was no longer in the QRZed database. (ARNewsline™)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC RESCINDS ND8V WARNING LETTER

The FCC has canceled its recent warning letter issued to Michael Gurnsey, ND8V, and has told the Parchment Michigan ham he can resume operation on the 20 meter band.

As reported last week, the agency's Riley Hollingswoth, K4ZDH, had written a very sternly worded letter to Gurnsey. It stated that it would initiate stern punitive action against him if it received any more complaints that he was appropriating certain frequencies on the 20 meter band. It also told him to stay off 2o meters until the issue could be resolved.

But on January 3rd the Hollingsworth wrote to ND8V once again. This time it told Gurnsey that he could disregard the warning letter and resume 20 meter operation. It also went on to thank him for his cooperation in resolving the matter. No further information was provided by the FCC. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: NY HAM FACING REVOCATION

The FCC has written to a New York city area ham telling him he may face license revocation proceedings. The Commission's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, explains:

Duckworth: "A Warning Notice and Notice of Intention to Designate a Revocation and Suspension Proceeding was issued to Alexander Sandbrand N2NNU for operation outside of his Technician class priveleges on numerous occasions and after warnings."

Sandbrand lives in Yonkers New York. That's a few miles due North of Manhattan. Back on August 17th of 2001 the FCC issued Sabndbrand a first Warning Notice regarding operation outside of his license privileges. The Commission says it now has information indicating that at least nine times since his receipt of that initial warning that Sandbrand operated out of band.

And in a related item, the ARRL Letter reports that Sandbrand called FCC rulers enforcer Riley Hollingsworth after receiving the first Warning Notice. He reportedly complained that it wasn't fair that he had to pass additional examination elements to operate on High Frequency phone. Hollingsworth supposedly told Sandbrand that if he wants to operate on H-F, he has to take the test like everybody else. (FCC, ARRL Letter)

RADIO LAW: TEEN ARRESTED AND CHARGED IN DIREC TV CASE

A 19-year-old college has been taken into custody on charges that he pilfered information about a new security system used by satellite broadcaster Direc TV and distributed it over the Internet. FBI agents in Los Angeles say that they arrested Igor Serebryany and have charged him with stealing information related to DirecTV's latest access cards. These are the access cards Direc TV uses to regulate what services its subscribers will receive.

According to several news reports, Serebryany who is identified as a University of Chicago student, allegedly took the information from a Los Angeles area law firm that was doing legal work for Direc TV. He ithen is supposed to have distributed it to web sites dedicated to the hacking of DirecTV's security systems.

According to the criminal complaint against Serebryany, DirecTV spent more than $25 million developing the high security "Period 4" card. This, after the three previous versions had been successfully hacked by pirates. Serebryany faces up to 10 years in prison, a fine, or both, if convicted. (Published news reports)

RADIO LAW: FCC SIMPLIFIES FILING PROCEEDURES WITH ECFS EXPRESS

The Federal Communications Commission has launched ECFS Express. This is a simplified version of its Electronic Comment Filing System or ECFS.

According to an FCC news release, ECFS Express is designed specifically with the consumer in mind. The FCC claims that it is easy to use, focuses on topics rather than docket numbers, and requires minimal input by consumers seeking to participate in the Commission’s public rulemaking process. People wishing to comment simply click on a topic, fill in their personal information, write their comments and hit “send.”

To access ECFS Express, users need only click on the “File Comments” logo found on the front page of the FCC’s Web site at www.fcc.gov The original version of the Electronic Comment Filing System, which includes all docketed Commission proceedings is still at the FCC website as well. (FCC)

COMMUNICATIONS LAW: A WARNING TO DOMAIN NAME SELLERS

A warning to Internet domain-name sellers. Keep better track of your customers or Congress will be forced to step in.

The warning comes from California Representative Howard Berman. He claims that domain-name sellers have an obligation to keep accurate records of their customers to ensure they can be contacted if they are improperly using trademarked names or engaging in other illegal activity.

According to Berman. Internet users must provide a contact name, address and other information when they buy a domain name. But the Congressman says that few name sellers run checks to make sure that the contact information is accurate. Berman says that this lax oversight allows scam artists and cybersquatters looking to sell domain names to their rightful owners or others to hide their true identities. This he says, provides a barrier for law-enforcement officials investigating such crimes.

Berman says that he would like to see all the top-level domains start to implement these types of checks on their systems. He also warns that if self regulation does not work that Congress may have to step in. (Published news reports)

THE WAR ON TERRORISM: NYC REBUILDS WITH A NEW TV TOWER IN NEW JERSEY

A broadcast tower almost a half mile high to replace the structure lost when terrorists felled New York's World Trade Center could rise across the Hudson river in New Jersey. This, as an alliance made up of eleven broadcasters release a report as to why they favor proposed site in Bayonne over one in Jersey City. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has more:

In a 17-page letter to New Jersey's environmental commissioner, the broadcasting alliance says the new tower would restore quality television reception for about three quarters of a million people in the metropolitan area. This is especially important to the regions poor and elderly who cannot afford to pay for cable or satellite reception. And the alliance called the Bayonne site far superior in terms of size, security, environmental concerns, cost and construction timetables.

And the groups president, Edward Grebow said the $200 million project would also be a boon to construction workers in the region. He also noted that the city of Bayonne wants to make the tower a central element in plan to transform the location into an area of offices, homes, stores and marinas. In addition to its television antenna system, the alliance suggests that the structure might also be used for scientific studies. This could include long term investigations into weather, climate and air pollution.

If constructed the new tower would not only become the world's tallest free-standing structure. It would also be the worlds tallest broadcast tower built at near sea level. For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reporting.

While New Jersey has the support of the regions broadcasts, other locations are still believed to be under consideration by local politicians and community leaders. (ARNewsline™ from listener reports)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: GENERATING ELECTRICITY WITH HOT AIR

Meantime, another would-be tallest man-made structure could soon be towering over the Australian outback. This, as part of a plan to capitalize on the global push for greater use of renewable energy.

By 2006, the Australian power company EnviroMission Ltd hopes to build a 3,300 foot high solar tower in southwest New South Wales state. The 200 megawatt solar generating station will cost nearly $563 million dallars to build and will be the width to a football field.

The technology behind its operation is very simple. The sun heats air under the tower’s glass roof. As the hot air rises, a powerful updraft is also created by the tower that allows air to be continually sucked through 32 turbines, which spin to generate power.

EnviroMission hopes to begin construction on the solar tower before the end of the year. It says that it plans on generating enough electricity to supply 200,000 homes around the beginning of 2006.

Currently, the world's tallest free-standing structure is the Canadian National Tower in Toronto. Its about 1650 feet high. (W8HDU)

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: DON MACKAY, ZL3RW - S.K.

The changing of the guard in Amateur Radio continues. This, with word that NZART Honorary Life Member and Past President Don Mackay, ZL3RW has passed away.

MacKay died at his home in Christchurch on January 14th after a long illness. Among his many accomplishments was his work in the introduction of Amateur service repeaters to New Zealand. This, at a time when that nations Post Office was opposed to such operation.

ZL3RW used his experience in emergency communications to sway the agencys decision in favor of permitting repeater operation. For many years it was this aspect of Amateur Radio that ensured their continuation.

Don MacKay is survived by his sister Margaret. A service in celebration of his life was held Saturday January 18th in the city of Christchurch. (NZART)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: NO PACKET TO THE ISS
Packet users are being requested to not send e-mail messages to the all ham crew on board the International Space Station at this time. This, according to the AMSAT News Sercice which reports that they are not answering e-mail, and are realkly not expected to do so in the near future. No specific reason was given, but according to news reopprts the current all ham crew is very busy with many non ham radio related on-orbit duties. (ARISS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: ISS ALABAMA EXHIBIT FEATURES HAM RADIO
Ham radio will play a part as the City of Mobile, Alabama is hosts a four month exhibit of the International Space Station. This at the new Science Exploreum building.

The exhibit consists of a full scale mockup of the main parts of the ISS along with other aspects of living and working in space. According to N4UXY the Mobile Amateur Radio Club " W4IAX " will host a ham radio station that will attempt to talk to the real space station durinvg the exposition. The club also plans to demonstrate other aspects of the Amateur radio to an expected 80,000 visitors.

The show began on January 9th and ends on April 5th. More information is on the web at www.exploreum.net (N4UXY)

CONTESTS: 2003 WINTER 6 METERS CONTEST

The 2003 winter 6 meter contest is will commence at 2300 U-T-C on Friday February 7th and conclude at 03:00 U-T-C on Saturday February 8th. The rules are very simple. Each in-country QSO is worth one point. Out of country contacts score as two points. Hawaii and Alaska count as separate nations in this one.

Scoreing is total Q-S-O points multiuplied by the number of grid squares worked. Entries go by e-mail to w4wrl@aol.com before March 15th. They can also be sent snail-mail to Wayne Lewis, 3338 South Cashur Drive, Florence, South Carolina, 29501. (VHF Reflector)

In D-X, PA3GIO will be active as ZK2GI from Niue from about the 18th to 26th of January. He will operate SSB only with 100 watts and a dipole antenna. If you work him, Q-S-L as directed on the air.

Also, KM1E is active from the Bahamas as C6AGN. He’s on 160 through 6 meters from now through the 4th of March.

And lastly, some good news about famed D-X’er Ron Wright ZL1AMO who suffered collapsed lungs in late November. According to Judy Rausch, AA7UC, of the International D-X Network, Wright returned to his home on January 13th to complete his recocery. (AA7UC, INDEXA)

THAT FINAL ITEM: CELEBRATING A NEW LICENSE CLASS

And finally, a big success for a big operating event celebrating a new license. That’s the word out of the United Kingdom as reports on the first ever Foundation Class Q-S-O party begin to filter in. Again to England and GB2RS news presenter Jeramy Boot, G4NJH:.

The M3 'QSO Party' on 40 metres on the 1st of January was a huge success with hundreds of newly-licensed M3 amateurs and their friends wanting to take part. Richard Jolliffe, G3ZGC, said: "I planned just to join in but when I switched on there were two M3s looking for a net controller. So as one of the Newbury club's Foundation Licence instructors I volunteered.

The pile-up was certainly the largest I have ever heard and I had to go to letters in the suffix and ask for M3 Alfa stations and work through the alphabet. In two hours I worked 112. At least half as many again were 'gotaways'."

Richard added, "What was very noticeable was that the standard of operating was fantastic by the M3s. It was noticeable how appreciative most of them were at having passed their exams. Many messages of thanks were passed to their local clubs. An excellent event."

Douglas Nixon, M3BKC, was one of the numerous Foundation Licensees joining in the fun. He said, "Richard did a splendid job as net controller during the hectic conditions that followed at times during the next two hours. Roger, G4RUW, also from Newbury, took over at 1200, followed by John, G4TSN, from Nottingham. Many thanks to all concerned."

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH

Obviously, the concepts behind the U-K Foundation Class license are rock solid and it is most likely the way other nations will go as they seek too increase participation in the hobby. (GB2RS)

lou could you tell me what year this is???? pll books.....please....what possible need is there to know such things, especially now after years of 10 meter radios being on the market with 26mhz to 32mhz coverage....i think pll reading is interesting but unless you like to know about such things there is really no need to read it.....today's radios are much better, more powerful and i am not going to the cost of putting channels in any 40 channel radio...no need.....

Tim he asked what was "legal" and as you've been told many times before SSTV is not legal anywhere on the US CB radio allocated channels. The freeband is illegal to operate on period, regardless of mode.

The real problem with packet is the speed. Most of it is done at 1k2 bps. For simple QSO's, i.e. typing from keyboard to keyboard its OK. For something like using TCP/IP you need faster speeds. Just about any radio can support audio frequency shift keying at the low speed, however for faster speeds requires a different modulation method, carefully modified or designed radios, and wider (read special) filters installed. The Internet is primarily responsible for killing off most Ham packet activity here in the US, however I understand there are still many fast packet networks operating in Europe.

First off the switching type supplies for computer work requires that you have a load connected to one of the outputs, typically the 5 VDC line, which is used for regulating all of the other outputs. Also the supplies are NOT shielded very well, so you may find the one you use generating a great deal of high frequency noise making receiving anything nearly impossible.

You best bet is for you to find or buy a 13.8 VDC regulated supply that can handle up to about 3 amps.

I don't recommend using a battery charger. Most cheap automotive battery chargers use a simple halfwave rectifier circuit. The result is the radio will have a great deal of hum on the transmit audio, and the same on the receive. The ones that use a fullwave rectifier are not much better unless you build a good filter to use on the output. If you're going to all that work you would have saved yourself a lot of effort by getting a good regulated supply in the beginning

I don't "hate" CB, I do dislike those who use, more like misuse, CB in such a manner that its usefulness to others is greatly diminished by their inconsiderate illegal actions.

Instead of wasting bandwidth you could cut and paste to comments you want to make specific reference to.

And there are sufficient technical references on tube-based amplifiers written for the technically lame. Even you should be able to follow the instructions. I am sure that CRB or CBCI have a "color in the lines" book by now.

That's not true... Even if he's operating legally, he's still responsible for not causing interference to others' equipment. It's a two-edged sword. Part 15 states the TV's, etc, must accept interference, even if it causes undesired operation, and parts 95 and 97 state that a radio operator may not cause harmful interference, etc....

If the transmitter is legal (which I doubt, considering the described level of interference) both parties are responsible to cure the problem.

Well maybe down in the US that's the way it is. But up here in Canada, if a ham is causing interference due to improper station operation, he may be ordered off the air until the problem is remedied. On the other hand, if a Industry Canada inspector examines his station and finds it to be harmonic free and all other specs are clean, then the responibility to eliminate the interference is up to the complaintant. Usually to maintain civility amongst neighbours, the ham may "help" eliminate the problem. But as I stated in my original reply, people who buy $20 phones, and cheap plastic enclosed electronis with no shielding whatsoever are only asking for trouble. Yes I understand they have a right to their own enjoyment, but of course when the interference starts they blame the closest ham operator.

I have the optional card for the AOR scanners for auction which allows you to decode CTCSS tones (also known as Private Line or PL). This is very useful if you are in an area where there are many co-channel users and you want to block out all the other agencies using the frequency except the one you want to hear. It allows you to monitor without losing your sanity.

The chassis is;
PLL02A PTBM048A0X LAFAYETTE TELSAT SSB140

This procedure is not available on most sites I know.

Remove diode D-5
Lift (disconnect) resistor R24 other side from d4 ie -leave d4 end as is Feed constant 9.4v supply from mode switch (check with meter) to the r-24 end you just lifted.
#add 8uh choke in series with varactor anode to ground to increase range and /or fit superdiode.
#These extra steps are always necessary fo 5kc plus
If xtal cuts out on drop replace it with HiQ cut type.These (originals)are notorious for low range retune radio for centre freq and ssb alignment.
Thats it.

cheers all

Ya don't get if ya don't ask.
Not all techs are like that... I have often had people asking me for just the parts, and have often sold just the parts.

The way I see it is that the owner has already decided who they want to do the repair for them. I can either make a little profit by selling the parts to the other tech... or make nothing. If I refuse to sell them the parts, that will not get me the repair job... more likely that they will not deal with me again.

Also, selling some parts on can enable you to buy larger quantities... reducing the price you pay for your parts. A supplier that I dealt with some years back (before the owner retired), had been started that way. They only used a small number of parts so, to reduce their costs, they bought in quantity and set up shop selling the bulk off cheaper than the other local suppliers - but still at a profit. When the chap passed on, the wife remained in the business just with the sale of components.

Peter.

Dave, Dave, Dave,

Walking through life blindly again. Throwing comments without knowing who you are talking about. I still am a CB,er, been one for 35 years. I got my Advanced Amateur Radio license so I could do repairs on all types of radios. If you actually took the time to read the post and not just jump in here with out thinking, (which you do allot of) you would see that my posts are "From" Greg, my nickname is Homer. Gee, get a life and where does it say that I was talking to any Americans (sending radios back & forth across the border would be too expensive) as there are Canadians who are on here as well. I put my Amateur radio status here to should that I was someone who has technical skills and not one of those that pretend they do.

Jesus H. Christ on a crackpipe!

Don't you morons have anything better to do, than bring my name up in this newsgroup?????

Okay, to explain:

The posting on QTH.NET was directed at a LID from 75 meters, who thought he'd be cute and take a ride from TENN. up here and drive by my house, and yes, I did see his car, and No, he didn't stop, (typical Ham Radio Pussy...) and I posted it there, knowing full well, he'd see it... and the other thing... this quote here:

> "73 and have a Nice Holiday > from the Detroit demolition man....K8CPA" was taken from the website, http://members.aol.com/jcunham and it never did contain my callsign.... although someone did add it, gee, I wonder who, I think "passing thru" as one of the LIDS from 3.898 or 3.865, wouldn't suprise me at all... Anyhow, my point is.... None this had ANYTHING to do with RRCB!

So, to you guys, GET A LIFE and QUIT BRINGING MY NAME UP IN HERE!

Back to listening mode.

Sorry to disappoint you, but I am not going anywhere. Believing in God is not required here either, even though I don't qualify for "hating God".

First off, I am Roman Catholic, and last I looked, that is a Christian religion. Secondly, you cannot ask anyone who is applying for a job for numerous things. One is political party preference. Another is religion. And I am sure there are plenty more.

So, if you want to hire someone based on religious beliefs, I am sure you can somehow do it in a quiet manner of some sort, since it happens all the time in cases of color, religion, politics, etc. What you can't do is make it public by posting it in a worldwide forum, that includes the country that you will be doing the hiring. That is illegal. The labor laws of this country protect your religious beliefs.

There is nothing illegal about him preffering a Christian to work for him.
If he prefers a Christian to work for him it is his business who he hires. 2 people apply for the job he asks if they are christain's one guy says yes, the other says no, which do you think he will hire, both credentials being equal.

And if the interviewee ever got wind that that was the case, he would own that employee.

He can't even ask that question in an interview. I have done over 100 interviews. You can ask anything job related. Religion is not a requirement for a technical position. I was told by human resources not to ask any questions of a personal or private nature. The laws are clear in the case of racial or religious discrimination. I am not saying he san't only hire a Christian. But he can't make it public. He has to do it in an underhanded way.

You guys don't realize, but once you are hiring and paying federal and state taxes, you must obey the labor laws of the government. Unless you want to do it under the table.

Wrong. It's much different, you moron. You can tell who the taller guy is, without ever asking. In religion, you cannot know unless you ask. If he wants to higher a taller guy, he can simply do so without ever uttering a word. He can't do the same with religion, unless he is some sort of a mind reader.

That is not what I said, I know there are allot of people who try to do a repair and end up causing more damage. I know, I have repaired many, most of my repairs are brought to me by CB'ers not knowing who to trust and end up costing them more because someone said "I can repair that".

BTW Tim, I figured I would leave a website:

http://www.eeoc.gov/facts/qanda.html

Note:

I. What Are the Federal Laws Prohibiting Job Discrimination?

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII), which prohibits employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin;

In the first friggin line !!!!!!!!!!

Again:

Discriminatory Practices

II. What Discriminatory Practices Are Prohibited by These Laws?
Under Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA, it is illegal to discriminate in any aspect of employment, including:

hiring and firing;

Then again, I wouldn't expect much from a person that translates "It's illegal to ask that question" as "God hating". Duh.

I have one that was "removed" from a set - working. The set was being put back to stock. The CEB should still be working but I can't swear to it. Not sure who made it or anything else about it. I'm not into these types of things. This is an older unit (I've had it laying in a drawer for a few years). Selling as parts or experimental use only. Any interest? If so, e-mail me direct. Horseback Riding

A blonde decides to try horseback riding, even though she has had no lessons or prior experience. She mounts the horse, unassisted, and the horse immediately springs into motion.

It gallops along at a steady and rhythmic pace. But, the blonde begins to slip from the saddle. In terror, she grabs for the horse's mane, but cannot seem to get a firm grip. She tries to throw her arms around the horse's neck.

But, she slides down the side of the horse anyway. The horse gallops along, seemingly impervious to its slipping rider. Finally, giving up her frail grip, the blonde attempts to leap away from the horse and throw her self to safety. Unfortunately, her foot has become entangled in the stirrup.

She is now at the mercy of the horse's pounding hooves, as her blonde head is struck against the ground over and over.

As her head is battered against the ground, she is mere moments from unconsciousness, when to her great fortune.....

The Wal-Mart greeter sees her and unplugs the horse.

When I got this the previous owner had removed the bad "AM LSB USB" wafer switch on the transmitter but he had cut the wires without marking them and could not find the manual or schematic. He had ordered a new 2-layer wafer switch from Browning so I do have that. I just need the wiring diagram for the switch and/or the schematic to tell me how to wire the new wafer switch. Can anybody out there help me with a copy? Will be glad to pay copy costs and someting for your trouble. Thanks - John Hmmm. Notice it's a Catholic web site too. So the first pope came about at 33 AD? What was his name? Remember Constantine created the "Roman Cathoic Church." So the first Catholics were Jews? First Christians were Jews. You are nothing more than a mouthpiece for the Catholic Church that, apparently, believes anything that your priest tells you or what you read on a Catholic web site.

Why don't you read some REAL history books about the Christian faith. You will see that the Catholic church wasn't around then.

He said prefered. You can't prefer anything based on race, releigion, etc. You can prefer on physical requirements for certain jobs. You can prefer experience. You can prefer education. You can't prefer religion, at least in writing. He can only hire Christians if he wants. But he has to do it in a manner that is underhanded. In other words, he has to do it illegally.

If I was a business man with a CB shop, and had a $450 budget to hire a tech, I would try and hire the best techm that would bring good "word of mouth" and good reputation at repair and mods. That would eventually increase sales and service revenue. That means alot of green. Whether that guy is black, Jewish, Asian Indian, etc. Whatever would bring in the best revenue. You on the other hand, just want a guy you can share interests with. You aren't too bright.

And some people grew up on the streets, learned how to mug people at gun point and steal, but that still doesn't excuse their behavior either. And that's what it really gets down too here. The ones breaking the rules on this news group, know its wrong and seem to go to great lengths to justify their actions anyway.

Ah! Ok, this sheds some more light on the picture, as I have had a good deal of experience with this particular chassis.

Once, I had a similar problem, it turned out that the TA7205 Audio amp was "weak". Seems that when you clip the limiter, and push the amp into compression for too long, it can damage it. Replacing the part regained audio drive power and the backward swing went away.

Another cause can come from the easy to tweak, 10 watt rheostat, which adjusts AM carrier power. You can turn the carrier up to 10 watts at full level. At that power, you won't have enough audio drive, so it will backswing. Turn the power back down below 6 watts and you should be ok.

Yet another cause of this problem is improper tuning, or an attempt to wideband the radio beyond its design limits. This radio is fairly generous with extra channels (The PLL is capable of 512, and the VCO is good for about 200 of them). Anyway, when the radio is run on the upper end of the freeband (or the lower, whichever), the power (and receive) drops off dramatically. Many people attempt to broadband the radio by stagger tuning the various mixer and buffer stage cans. This can broadband the radio to some degree, but it also lowers the overall drive level, which results in backward swing (and lower power on SSB).

And yet another cause, is a weak final. Sometimes when someone plays with the bias, or overdrives the final, over time, it actually loses gain (A strange concept to someone who always believed that a solid stage device was either "good" or "bad"). Anyway, if your SSB power is under 15 watts (With the ALC clipped), and it has not been "broadbanded", I'd suspect a weak final.

Ah, an advanced class amateur radio license is not a permit to "work on" radios. In the past you had to have a commercial 1st or 2nd class radiotelephone license, which became the general radiotelephone license.
Today, you no longer need to be FCC licensed to do radio work, unless it is in the marine or aeronautical services.

Good! But there are those who feel that stating your ham radio status in a CB newsgroup, is tantamount to "bragging". I don't make a habit of plastering my call in my posts for that very reason. Although there are those who like to add it in when quoting my stuff, for some warped

For the record, I am not the one taking issue with you. You need to go back and re-read the thread.

Is anybody else following this? Is there something really obvious that I'm overlooking in trying to build an inexpesive setup outlined above? I'm getting very little technical feedback here. Isn't it a lot cheaper and only modestly trickier to use a very common vertical shaft engine?

why would it be cheaper????? I can find just as many horizontal shaft engines as vertical shafts. I was only recommending a horizontal shaft for ease of mounting the alt.....It would be alot easier than a vertical

I think the terminology is the problem. The common lawnmower is a horizontal engine. The shaft is vertical yes, but the normal way to describe it is as a horizontal engine due to it's rotation, not the orientation of the shaft.

All common engines are horizontal then.....I am speaking of the shaft. That is the way small engines are described. horizontal shaft or vertical shaft. A horizontal shaft engine will be easier to use for this setup than a vertical shaft

You know Twirted anybody that has a measurable IQ above zero, which it seems does not include you, would sooner or later learn how to construct an essay in a suitably readable format, which includes correct grammar and spelling, to support a point they're making. You fail in all aspects of that simple task. Even high school students master writing a logical essay before graduating. The current post, and that ridiculous article you wrote for "Sporadic Waves", is just proof positive you can't connect one idea with another to form any kind of logical presentation using correct grammar etc. The few English professors, I showed the article too, thought it was written by a kid in middle school. You can imagine the burst of laughter after I told them the author claims to have written for a well know magazine. They said no-way! I have to agree.

I have a nice AM only base rig. Teaberry XII. Clock, SWR meter, Mod Meter, AC/DC with microphone. All working 100% No golden screwdrivers either. I am looking for a SSB rig for my father. Older is fine as long as its decent. Prefer Base rig but will go with a mobile. Willing to sell this radio or trade. Make a cash offer. Or I am willing to trade a 2050 Trunktracker scanner for a radio. (sorry not a cellular scanner) But does just about everything else.

I have a this radio, has a RX boost built in.

40 channels.

Only $35.00 US$ plus shipping from Canada.

For $50.00 will throw in a TRC 212 for repair or parts (does work at times).

I do the same thing too. I make my bread and butter by repairing. The radio left today without a fixed frequency counter. So sad. It will be sold in that condition by the customer.

Oh since you answered in a nice and business sort of way, Thank you, have you ever seen a G-Stand Astatic mic? I saw my first one today. It was kinda like being on mars. :)

Don't get out much you see.

Thank you again. My reference was to the unbusiness like response. I certainly can understand not wanting to sell parts to another shop. But I do understand helping one out when I am pretty certain that they are more than 100 miles away from me.

Oh well. I will keep looking because I am persistent ;)

If yours is limited, try looking at

My other advise is to search for dragon ss-485, yet another version of the same thing, just with a different face

Now THATS funny, Nad, especially when it was I that prrofread and edited your monkey scribed page at qrz three years ago..you probably never moved that fast before or after that day you ran to correct your gibberish that I edited for free.....in any event, I can be educated, your nature is set and ingrained in you as a lid..hence the threats you made (several) and pulled accesses you were responsible for because of your insubordination in conforming and obeying rules.

There are no misspellings, except for the intentional one - "Twirted", as far as the word processing software is concerned. As far as the punctuation goes I doubt there is much if anything really wrong it either.

Twirted's writing is like looking at a pot full of noodles, there's no logical structure to it. He was ticked off when the URL was posted to that article he wrote. He was ashamed of his poor writing skills, and didn't like it being pointed out. Also consider he claims to be a writer for pay, and can't even write at the high school level according to the English professors that saw the article. I would think a company like Knight-Ridder wouldn't pay for a poorly written essay resembling the "Sporadic Waves" example. Also for a writer for hire would take much more care with his informal writing, just out of habit, than what Twirted has exhibited.

And this comes from the English genius that can't figure out that the first letter of the first word in a sentence is capitalized. Yeah right, when you learn the basics on how to write then you can complain.

"Sporadic Waves" is not Knight-Ridder. Comparison of the two is something to expect from one who has no concept of spelling nor grammar even with self-admitted employed software-for-the-challenged.

Maybe you would.....when you've been at it as long as I have, you tend to work for a quality publisher that can afford quality editing and are interested in actual work produced, looking for substance, flash, curb appeal, and a knowledge of the suject at hand, something you have demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt you know nothing of. Successful publishers don't have time to mess with such trivial details as a "T" being crossed or spelling typo...it's what an editor does, I've faxed stories, ideas, and news items on everything from restaurant napkins to scraps of paper. Technology has made those days just about obsolete..most of the time. Regardless, my personal employment has nothing to do with your preoccupation of hating cb and threatening this newsgroup with porn flooding spam from N8 and getting BigPond, supernews, giganews, cotse, and a few others pulled for your antics that included forging several of us, among other threats.

Nobody would waste the money to hire you Twirted. For one thing you don't have anything worth saying to warrant wasting the paper to print it on.

> quality editing

Yeah to correct your spelling errors and silly grammar too.

>and are interested in actual work produced,

With all the time you waste digging up old news groups posts, and the futile efforts at deciphering headers, I'll bet you're lucky to have any time at all to pick up your welfare check.

Don't worry. You don't have any of that even if you tried.

You're hanging out on the wrong news group for that one. Hummm.. is that why you call yourself "Twisted". 8-))

>and a knowledge of the suject

You mean "subject". Where's your editor Twited to hold your hand here?

> at hand, something you have

Ending a sentence with "of". Humm... Mr. Editor Twirted needs help again.

>Successful publishers don't have time to mess with such trivial details as a "T" >being crossed or spelling typo...it's what an editor does, I've faxed

Nothing to do with CB radio, electronics, computers, etc. So that's why that " Sporadic Wave" article was so bad. You were writing about a subject which you had no knowledge. Figures.

>Technology has made those days just about obsolete..most of the time.

Good writing will never be obsolete as well as those who have mastered the art. You don't qualify.

>Regardless, my personal employment

That's a joke! You employed? <8-() Never happen.

>has nothing to do with your preoccupation of hating cb

I don't hate CB Twirted. In fact I enjoy answering questions people have so long as it doesn't involve running extra legal power, freebanding and other illegal activities. In your case you can't even answer simple high school level electronic questions.

>and threatening this
>newsgroup with porn flooding spam from N8 and getting BigPond,

You want to blame me for the other crap, oh-well. There is nothing you can do to me with your silly posts, letters to ISP etc., because you still don't know who it is on the group that is really messing with you.

Like I said before Twirted, you can't read, you can't quote other posts properly, don't have a clue what "white space" is used for in writing, thus making your crappy posts not worth the time to read.

Oh yeah, it's a cousin to the PC-122 PC-244 PC840e PC810e? AX-244 TRC-465.

It has the uPD2824 PLL chip. There are only 40 n-codes in the chip.
You modify it with an EXPO "N" kit which has another loop crystal.

While I'm at it, for tramd300, the "replacement" uPD2816 chip allows you to ground pin 20. This drops you down 455 KHz. You must do radical changes to the clarifier to slide 5 kc back to .xx50. This can make the clarifier real touchy in this radio unless you want to turn that sucker 10 whole turns. And after all this work, you have no uppers!

Wahhll,,that's why a genius compooter oppahrader such as yer self needs an uneducated redneck cbing hick like myself to clean your clock,,,even the software you, one who claims to hold a Masters in compooter tech stuff selects, is half-assed and can't help you in your wallowing ignorance.

>Looks like you slipped back into speaking your >native tongue like the >other Florida illegal immigrants.

IIlegal?Immigrants? The majority of our immigrants are yankees....and ahma prouda mah suthahn accent. You're really reducing yourself and sharing your lid/troll status.

>I would think a company like Knight-Ridder >wouldn't pay for a poorly >written essay >resembling the "Sporadic Waves" example.

They don't as far as I know.

>Yeah, you were being paid to scrub out the >toilets.

That doesn't bother me. Funny thing is you can't even take credit for thinking that one up.
"Sporadic Waves" is not Knight-Ridder.

>Didn't say they were in my post so it seems >you can't read either.

Didn't say you DID say that. Seems you can't read, either. You compared them, I merely pointed it out and you danced..
Comparison of the two is something to expect from one who has no concept of spelling nor grammar even with self-admitted employed software-for-the-challenged.

>You're just jealous Twirted. <

Yea, that's the ticket....I'm jealous of your idiocy, shining in a post you made, taking issue with *my" recreational typo errors, while in the very post you were throwing stones with, was grammatically incorrect.....watch my envy, "Nad.

>Typical comment of those who are too lazy to >try to better themselves.

Not only have I bettered myself, I am also responsible for bettering you..everyone remembers how fast you ran to fix the hilarious mistakes in your qrz page that you claimed also served as your "resume" complete with spelling error and incorrect grammar you are now having a menstrual cycle over......

>Also for a writer for hire would take much >more care with his informal writing, just out of >habit, than what Twirted >has exhibited.

Maybe you would.....when you've been at it as long as I have, you tend to work for a quality publisher that can afford

>Nobody would waste the money to hire you >Twirted.

Make up your mind......if you believed your own lies you never would have asked several times who my employer was. You are beginning to stumble and fall again with doubletalk. Birds of a feather, dogs in a pile.

>For one thing you don't have anything worth >saying to warrant wasting >the paper to print it on.

But as a troll, lid, and detriment to hammie radio you find pleasure responding to such things and attempt to turn threads into that of a personal offtopic nature.........fumble-boy!
Newsgroups are, or should be a place where people can express opinions and/or exchange ideas freely without fear of netcops or lids or net-nannies or censors or you or anyone else who whines and cries about what they don't like to see, hear, or take part in.. As always has been the case, you like to stir up trouble by starting a flame war simply because you don't like somone or something. Hence the reason for all your inflammatory posts.

>Yeah to correct your spelling errors and silly >grammar too.

You're one of the ones that will have to suffer on. AS they say, one can't please all of the people all of the time, and Franky Gilliland asked me to tone down my vernacular long before you came crying about yet another intimate detail of my personal life in a long line of things you howl about. Franky, while a troll, at least had an IQ. You, on the other hand, have no spoils nor redeeming quality.
quality editing and are interested in actual work produced,

>With all the time you waste digging up old >news groups posts,

Time is wasted when it is unproductive. Thanks to the archives and friendly hammie contributors that recognize you as a wart, lid and plague to hammie radio, the old posts I took the actual time to post were very productive. They call attention to the would-be bullies that need told "No" like a little child.
Quite the productive approach. It works well with bullie punks not unlike yourself.

>and the futile efforts at deciphering headers,

No need anymore..I have a personal assistant at MSN AND an automatic bot with a personal email addy.

No need to check headers anymore since you were smacked for forging and threatening..or would you like to go on record and say you never lost an ISP in here for breaking rules? Things would go easier for you if only you would operate within the parameters set forth..in other words..obey the rules, Lelnad.
You must be an outlaw with anarchistic tendencies to disobey and break so many rules that are governed by the FCC rules. SOme people can't help their naturalpredisposition to violence (hence your threat), not getting your way (Holding your breath and threatening the group if I didnt go away you would resume spamming) and terminal harassment (violations of ISPs)..you are a character of unsavory moral and disdain.

>I'll bet you're lucky

I don't believe in luck. I believe hard work will be rewarded and if not, honest work was reward itself.

>to have any time at all to pick up your welfare >check.

No, I have direct deposit to the Libertarian Cause, ACLU, and Jerry Brown for Presidency fund, and on occasion, the "Big Tin-Fo' CB Raydiooo KluBB" that steps on your neck on the freeband.

looking for substance, flash,

>Don't worry.

Never have..you don't have anything that could make me worry..you're a zit on the face of anonymous entertainment.

>You don't have any of that even if you tried.

I *don't * worry about what you say. You have proven, along with your pals of Geo and Hall, that y'all are in the minority and not in touch with anything at all, let alone mainstream opinion or belief.
curb appeal

>You're hanging out on the wrong news group >for that one.

You really have no clue what you refer.
Educating Lelnad has become a chore, as well as a bore. You learn too slow.

>Hummm.. is that why you call yourself >"Twisted". 8-))

Nahh.......I call myself "Twisted" because you made the name so easily recognized. I told you that before but your capacitance for memory, as well as sense, seems to be diminishing at a disturbingly rapid pace..

and a knowledge of the suject

>You mean "subject".

Sure..but at least if I was checking for typos, I would have caught it..you employ self-admitted "idiot software" to catch what your uncouth and uneducated self is incapable of, despite your many self-claims of holding a Masters degree, and STILL can't put a mistake-free post together. You shouldn't throw stones from such a cracked glass house.

>Where's your editor Twited to hold your hand >here?

Making a fool of you by pointing out your childish grade level mistakes while accusing another of something you haven't a clue, maybe.
Who needs an editor in here when I have a dog church that you revel in belonging? This is RECreational and I find the fact that your nose in my azz concerning my intimate personal life and nuances speaks far more for your character than anything you could ever possibly concoct about anyone. Recreational, nad..that's the key..you're wound way too tight for anyones good. Still have the call sign on the beat up van?

at hand, something you have demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt you know nothing of.

>Ending a sentence with "of".

This perfectly illustrates your ignorance of media, print, acceptable English construction, and grammatically correct context. What you learned in ninth grade English when dinosaurs roamed the Earth is no longer pertinent nor recognized and applied. You apparently missed the English lesson
I gave Gilliland schooling him concerning why it is perfectly acceptable to do so today and is done daily in every major newspaper, magazine, and media print. Ask your imaginary professors THAT and allow anyone here to confirm it. Ah, never mind, everyone knows that anyone tweaked enough to make me the topic of their conversation at their WORK, let alone in their real life, is f beyond repair..don't take my opinion for it,,,ask anyone on this group..anyone at all what they think of this extremely sad state of mind you have deteriorated to.

>Humm... Mr. Editor Twirted needs help
>again.

I have plenty of help,,it's how you were recorded on the freeband, Lelnad.
That must really gall you,,,,you, Hall, Geo, always looking to others for validation. How embarrassing for you.

Successful publishers don't have time to mess with such trivial details as a "T" being crossed or spelling typo...it's what an editor does, I've faxed stories, ideas, and news items on everything from restaurant napkins to scraps of paper.

>Nothing to do with CB radio, electronics, >computers, etc. So that's >why that " Sporadic Wave" article was so bad. >You were writing about a subject which you >had no knowledge.

My freeband knowledge has firmly placed yourself, N8, Gilliland, and Hall in the light that y'all have managed to avoid for some time. You were recorded trying to jam me on the freeband last fall. Once again, the editor of a paid subscription periodical felt it was good enough for the intended audience. Apparently, he was correct, as he had quite a successful run. B4 you claim they are no longer publishing, you may perhaps seek just why that may be, as blindly saying they are out of business highlights your ignorance of the subject. In many instances, publishers close shop for bigger and better things, just like big 10-4 cb shops. And you have demonstrated time and time again your lack of knowledge concerning HF. I teach you plenty.

>Figures.

Yes it does, but as usual, the obvious is lost on you.

--
Technology has made those days just about obsolete..most of the time.

>Good writing will never be obsolete as well as >those who have mastered >the art.

A concept that is lost on your comprehension.

> You don't qualify.

Until you write a paycheck check instead of merely collect one, your opinion is duly noted and filed as such.
Regardless, my personal employment

>That's a joke! You employed? <8-() Never >happen.

Stop contradicting yourself. One day you beg for examples of my employers and the next you say I have none. The fact of the matter is you are drowning in double talk and you wear it well..

has nothing to do with your preoccupation of hating cb

>I don't hate CB Twirted.

Sure you do Lelnad..otherwise you wouldn't have made tos of generalizations about cbers and inflammatory collective comments of same. Do you wish to go on record and say you have not said such things generalizng and badmouthing cers in general? You are a liar as well and that is easily shown. How many you need to see to stop your lying? Bucking r Davey Hall status, eh, "Nad? S'ok..you already have it.....:)

>In fact I enjoy answering questions people >have so long as it doesn't >involve running extra legal power,

Has nothing to do with your off topic attacks, rants, and forays into my personal life. Your inner demon child is unhappy and jealous f other lives.

>In your case you can't even answer simple >high school level electronic questions.

ASSuming an awful lot these days, Lelnad. Besides, since when was that a qualification for cb? Adding to that, what does one not having answers to simple electronic questions do for your badly battered and beaten psyche and ego? It soooooothes it, as it's all you have..a little bit of knowledge in a dry arcane subject is all you have in an otherwise abandoned, wasted space of life.

and threatening this
newsgroup with porn flooding spam from N8 and getting BigPond, supernews, giganews, cotse, and a few others pulled for your antics that included forging several of us, among other threats.

>You want to blame me for the other crap, >oh-well.

Gee, Lelnad, do you wish to go on record and say you didn't lose any ISPs for juvenile behavior due to that now infamous lack of self-control? Or that you didn't forge or threaten me? Why would any HALf or semi-decent hammie say or post the shit you do? Tey wouldn't..end of story and it speaks volumes concerning your already reduced and compromised poor self.

>There is nothing you can do to me

Do to you? You are one whacked yo-yo.
YOU are the one that threatened ME, half-brain.

>with your silly posts, letters to ISP etc.,

Letters to ISP?
I have NEVER sent a letter to an ISP. If you are speaking of an email, I can't even remember the last time I needed to contact an ISP. The new sheriff in town seems to be working you like a puppetmaster and the sad thing is, you don't even know who he is let alone how you're being played. Who said hammie radio is all stuffed shirts? <g> >because you still don't know who it is on the >group that is really >messing with you.

Messing with me? Is that what you call when you surmise and dream about my life and make posts offtopic and insultive?? Is that what you call it when you carry me to work with you? Hahhah? MESSING with me? Well, GOOD JOB! Hahha! Man, you really are in the winter depression mode, eh? It happens up there in economically depressed shitty northern towns like yours in the winter quite more often than you would suspect...poor bastage.

>Like I said before Twirted, you can't read, you >can't quote other >posts properly, don't have a clue what "white >space" is used for in writing,

ASSumptions, ASSUmptions......you're in a downward spiral, Lelnad...such mundane guidelines are for amateurs and beginners......I can write a story on your pelt from your furry back and it would still be accepted...hahhahah.

>thus making your crappy posts not worth the >time to read.

On the contrary...readers know no matter how irritating or muddy my posts get, they will always contain the truth. I stand behind what I write..it's why you took to forging me, as there was nothing for you to attack. You were reduced to lying, making things up, and forging in a concerted effort on your behalf for no other reason other than your dislike for what I say. It began with the Sporadic article you seeked out that still has you mentruating on a never ending cycle. That is where you drew first blood..since then, you have been unable to stand up, wipe off the blood and dirt, change your clothes, and get over yourself.

This will go nowhere Leland. You are dealing with a person who suffers from APD and a touch of NPD

>From http://www.geocities.com/ptypes/antisocialpd.html :

And there are plenty more sites out there......

"Failure to conform to social norms with respect to lawful behaviors as indicated by repeatedly performing acts that are grounds for arrest;"

...Which would include disregarding FCC rules, and general rules of society. The "I do what I want, and the hell with everyone else attitude"

"Deceitfulness, as indicated by repeated lying, use of aliases, or conning others for personal profit or pleasure;"

Someone who hides behind an alias? Sound familiar? Someone who is deliberatly deceitful with regard to their personality, and misrepresenting themselves as someone that they are not? Sounds like Twisty......

"Impulsivity or failure to plan ahead;"

Don't know him well enough to comment on this one, but he doesn't strike me as a long term visionary.

"Irritability and aggressiveness, as indicated by repeated physical fights or assaults;"

Well this is the internet, and it has replaced the street as twisty's place to "duke it out" with those who represent what he dispises the most, which would be those who believe in the rule of law, and in an orderly society. It is this group who draws the most vitriol, and aggressive libelous comments from our twisty.

"Reckless disregard for safety of self or others;"

Or their right to equal access. He doesn't care what his activities do to others, as long as he gets pleasure from them.

"Consistent irresponsibility, as indicated by repeated failure to sustain consistent work behavior or honor financial obligations;"

Freelancing for such dime store rags like "Sporatic Waves" does not strike me as something economically viable for someone with drive, ambition, and most importantly, marketable skills. The term "Slacker" fits him well.

"Lack of remorse, as indicated by being indifferent to or rationalizing having hurt, mistreated, or stolen from another:"

Twisty can't show remorse, because, in his mind, he is right and therefore justified in his behavior. He rationalizes his constant ad-hominem attacks as "retribution" to those who wronged him first, and downplays his own "pre-emptive" verbal attacks. By selfishly monopolizing CB against its intended purpose, he is also efffectively "stealing" access away from other people.

>From http://www.geocities.com/ptypes/narcissisticpd.html:

"Has a grandiose sense of self-importance (e.g., exaggerates achievements and talents, expects to be recognized as superior without commensurate achievements);"

Like his supposed "communications skills", which he regards as exceptional, but to those of us who actually have an education, appears fairly sophomoric and ordinary. Or how about that "Sporatic Waves" article? His crowning achievement in glory? Yea, I'd like that on my resume. My glowing compliment to radio bandits.

"Is preoccupied with fantasies of unlimited success, power, brilliance, beauty, or ideal love;"

His "fantasy" of course, is that of the ultimate DXer. A CBer for whom, all others should model themselves after. His accounts of his illegal escapades, add all the evidence necessary. This is, of course, an escape from the real world, who's harsh reminders of consistant failure, take away from the image he attempts to perpetuate for his own self gratification.

"Believes that he or she is "special" and unique and can only be understood by, or should associate with, other special or high-status people (or institutions);"

...Like other illegal radio operators. The rest of us couldn't possibly understand this "specialty", and therefore, are not "worthy".

"Requires excessive admiration;"

Or at least admiration through attention, even if it's primarily negative attention. Which is why we should not bother responding to him. We are only feeding his disorder. Nothing we say will change his mind. In his mind he's right and the world's crazy. By responding to him, it gives him the impression that he's important somehow, which further reenforces his own over inflated ego.

"Has a sense of entitlement, i.e., unreasonable expectations of especially favorable treatment or automatic compliance with his or her expectations;

Everyone should be an illegal freebander. Who are those nasty people at the FCC? Trying to ruin the fun for people who are entitled to run on illegal frequencies whenever they wish, without any accountability. The nerve.

"Is interpersonally exploitive, i.e., takes advantage of others to achieve his or her own ends;"

Like he uses this newsgroup to bolster his own agenda, and to further feed his disorder.

"Lacks empathy: is unwilling to recognize or identify with the feelings and needs of others;"

Like the legitimate licensed users of the freeband, or local neighbors with whom he may be interfering, or to local users who are trying to use the band the way it was intended.

"Is often envious of others or believes that others are envious of him or her;
shows arrogant, haughty behaviors or attitudes."

This one takes the cake. Twisty never brags about his superior writing, communicating, or radio skills, or presupposes to speak for the "silent" majority, does he? He often makes comments that the "Majority" of CBers, hams, the world, etc, are all part of his mythical fanatsy world, where he is king, and logical, responsible thinking, is cast aside, like a half eaten burrito.

Taking all this into account, it is easy to see where the problem is. Twisty is a bona-fide mental case. One who should seek professional help as soon as he can, before he committs a crime against society that isn't as easy to get away with.

Arguing with him is useless, as I have finally come to realize. He will no doubt, "retaliate" with another long list of archived posts of mine and attempt to call me a liar once again, (Which touches on another disorder, OCD) in an attempt to deflect from the real story here. You would be wise to discontinue this exchange as well, as it will not do you any good. You try to tell a nut that he's nuts, and he'll think you're crazy.

Let him babble to those who share his affliction. Those of us not clouded by impared judgement, can shake our heads, and wonder when Darwin will clean up his mess, and go about our business.

I have a Uniden Pro 640 that has a manual anl switch and when I turn it off it sounds just like the Pro 538w. What do I need to check for this problem?

I have noticed that a lot of people are confused on the proper way to set up a radio.
They seem to think that the lowest possible dead-key or (carrier) will allow maximum forward swing from the final transistor.
The rule of thumb to follow is a 2:1 ratio of forward swing versus dead-key, a 10watt dead-key should produce a 20watt forward swing...etc.etc.
The carrier is most important and should be half of the forward swing for the most efficient transmission of the RF signal.
Keep on Truckin.........

Actually, that depends on what type of meter you are using to determine your "swing". If you are using a true peak detecting wattmeter, then your "swing" at 100% modulation should be 4X what your dead key power is. A 4 watt dead key should swing to 16 watts at 100% modulation (Obviously, somewhat more if the limiter is "clipped"). This ratio allows for an undistorted symmetrical reproduction of the modulator's audio signal.
A 2:1 ratio is only about 50% peak modulation, and if the negative trough modulation is at a full 100%, the end result will be a backswing if using an RMS type wattmeter, due to the unbalanced (50% + and 100% -) modulation symmetry.

An RMS reading meter (like a Bird model 43), will show little to no swing when going between 0 and 100% modulation, if the modualtion symmetry is balanced, and you are using a true sine wave as a test signal. Any swing on an RMS meter is an indication of an unbalanced modulation wave (Forward swing has more + modulation, a backward swing has more - modulation).

BS. Swing does nothing but make output and s-meters bob up and down which propagates the cb myth that you are getting a bigger signal. A full carrier, high level modulated to 100% modulation is more efficient.

* the best situation is only when you have 1/4 RF power on dead key, then it is the only situation, when you can have 100% modulation power mic is only making a noise, when radio isn't pretuned for 1/4 RF dead key for example : if max output is 12W PEP, you should have 3W carrier dead key

They seem to think that the lowest possible dead-key or (carrier) will allow maximum forward swing from the final transistor. The rule of thumb to follow is a 2:1 ratio of forward swing versus dead-key, a 10watt dead-key should produce a 20watt forward swing...etc.etc. The carrier is most important and should be half of the forward swing for the most efficient transmission of the RF signal.

>Actually, that depends on what type of meter >you are using to determine your "swing". If you >are using a true peak detecting wattmeter, >then your "swing" at 100% modulation should >be 4X what your dead key power is.

And where did this little bit of cb voodoo come from? The amount of carrier verses swing is dependent upon the meter used? What a load of shit! Gee whiz Davey jr.,,,you really went off the deep end. The (ahem) source would be nice.....And why should the "swing" at 100% modulation be 4 times the carrier only when using a meter?

>A 4 watt dead key should swing to 16 watts at >100% modulation (Obviously, somewhat more >if the limiter is "clipped"). This ratio allows for >an undistorted symmetrical reproduction of the >modulator's audio signal.

Are you claiming 100% modulation can not be achieved with anything but a dead key swinging four times it's carrier?

>A 2:1 ratio is only about 50% peak modulation,

And there are many reasons for operating as such....I am sure you can relate if you indeed worked on a Davemade to bring it within legal specs (whatever that means) like you said you did. Some radios need married to their amps in such a way that maximum performance is only gained at such a ratio without going into and opening the amp.

>and if the negative trough modulation is at a >full 100%, the end result will be a backswing if >using an RMS type wattmeter, due to the >unbalanced (50% + and 100% -) modulation >symmetry.
>An RMS reading meter (like a Bird model 43), >will show little to no swing when going >between 0 and 100% modulation, if the >modualtion symmetry is balanced, and you >are using a true sine wave as a test signal.

Apply it to a real world practical application for cbers..like an antenna.

>Any swing on an RMS meter is an indication >of an unbalanced modulation wave (Forward >swing has more + modulation, a backward >swing has more - modulation).

So how did you balance the Davemade while maintaining it's TOP performance integrity and legal status?

>Dave
>"Sandbagger"
>N3CVJ

Still don't want to comment on that email addy from villanova or why the nice lady there claimed the opposite of what you did concerning your email? That's ok,,,as you maintain and claim of others, you must have done some terrible and unspeakable things to this group to go to such great efforts at concealing and hiding such things.

sounds like it's going down the powerlead to me.
if you're power feed does not come directly from the battery terminals, which it should to aviod such problems, the only other way to cure it would be to run a 'hot-line' filter in the power lead.

Depends on the setup.A mb8719 radio with the npc-linear final mod will swing to ten times a low 2 w carrier.carrier suppression is the key to that mod.Find the mod in yahoo cbtricks group : files

If you see rf power "swing" on an AM RF signal with a proper terminated watt meter in place, the output signal is non-linear.

Non-linear signals are poopy signals... often heard up and down the band and into adjacent consumer electronics.

You're not because the proof doesn't exist Tim. I like to nail Twisted, when he brings up the subject, to supply the proof. He has never provided any. As far as who was using the remailers, well it just as easily could have been you Tim. You and Twist seem to forget the whole idea behind the use of anonymous remailers, and posting services, is to hide the identity of the original poster. Not only can't you prove who did use those services you also can't prove who did not, including yourself. The required proof has to come from the operators of the anonymous services. However to do so would violate the entire purpose those services provide. In other words you aren't going to get any proof one way or the other. Not today. Not tomorrow, or any other day.

So I'll tell people YOU were responsible for the crap being posted.
Lets see you prove otherwise.

suppose the next test is does it still do it without the engine running?
if it doesn't, then it is engine hash (alternator, distributor, etc etc) is there a chance that the radio might have suffered previous reverse volts or high volts?? if so the filtering components on the power input internally could have been damaged.??

Hi there,

I am a newbie to CB radio (any radio really) and have just purchased a cheap digitalk UHF handheld CB that operates around the 477MHz freq here in Australia.

The problem I have is that this little handheld does not have much range at all, something like 1km to 4kms. I am not sure whether it is to do with the rubber ducky antennae or the 500mW power it puts out.

Firstly, I have opened the case up and have noticed that the antennae (wire) is not actually soldered onto the pcb rather it is kept in place by a screw. I am thinking of maybe removing the antennae and soldering a wire from the pcb to a bnc connector (as I have seen on some sites). That way I could attach a better handheld antennae or attach it to a better antennae in my car.

Secondly, I have heard a bit about linear RF amplifiers and having not much knowledge of electronics (apart from building a simple FM transmitter) I was wondering if there were amplifiers out there that could be used with this type of UHF CB? I have seen all the negative posts regarding people using amplifiers however I am only looking for one that could give me the full legal power (ie. 5w) in australia so that my range can be extended a bit. Hopefully it won't cost too much otherwise I might as well buy myself another CB that does 5W.

So if anyone knows anything about what I have said above, please give me some advice. Thank you.

Oh and if anyone knows anything about the digitalk sp3380 UHF CB especially what company makes these and whether they have a web site it would be much appreciated.

Joe

It cant be done dude .... :(

You need a B&C Connection on the hand held for starters becides the aerial

This is a very good tutorial on the basics of AM modulation. The addition of the picture diagrams, help to visualize the concepts. It also highlights how many people can be confused by the different measurement methods, and meter types.

That's certainly within the limits of this particular radio. The final output peak power is normally in the 20 - 25 watt range depending on how "hot" your components are.

You could set your carrier anywhere between 2 watts and 10 watts and you'll still achieve the same peak wattage. But at a 2 watt dead key, it will sound much louder.

The problem is that in order to achieve the maximum swing level at 2 watts, you have to disable the modulation limiter. This allows the positive modulation to rise up to the limits of the radio, which in this case, is around 22 watts. The downside to this is that the negative modulation is also allowed to attempt to "track" the positive modulation, but can never drop below zero. This results is very asymmetrical modulation, and severe cutoff of the negative modulation, which results in audio harmonic generation, which increases bleedover, and RFI problems, not to mention starts to sound fuzzy, and will play havoc with other people's noise blankers, which further distort your audio on their end.

IMHO, it's not the smartest thing to do, unless you like watching those meters move when you talk.

Not necessarily. Total RF power, combines carrier, modulation, and any harmonic and sideband generation.

Depending on which standard you are using to measure the power, and how well (or poorly) your rig is set up, you can see many different power readings between dead key and full modulation.

If your rig is actually making 200% positive modulation (Over 100% negative is impossible), then your peak power will be 32 watts, and the modulation will be unbalanced enough to show up on even an RMS meter as a forward deflection to around 8 watts.

Actually, if you ignore the negative modulation clipping at zero, the sheer magnitude change of the positive peak is impressive. It's a shame that there's not an easy way to keep the negative modulation peak from clipping, while still allowing 200 or 250% positive peaks. It would sound loud, not distorted, and would not bleed.

A "B&C" connector?...

Joe, you may want to try to put the BNC connector in the radio.
At UHF, you need height and a good antenna more then the power.

It's called NPC-RC. Negative Peak Compression-Reduced Carrier.
It's done all the time to sideband radios. The JP36 mod is done to AM radios.

It's always the same idiots,,you, Hall, Lelnad, and N8..all sorry ass

Sure you do.

That would be the entire years worth of checks. Besides, you have too many unanswered questions and lies......you were to froggy when jumping in to Hall's lies and messes he self-created......not one person,,not ONE here believes anything you say, George. And you shouldn't care what we think anyways,,see,,but you do,,it's why you go to such great lengths to comment on certain asects of a post while ignoring others.
How confident am I? Hahhahha..I radiate confidence,,exude it even. As confident as I am that Davey Hall Jr is using a computer hooked up to Yea? And just like Hall, you lie and attack those who hold a differing opinion than your own, and have absolutely nothing to point to to sustain your lies.

The only tirade is going to be about your AOL account which you swore up and down like the liar you are that you didn't have. You use it for harassment and shill posts. Because George and his ilk that leak here were ostracized for their repeated detrimental efforts at harming both

I shouldn't reveal this, but even the ARRL is well aware of these lids better term) in here ever since another was spouting off lies about getting popped. The hammie world is very familiar with the few hammies here that are nothing but slime.

perhaps you can explain why one is a cb amp but the other isn't. But I'm not familiar with the specifics of this particular mod, but I suspect that if it does what you claim, then it is commonly called "Controlled Carrier" modulation. The carrier dead keys low, and as you modulate, the carrier level rides along with the modulation peak so that the modulation symmetry is always balanced. Your dead key might start at 1 or 2 watts, but as your peak modulation reaches, say 20 watts, the carrier is offset to what would normally be 5 watts, which then prevents the negative modulation trough, from clipping at zero. So while you do obtain a certain amount of "swing", and in some cases (like in portable units, like a WT radio shack made about 20+ years ago) a reduction in current draw, and heat dissipation, you don't gain much over just leaving the carrier set at 5 watts. That's why this never really caught on in either ham or CB circles. And it seems CBer's prefer the ease of the simple capacitor/resistor "swing mod", which does nothing to prevent negative clipping, but does give a nice 200% positive peak.

I did something like this to a TRC-458 in the early 80's. It worked fairly well, in that it did "swing", and gave the audio a little more "punch", but it didn't do for me, what I expected.

I still say, if you like reducting carrier, try SSB. There's no carrier there....

FM doesn't have any better (or worse) modulation than AM. However, it does have certain advantages, like less noise on the channel. I certainly prefer FM to SSB... SSB has the very anoying feature of being very frequency sensitive... where AM and FM are nowhere near as bad.

* not always, because it's more easy to sell rig with 4W carrier and low modulation percentage, than a well done one with 3W carrier and good modulation. Ordinary users are not clever at it and they buy 4W.
you have only output power written on the package, never modulation percentage (if true)

Ok, so theoretically if I found a linear RF amplifier that could take 500mW (through BNC) and output 5W then I could hook up an antennae on my car that could handle the 5W (which I think most UHF CB antennae's in Australia can) then I would be transmitting with the power of a regular CB instead of my little handheld?

Ok, then does anyone know where I can find such an amplifier? I have had a look and most amplifiers I have seen on web sites are for 3-30MHz (does it make a difference?). Is it possible to get a small amplifier that can be powered by 12VDC that can take 500mW and output 5W? I have built from simple kits b4 so I don't mind if it is a kit.

Thanks again for the feedback guys. =)

It's a transistor. It has three elements (pins).
Base, collector and emitter like grid, cathode and anode.

PNP transistors are a freak of nature. <;

Too wide???

The band width requirement is wider,SO, i have seen some stations clipping so bad they took out the whole band, besides what is band width, there is pleanty to go around, if not we can make up more.

(..and what about the weak signal work. I love pulling in weak stations out or the floor from the south Jersey shore or accross the sound in Connecticut) Go SSB if you need to pull out other weaker stations. I too like different modes AM for one, but I also LIKE FM. Audio quality is the same as AM, but better with less power .

I will make it real simple for you they are both what they are Illegal CB amps."If" a ham was to take one and modify it to at least meet the FCC 's specs regarding amatuer amps then a ham is allowed to modify and use one. But in its current fashion it is not supposed to be sold to anyone, ham's included. And if it was by some stroke of stupidity to be an export then why is it being sold in the usa?

Can you freaks ever get your stories straight you accuse everyone of the same thing. you accuse aaron of being dwight . I really want to hear you admit your wrong, just one time.

Of course he is Tim, he changed his screen nics from there, just like he does from Comcast. Look how quickly he accuses others from this group that didn't even know his call sign for almost a month after that post, when Dick McCollum exposed him.

413. I use the bounce back on mine but I'll tell ya, there's a guy up here that runs 2 Baby 5 antennas as 2 hots on his truck. He kicks some a$$ with that setup. He took the 16-pill class up here with that. He usually runs that 16 and none of the other guys with 16's can get him and very few with 24's can either. Makes you wonder. Now he won't show anybody what he did, but I know this, his back antenna is completely shut down. More so than a typical bounce back.
I use a cap on my back antenna, I like that a lot better than just grounding.

I don't change any screen nics from comcast it is all done via outlook express stupid you just change your name. It just pisses you off so bad that you think I need to post from aol, anything I have to say Landdick is said from this account. Again your as wrong as you are queer, Dick Mcccollum didnt expose anything about me stupid fuqq, I emailed Phil Covington he was the one who started with the calling me george after he said he was going to tell everyone who aaron was if we emailed him, he turned out to be as impotent as the rest of you. You have been crying this same old tune that I have an aol account, I mean is that your proof a post from someone who used the name wa3moj@aol.com? Provide some proof like the time I caught you using the name Frenchy from google and AOL, for all I know your the one who made up wa3moj@aol.com because it certianly isn't me, but you know that, it was either you or one of your freaks.

Hi all....

This is a NO BS NO SCAM DEAL....AND IT IS FOR HAMS ONLY!

My company is 20 years old and we sell computer parts and Microsoft products at wholesale to re-sellers. There is an even chance you have a product from Amax
if you patronize your local computer shop.

I am a salesman for Amax and I am offering to sell either built systems or components to hams at the price we sell them in quantity 50 lots to resellers.
This is for real, and so am I.
I am offering this not to make money but as a way to repay the ham community for the TONS
of help I have gotten since I got in this hobby.

Go to www.amax.com and check out the stuff there....

Then call me in the Chicago office at 888-810-2629. I am at extension 106.

Our Illinois location has some pricing at http://people.ce.mediaone.net/amaxil but it is kinda old pricing. You can call me for deals, but an email to Doug_Adair@amax.com is best.

A few phrases I hear when tuning around on CB, that I don't remember many years ago!

"I hear'd that I did" (Not heard...but hear'd)

"Don't you know" (This is added onto the end of a transmission......like: "yeah....you are really booming in over here......don't you know")

"10-Fo" (Several variations of this......10-4......4-10........Fo-Roger.......Roger-D.......Usually used just before "I hear'd that")

"Thats for sure" (Another usless phrase that you hear quite often)

"Check....check" (Used to kind of say.....ok......or yes, maybe at the very end of a conversation, instead of just using normal language and saying........"ok....talk to you later, or bye")

Joe,

As you can see, some of us Yanks have "Startrek minds" - they run warp 1 to 9 ;) ... Scott is giving you good information. Height is important at these frequencies; however I have personal experience with some alternate antennas.

I have a 440 MHz HT. Running low power, it puts out around 1.5 watts; on high power with batteries, it is around 3.5 watts (external 12 volts yields 5 watts). With the original rubber ducky, my signal was barely readable into a repeater 16 kilometers away (I was at the veterinarian's office). On high power, there was still a little noise on the signal, but not much. I switched to a commercial flexible antenna. The original was perhaps 15 cm in length; the new antenna was around 36 cm high, yet still highly flexible. With the new antenna, there was virtually no noise on low power from the vet's office to the repeater. On high power, I could hit the same repeater from 30 kilometers away. I eventually replaced that one (actually, I lost the darn thing whilst serving jury duty) with an antenna with over 6 dBi gain which was close to 1 meter in length. Now the vet's office yields full quieting on low power and I have talked to other folks using a repeater some 160 kilometers distant (from my HT to the repeater!). The key in that case is that I was on the highest floor of a building over 20 stories high atop a hill 160 meters high. All of that said, if I were to attempt simplex communications with a similar handheld, we'd be lucky to get 9 kilometers over flat land due to line-of-site limitations of the frequency. Higher power will yield greater range due to scattering effects. Consider if both of us had small flashlights. Over flat ground, we could no longer see each other's flashlight at night if we were more than perhaps 6 kilometers away. Now replace those flashlights with a 1,000,000 candle power searchlight. Aim the searchlight towards the sky, and we'd see each other's beams for many tens of kilometers away. Similarly, at UHF, 50 watts or so can yield 150 to 300 kilometers consistent communications 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Tropospheric enhancements can yield distances well into the thousands of kilometers. For what you are suggesting, a decent antenna mag mounted on your vehicle will probably net you 6 to 9 kilometers even running only 500 milliwatts. For more distance, you need more height more than anything else. Going from .5 watt to 5 watt might net you an extra kilometer or two at most; more height will add to that considerably.

You might try a 440 MHZ amateur radio amplifier. It may have enough coverage to cover the 477 or whatever frequency you are using. Or if not, you may just have to tweak it a little.

Lol just kidding there..... I tuned into the net last night for the first time and listened for an hour or so. Absolutely hillarious, you had this one guy jamming the net with CW by literally pounding on the morse keyer. These other guys were saying "this isn't CB turn your microphone gain down now" And then this other guy came on and "nicely" asked for them to turn down the power.

I recently acquired a second hand pair of Audiovox FRS, model FR-560FM for my kids. However I don't have an owner's manual, and I am finding them rather difficult to understand. We have pressed most of the buttons, singularly and in combination, and have got it to do some things, but have trouble getting it to do it more than once since we really don't know what button(s) we pushed to get it to perform.

Does anyone have an owner's manual for this model? If you could xerox it for me I would be more than happy to cover your expenses. Please write to me at jrb5000@email.com

Thanks.

set up that way.

For what it's worth, Win95 doesn't run DOS programs properly.
You probably want to locate a copy of MS-DOS 5.0
The most stable one in the bunch.

screw up the CB band, I don't mind a over modulated signal every now and

Because they are smarter, because they respect other users in other parts of the rf spectrum and do not transmit spurious signals that will be heard several bands away. Because they realize that 300% modulation is not better than 100% modulation unless you want to sound like shit. That this does not make you transmit further just radiate harmonics and shit on other bands. Because they can have a conversation on the air without using words like: roger, mud duck, or good buddy. This list can go on and on. Any Questions?

They certainly don't set it up like so many cbs with swing mods.
They use full carrier with class c finals with high level modulation. "Swang" is only popular with cbers because it makes them think they have a "big radio".

Still hanging in there. I still have to swat at an occasional gnat or two, but I much prefer these "tech" topics. It was discussions like these where I learned (and unlearned) alot of information about radio.

I do find it a bit amusing that many people play around with all sorts of strange "mods" to improve an AM signal. Many feel like they've discovered something new. The thing is, it's all been tried by both hams and commercial radio stations years ago. There have been many discussions and almost as many articles written covering the subject of "Super modulation", and other controlled carrier schemes. While there are some advantages to these methods, most are just "gimmicks". I guess it all depends on whether you're more interested in truly getting out better, or are just wishing to make a "statement".

The best range is still to be had on SSB. The narrower bandwidth, and having all power in one sideband, with no carrier "baggage", makes for a fairly efficient voice transmission.

Well..... Yes and No. I've found, with proper pre and de-emphasis curves, that an FM signal will sound better, fidelity wise, than an AM signal, within the confines of the same bandwidth.
Other advantages are that you don't have to worry about modulation "headroom" when setting up your transmitter or amplifier. Full carrier power is all you have to worry about. Class "C" amplifiers are perfectly fine. It's much more "plug and play" than setting up a really good sounding AM station.

The downside to FM though, is weak signal. Due to the somewhat wider bandwidth, and the inherent design of an FM receiver, there is much more noise, and really weak signals are harder to copy, than similar signals on AM. But the difference between a signal that's "in the mud" and one that's full quieting, is only about 6 db or so. With FM, without looking at the meter, you could not tell the difference between someone who was a steady "S7" on the meter, and one who's +30 over S9, as they would sound essentially the same.

FM is a great "local" mode, where most of the signals are at least S5. It has great atmospheric noise immunity, great fidelity, and is fairly easy to set up.
Just remember to keep the screwdriver techs away from the deviation pot.

SSB is still the hands down winner for weak signal voice DX.

Terrorism paranoia aside, RS, has been heading down this path since they first found out that they could make a lot more money peddling computers and flashy consumer electronics. When they really jumped into the cell-phone market, that was the final nail in the coffin. They have forsaken their place as a store for "techies" and have embraced the alluring call of consumerism, with all its vapidity and superficiality.

For a while now, their parts and accessories have shrunk from what used to take up almost half the store in the early 70's, to a mere corner of the back section. While they tried to make a bit of a comeback by offering ham radios, that proved not to be as big as hoped.

But you really can't blame the RS management team. They have to be ready to serve a market that will bring them profit. They owe their shareholders that much. The market for electronic parts and specialty radio items is just not that great. The stuff that RS carries now, (Consumer audio/video items, computers, phones, and toys) are what sells in most households.

I know, as a radio hobbyist, that I find this departure from experimenting and building projects, and the general decline in radio hobbies in general to be alarming, and depressing at the same time. But I have to resign myself to the fact that technology is constantly evolving. The experimenting is still being done, it's just now behind a keyboard, instead of with a soldering iron and a bag of parts.

I guess I know how some of the really old timers felt when tubes went the way of the dinosaur, and printed circuits became all the rage...

I think this is "CBSpeak" for a passive reflector. And like any reflector applied to an originally omnidirectional antenna, it will intensify the signal in the direction that it is pointed, but will drop it in the opposite direction. You have made, essentially, a beam. Why someone would deliberately want a directional pattern in a mobile, is a concept that escapes me, (occasional "keydowns" aside). Driving around with this setup will cause many more dropouts and mobile flutter, as the vehicle is moving.

He might be saying that. I spoke with the folks down there yesterday after posting here, then the jerks to the west got busy.

I don't keep anything more expensive then a PC-122 in the vehicle.
I'm still looking for a few Expo "N" kits. I haven't looked very hard.
You are on .xx00 so I'd have to rip up a clarifier to get there. I like them locked. I hate chasing someone after I've tuned them once. If I can understand a station without clarifying, I will. It doesn't bother me if they sound like they're sucking helium or nitrous.

It sure would be a major bummer and would make things harder for us who live in small towns with no other electronics parts stores for miles and miles if they close down and stop carrying the small parts that they do cary. I, for one, sure hope they don't go under and hope they will still carry those parts.

Another of your problems. You ought to be concerned with "nailing" a woman instead of me, you poor bastard.

>when he brings up the subject, to supply the >proof. He has never

You provided it. You made a few threats, and lost your posting access through several servers..supernews, bigpond, cotse, giganews,..you get tossed left and right..you're hopelessly incorrigible. Wanna see them again?

>As far as who was using the remailers, well it >just as easily could

I don't forget anything, that's why I still ahve all your threats and loss of self control posts.

>the whole idea behind the use of anonymous >remailers, and posting

Except with certain services when you violate certain rules of their TOS, then plenty of info is released to the one who filed a complaint..cotse did just this when you abused their service. I also received several emailers from sys-admins along with the offending posts you have made in he past when they clipped your wings.

>Not only can't you prove who did use those >services you also can't

Coming from a lying, malicious, drunk who has no self-control and one who was reduced to cowardly threats, telling me I was a "dead fish", then relating your preference for shooting me in the head...well, shux,

Lelnad, trying to accuse Tim and redundantly yelling "nanananeenoono you can't prove it, you can't prove it", is tantamount to..well, let's just say once again your views are shared only by yourself..perhaps one other.

>The required proof has to come from the >operators of the anonymous services.

I can dig it. Like the ones thanking me for pointing out your violations and telling me action was taken against you. Your access suddenly being yanked at those times.....is not circumstantial nor coincidental....if you wish to claim otherwise....PROVE it <g>>.

>However to do so would violate the entire >purpose those services provide.

Violate a "purpose"? Come, come, Lelnad. None of the services you used are totally anonymous..you're not that bright. These services even claimas much right there in black and white....wouldn't have expected you to read the rules when you signed up as you casually and callously disregard rules as you see fit.

>In other words you aren't going to get any >proof one way or the other.
>Not today. Not tomorrow, or any other day.

You were drunk when you made the threats to me,,you were probably drunk when you threatened the group with porn spam from N8.,
The proof DID come form your lost accesses,I still have several emals alerting me to such, Bigpond, Supernews, and COtse are just a few you were spanked by for breaking the law..

Oh, I can prove you are just about the worst hammie radio has to offer:
THE RADIO AMATEUR IS:
CONSIDERATE...never knowingly operates is such a way as to lessen the pleasure of others.
LOYAL...offers loyalty, encouragement and support to other amateurs, local clubs, and the American Radio Relay League, throught which Amateur Radio in the United Stated is represented nationally and internationally.
PROGRESSIVE...with knowledge abreast of science, a well-built and efficient station and operation above reproach. FRIENDLY...slow and patient operation when requested; friendly advice and counsel to the beginner; kindly assistance, cooperation and consideration for the interests of others. These are the hallmarks of the amateur spirit.
BALANCED...radio is an avocation, never interfering with duties owed to family, job, school or community.

PATRIOTIC...station and skill always ready for service to country and community.
The original Amateur's Code was written by Paul M Segal, W9EEA in 1928.

Where do your threats of violence, murder, and porn spamming the group come into play? How about all your off-topic posts? Insults? Admissions of pleasure when one who holds a view you disagree with has a dilemma caused by you? Admitted pleasure "messing" with internet strangers? Perhaps a neat compilation of your shenanigans and more colorful posts sent to the ARRL will assist them in placing into perspective the cancerous lesions such as yourself that are responsible for eating away at their very foundation and limited (because of lids like you) successes. Selectively practicing only what you feel is relevant doesn't cut the mustard, especially when you use the ARRL in your sig. You are now disgracing the ARRL as well as hammie radio in general. I feel they should be made aware. Don't fret, the email will come from a legitimate hammie, one who is a true member of the ARRL in mind, spirit, practice and all aspects of life, one who treats those as he wishes to be treated, whose opinion is respected by many..maybe a compilation of you and Hall's bullshit....hey...they were realyinterested in these hammies using their name to lie about cbers being poped,, betcha a neat little compilation wil do wonders for you....But why should you worry? After all, the ARRL will listen to you howl about "no proof",.....won't they?

A few phrases I hear when tuning around on CB, that I don't remember many years ago!
"I hear'd that I did" (Not heard...but hear'd) "Don't you know" (This is added onto the end of a transmission......like:
"yeah....you are really booming in over here......don't you know")
"10-Fo" (Several variations of this......10-4......4-10.....Fo-Roger.....Roger-D.....Usually used just before "I hear'd that")
"Thats for sure" (Another usless phrase that you hear quite often)
"Check....check" (Used to kind of say.....ok.....or yes, maybe at the very end of a conversation, instead of just using normal language and saying....."ok....talk to you later, or bye")

Forget about RS. They're going down.
The plans for the company now include:
--- --- --- --- --- --- --- ---

Egad, but you get around.

>CB product line will be reduced to 10 items or >less. There won't be a >base station type CB radio available from RS >after what they have in stock now is sold.

Now you wouldn't care to hazard a wild-azzed guess and toss out a name of a base you think RS still has in it's "inventory" would ya'? RS haven't had bases here in the south for years..ditto for all places I've been in the north over the last few years..Where are you that RS still have base cb's?

>No base antennas or accessories either.

Most stores don't have any now.

>No new CB products will appear with the >Radio Shack brand name after 09/01/03.

No "new" CB products have appeared there anyway in some time.

>CB antennas with RS brand will disappear >when what they have >warehoused is gone.

Tandy confirmed this? There was nothing in their financial report to stockholders, and they would be tipped just before the public was made aware. Are you a stockholder?

>It looks like they will sell a couple models of >Cobra CB.

Again, nothing from the chairman and not a word to the stockholders about any of this. Tandy has always been in direct competition with Cobra and others.....as a publicly shared company this would require a vote which has not occurred nor been put to referendum.

Not true. There is no such thing as RS "getting stuck" with a a glut of anything......worse case scenario they would donate the lot, or even destroy them then write them off, effectively recouping any monetary loss.

>RS is still undecided on what they're going to >carry. Rumors are >evenly divided between Uniden (who makes >some of RS current products)

Umm.can you name a single cb manufacturer from Europe? How about a company name? If anything, it would be an importer/exporter, but it sure as heck ain't no manufacturer.

>Comments Welcome, Flamers and Trolls will >be ignored. __

Where did you get your information?
I feel your non-coincidental disclaimer merely a way of ignoring pertinent questions....this technique is poorly executed in this forum by a few hammie lids looking for trouble... calling any opposing views or call one who disagrees with them "flamers".....it is the only escape route from their lies that they can plausibly pass off to those who know no better.

Ok...then riddle me this.....what is your interpretation or version of these "specs"?

>then a ham is allowed to modify and use one.

But a trade is ok,,,right? N3CVJ received his Davemade in a trade (I mean, he probably didn't ((like the Phelps Stationmaster he DID/DIDN'T have <g>)) but he said he did) so this is a perfect and legitimate and legal alternative means of attaining one so that,,,er,,,the hammie may operate on it so as to make the all-around illegal amp,,legal , correct?

Claiming the law look equally at "trading" for the amp or getting it for free is merely another way of N3CVJ trying to skirt the law he is always accusing others of disregarding and skirting.

A few phrases I hear when tuning around on CB, that I don't remember many years ago!
"I hear'd that I did" (Not heard...but hear'd) "Don't you know" (This is added onto the end of a transmission......like:
"yeah....you are really booming in over here......don't you know")
"10-Fo" (Several variations of this......10-4......4-10........Fo-Roger.......Roger-D.......Usually used just before "I hear'd that")
"Thats for sure" (Another usless phrase that you hear quite often)
"Check....check" (Used to kind of say.....ok......or yes, maybe at the very end of a conversation, instead of just using normal language and saying........"ok....talk to you later, or bye")

Hi all....

This is a NO BS NO SCAM DEAL....AND IT IS FOR HAMS ONLY!

My company is 20 years old and we sell computer parts and Microsoft products at wholesale to re-sellers. There is an even chance you have a product from Amax if you patronize your local computer shop.

I am a salesman for Amax and I am offering to sell either built systems or components to hams at the price we sell them in quantity 50 lots to resellers.
This is for real, and so am I.
I am offering this not to make money but as a way to repay the ham community for
the TONS
of help I have gotten since I got in this hobby.

Go to www.amax.com and check out the stuff there....

Then call me in the Chicago office at 888-810-2629. I am at extension 106.

Our Illinois location has some pricing at http://people.ce.mediaone.net/amaxil
but it is kinda old pricing. You can call me for deals, but an email
to Doug_Adair@amax.com is best.

We vacationed in Galveston one year.
We went fishing at a park there and got into a mess of flounder . I think it was called Wolf park . Is it still there ?
We also went to the Madigras on the Strand and had a blast .
We talked to a couple of Guy's in Galveston . Bullrider, No.1 , weedsmoker, and a couple of others .
We will be back there in Feb. and hopefully We don't get lost again and end up in the projects there .
And for all reading this , I want You to know , Galveston is way cool.

Tell me, how does one get "ran" off of a newsgroup? Especially when the ones who proport to do the "ranning" are also proponents of breaking federal law?

Like Voob or not, what he preached was essentially correct, even though many disagreed with what he said. Certainly, sticking up for the rule of law is, in no way, a TOS violation on any planet that I've been to recently. So either he left on his own accord, or he left due to other circumstances. Certainly not because a bunch of lawbreakers called him nasty names.....

Many non-technical CBer's have a problem with technical terminology, and can relate better to standard terms, that put technology in easier to understand language.

It's easier for Joe Truckstop to explain how the "doohickie"
"contraption" works by using common terminology like "It bounces the signal forward", rather then explaining it it true radio terms.

I enjoy having a fan club. The more he brings my name up, the more I know that he's threatened, in some way, by what I say. A more mature adult would simply not bother with those they have a problem with. I really hope he takes my advice and seeks out a mental health professional soon, before he hurts someone, or himself. When the sunspots end, and he's forced to only talk to the locals, it could become depressing for him.....

What the fuqq does that mean it can be imported for export? the amp was made in the USA, it is illegal to produce that amp in the usa, It is also illegal to sell that amp outside the usa. How do you import something that was made in the usa if you are in the usa? You also see no radios etc saying for export only that are made in the usa they are illegal as well.

Yep, that's twisty. Searching for the internet equivilent of "black helicopters". He really doesn't have any idea what most of the information contained within the headers really means. He just fixates on one or two areas, and thinks if they match, he's on to something. Heck, he accuses everyone who disagrees with him of being a forge of one or two other individuals. He fancies himself as some sort of "worldly" individual, who knows people and speaks for "the majority. Yet the idea that someone would have the unmitigated gall to disagree with him, is unthinkable in his mind, which is why he truly believes that everyone on "the otherside" is really one person with multiple accounts.

Twisty is a true sociopath, with narcissitic tendancies as well. You would do wise to ignore him, since engaging him in debate, is an exercise in futility. He constantly obfuscates meanings, focusses on nuances, has difficulting reading for content, and frequenty draws the wrong conclusions from statements, that normal people have no trouble with, and then accuses you of lying, when you correct his misinterpretations. He will find a way to change the topic of the debate from his problems (and they are many) to something that he was "emailed" (by some phantom "friends" of his) that you might have done which is totally unrelated to the subject at hand. He's a Google maniac, He'll sift through past posts and run cross checks of all the headers until he sees something that might be of interest. The fact that someone has this much disposable time, or that much obsessive desire, are clues in itself, that he's "just not right".
His only strategy is to then put his opponent on the defensive, since he cannot defend himself, as his philosophy and actions are undefendable, as they violate the rules of society and in most cases, federal law.

Yet he calls me a liar. That's the biggest hoot!

Have you ever heard of mail order? Or online ordering? Since you obviously have an internet connection, search around for suppliers of electronic components. You'll find it a lot cheaper than RS, also.

Because they are smarter, because they respect other users in other parts of the rf spectrum and do not transmit spurious signals that will be heard several bands away. Because they realize that 300% modulation is not better than 100% modulation unless you want to sound like shit. That this does not make you transmit further just radiate harmonics and shit on other bands. Because they can have a conversation on the air without using words like: roger, mud duck, or good buddy. This list can go on and on. Any Questions?

pretty bad but if they run them one behind the other then i think the Exactly.

Yet another arena you appparently fear me in.

Sure it does...six elements on a beam will get out better than two elements on the same beam. Leave this stuff to those who have an inkling before you embarrass yourself again.

>they all have a driven element and a >reflector.

Depends what you refer to as a reflector.
What do you call a reflector from two cophased antenna systems?

>Why don't any of the beam manufacturers use >this silly name?

Why don't you write them and post your response here if you don't know.

This is a cb discussion forum,

>No shit, yet you have turned it into your own >personal war with Dave Hall.

You're lying almost as bad as he is..What I can't understand is the blood extent you have went in attempting to defend him..not unlike Lelnad KC8LDO's rabid defense of N8 in many similar fashions. Dave told several lies and I merely was the on that pointed them out causing him to go ballistic, fancying himself a matchbook psychological aide...I merely questioned him on cb related posts he had made,,he was the one that became immediately hostile, calling names, and posting myriads of off-topic items....he attacked ME personally for taking issue with his CLAIMS..see the difference? David, and apparently you, can not separate an issue from a person nor are you capably comfortable discussing an issue with a stranger, hence your problems and dilemmas with identities of cbers. It's akin to walking in the park..MOST can have a pleasant conversation with a stranger,,you two have demonstrated a handicap in this area.,,all these problems are merely symptoms of your major malfunction: Neither of you can communicate effectively. As luck would have it, the hilarity of the irony is deathly comedic.

I couldn't give a tinkers damn if you know what ISP I'm using, or what name!!!!

Then why change it to give a false illusion you're separate people?
Mighty hostile, aren't you?

Who said you did? I merely am fostering the good will set forth by KC8LDO and N3CVJ..this was THEIR claim, not mine..I was just checking it out.

Didn't have to search it out,,it's right there staring at you.

>LOL.....The IP cops.

I dunno what you'd call them..I call them lids.

Pointing such things out "bugs" you?
You acting like two people and someone noticing it "bugs" you?
You shouldn't be on usenet with such tender feelings. Your feelings may get hurt next.

>The Great "Little Napoleon Syndrome"!

Is that what you refer to one who instantly recognizes your "Sybil" syndrome?

Yup,,those lies you were caught in sure threatened me. You sure showed me.

I don't have a problem with YOU, David...but thank you for once again illustrating that you think in such terms. It's what you say that is at issue here, David.
Now if you want such pathological behavior to be a topic, I am certain there is a forum for such.

professional soon,

It would be much easier to come to grips with your pathological self and move on from such screw ups than to continually molify and blame another for your handicaps.

It doesn't get depressing here, Davey, jr, ever.....this is the land of the sunshine...another beautiful day in Tampa Bay..absolute paradise...67 degrees.......snook and trout on the move, yankee tourists filling my pocket, and great friends on the water and on the air on my big CB. You do still boat, don't you Davey jr.? Did you ever...or were those headers also inserted unbeknownst to you (ROAR) hahahahhahah!

It may have been correct for you, but presenting yourself as the judge as what is correct and incorrect after your behavior is paramount to the Simpsons.
